Celebrating Mozart's 250th Birthday

Boston-based duo 2, with Peter H. Bloom, flute, and Mary Jane Rupert, harp, will perform "Intimate Mozart," a flute and harp concert celebrating Mozart's 250th birthday, on Sunday, Sept. 24, at 3 p.m., at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Admission is free; donations are welcome. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

Acclaimed as a concert pianist and harpist, Rupert has given solo recitals from Carnegie Hall to Beijing Concert Hall, and has appeared with symphony orchestras and chamber ensembles throughout the United States. She can be heard on CDs from North Star and Harmony Hill. She's on the faculties of Wellesley College, Tufts University, Boston College and MIT. Rupert earned a bachelor of music degree in piano from Oberlin College, and holds master's degrees in piano and harp, and a doctor of music degree in piano performance and music literature from Indiana University.

Bloom has given solo recitals from Boston's Jordan Hall to Beverly Hills, tours nationally with chamber groups and jazz ensembles and appears on more than 25 CDs. He is a winner of the American Musicological Society's Noah Greenberg Award for his work in 19th century American music. Bloom is a historical instrument consultant to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, has served on the faculties of New England Conservatory and Regis College, and is a board member of the James Pappoutsakis Flute Competition. He holds a master's degree in music in flute performance with distinction from the New England Conservatory.

IT'S HAPPENING

ASP 2007 to start!

Gearing up for its 20th trip, Cohasset ASP will host an informational meeting Sunday, Sept. 17, at 8 p.m., at Second Congregational Church, next to Town Hall. There will be a slide presentation from this past summer's trip, followed by information for the 2007 trip, which will take place June 23 through July 1. Necessary registration forms will also be distributed. Deadline for registration is Oct. 1. Organizers would like to stress that enrollment will be more carefully monitored this year. Forms and information will be available online at cohassetasp.org beginning Sept. 18.

Adults are also needed to go on this trip.

The grand opening of the Pumpkin Patch on North Main Street, sponsored by Cohasset ASP, will be Saturday, Oct. 7.

A Midnight Blue Dance will take place Friday, Sept. 15, from 7 to 10 p.m., at the Teen Center. The dance is for all sixth- through eighth-graders. There will be a charge at the door of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold.

5-year reunion

Calling all class members of CHS Class of 2001! The CHS Class of 2001 reunion will be held on Friday, Nov. 24th (day after Thanksgiving), 7:30-11:30 pm at the American Legion in downtown Cohasset. For more information, Please email Kelly Devine at classof2001chs@hotmail.com, or call 781-640-1542.

Benefit auction Saturday

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its benefit auction, A Backward Glance, on Saturday, Sept. 16, at 6:30 p.m. at Cohasset Golf Club. The admission price of $85 per person includes two beverages. The auctioneer for the evening is Stuart Whitehurst of Skinner, Inc.

Co-chairs for the event are Eleanor Bleakie, Nancy Garrison and Mary Hartshorne.

The auction will be preceded by a gourmet cocktail and buffet reception. It will benefit the Cohasset Historical Society, which operates three unique historic properties in Cohasset. The Society's mission is to preserve the history of Cohasset through acquisitions, research and program events.

A variety of family treasures have been donated to the auction. Items include Hitchcock chairs, an oriental rug, Japanese china, silverware, paintings, furniture, memorabilia and collectibles. Items will be on display at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., from Wednesday, Sept. 6 through Friday, Sept. 15. Items may be viewed on the society website, cohassethistoricalsociety.org. For further information, call 781-383-1434.

Maritime Institute to host Blues by the Bay

The Cohasset Maritime Institute will host its Indian summer gala and fundraiser. Blues by the Bay on Friday, Sept. 15, at 7 p.m. in the Light House Keepers residence. Three local jazz and blues groups will 'rock the boat' while guests enjoy hors d'oeuvres, drinks and dancing. CMI is hoping to replenish its reserves, which were depleted with the acquisition of two new sliding seat fours in this past spring.

The Institute runs a variety of adult and youth rowing programs from its Boathouse at 40 Parker Ave., Cohasset. Tickets for Blues by the Bay are $50 per person, $30 of which is tax deductible. Tickets are available at Buttonwood Books and by calling Susan Galligan, 781-383-0765 or Lisa Hewitt Dick, 781-383-0204. For more information visit www.rowcmi.com.

Newcomers gatherings

All new and prospective members, as well as current members, are invited to New Member Gatherings for the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club to get to know some new faces in the community and to learn more about the club. Friends and children are welcome to attend. SCNC will host one coffee in September, followed by a wine and cheese event, and a couple of coffees in October, all of which are currently scheduled for the following dates:

Sept. 19, coffee at 7 p.m., at Starbucks on Route 3A in Cohasset.

Oct. 7, wine and cheese event at 4 p.m. Register with Kelly at k-dlee@hotmail.com or call 545-0866.

Oct. 13, coffee at 10 a.m. Register with Kelly.

For more information, including location for the Oct. 7 and Oct. 13 events, contact Kelly. Also, check out the Web site at scnewcomers.com. Many activities are scheduled during the year.

Art classes to start

Fees range from $25-350. Students may register online at www.ssac.org or by phone 781-383-2787. South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road.

Jewelry system to be demonstrated at King Jewelers

Pandora, an innovative concept in jewelry, will be presented at King Jewelers on Friday, Sept. 22, from 3 to 5 p.m. Pandora representative Sally McIntosh will show how to create customized jewelry using the patented system and the hundreds of gold, silver and precious stone beads handcrafted by Danish craftsmen.

"We are thrilled to bring Pandora to Cohasset, because this amazing jewelry system allows people to create beautiful jewelry that can be very symbolic for the wearer," said Valerie King, treasurer of King Jewelers. She recounted the story of an ill woman whose friends recently bought her a bracelet and beads representing memories they had shared together. "The woman was so touched by this gift from her friends that she came into the store to show me." King also mentioned that another woman purchased a bracelet for her college-bound daughter, and the mother's plan was to send a bead every so often to let the daughter know she was in her mother's thoughts.

King noted that the allure of Pandora is the ease of the patented system that allows people to modify and add to their jewelry, and the huge selection of beads and charms to choose from. "Many beads are purely aesthetic, and many others are meaningful, representing events, holidays and beloved items," she said.

King Jewelers is at 812 CJC Highway, Route 3A. For more information, call King Jewelers at 781-383-1755.

Free screenings and demonstrations. Healthy snacks and beverages served. No reservations required.

DAR celebrates Constitution Week

The national celebration of Constitution Week begins Sunday, Sept. 17. The week-long commemoration of America's most important document is one of the country's least known official observances. The Constitution stands as a testament to the tenacity of Americans throughout history to maintain their liberties and freedom, and to ensure those unalienable rights to every American.

The tradition of celebrating the Constitution was started many years ago by the Daughters of the American Revolution. In 1955, the Daughters petitioned Congress to set aside Sept. 17 through 23 annually to be dedicated for the observance of Constitution Week. The resolution was later adopted by the U.S. Congress and signed into Public Law #915 on Aug. 2, 1956, by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. The aims of the celebration are to: emphasize citizens' responsibilities for protecting and defending the Constitution, preserving it for posterity; inform the people that the Constitution is the basis for America's great heritage and the foundation for our way of life; and encourage the study of the historical events that led to the framing of the Constitution in September 1787.

The United States of America functions as a Republic under the Constitution, which is the oldest document still in active use that outlines the self-government of a people. This landmark idea that men had the inalienable right as individuals to be free and live their lives under their own governance was the impetus of the American Revolution. Today, the Constitution stands as an icon of freedom for people around the world.

"Constitution Week is the perfect opportunity to read and study this great document, which is the safeguard of our American liberties," said DAR President General Presley Merritt Wagoner. "We encourage all citizens across the country to take time this week to reflect on our heritage of freedom."

The United States of America functions as a Republic under the Constitution, which is the oldest document still in active use that outlines the self-government of a people.

DAR has served America for 116 year. In 1928, the Daughters began work on a building as a memorial to the Constitution. John Russell Pope, architect of the Jefferson Memorial, was commissioned to design the performing arts center, known as DAR Constitution Hall. Today, DAR Constitution Hall is the only structure erected in tribute to the Constitution of the United States of America.

Known as the largest women's patriotic organization in the world, DAR has more than 168,000 members with approximately 3,000 chapters in all 50 states and 11 foreign countries. The DAR has long promoted patriotism through commemorative celebrations, memorials, scholarships and activities for children, and programs for new immigrants. For more information about DAR and its programs visit the Web site at dar.org or call 202-628-1776.

Council on Elder Affairs Outreach Coordinator Carol Barrett dons a spooky witch costume during the "Witches of Eastwick" themed end-of-summer picnic, hosted by the CEA. Barrett served hamburger "sand-witches" and "frightening franks" to the seniors that attended the event at the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Celebrate 20th anniversary of 'Eastwick'

Staff photos by Elsa Allen

Seniors enjoy the beautiful weather during the CEA's end-of-summer picnic, held Thursday, Sept. 7 at the Cohasset Sailing Club. This is the fifth year in a row the CEA has hosted such an event.

June Simeone relaxes during an afternoon boat ride on Cohasset Harbor during the CEA-sponsored end-of-summer picnic. This year's harbor cruise featured a tour of sites filmed during the making of "The Witches of Eastwick."

Sarah Murphy, daughter of CEA board chairman Anna Abbruzzese, drives partygoers around Cohasset Harbor during the "Witches" themed end-of-summer picnic, thrown by the CEA.

Marie Price and Faith Maloney might be mistaken for Cher and Michelle Pfeiffer who played two of the three witches in the movie, "The Witches of Eastwick," filmed in Cohasset 20 years ago. The CEA held its end-of-summer picnic with a witches theme to celebrate the anniversary of the filming and many seniors who attended the event dressed for the occasion.

A witch doll flies over the crowd which gathered for this year's Council on Elder Affairs end-of-summer picnic at the Cohasset Sailing Club Sept. 7. This year's theme was chosen to help commemorate the 20th anniversary of the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick" in Cohasset.

JM productions makes stops in Braintree, Hull and Walpole

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

After 20 years producing and presenting live entertainment in Quincy, John F. McDonald, Jr., of JM Productions, is taking his shows on the road this fall with stops in Braintree, Hull and Walpole, in a new concept McDonald - tongue planted firmly in cheek - calls his first annual P.M.S. Tour of parties, martinis and shows.

"We're presenting shows once a month with no bloating or cramps - just wonderful mood swings and happy faces! You won't have to go to work on Monday and only hear what a great weekend your co-workers had," explains McDonald, a life-long Quincy resident. "We'll give you something worth talking about, too."

This Thursday, McDonald's JM Productions will make its Braintree debut when it presents North Shore Acapella with special guest Stephen McNulty. Since 1981, North Shore Acappella has blended harmony, rhythm and tempo on well-known tunes from the 1940's through today. Featuring the vocal talents of Jimmy Martin, Paul Lopes, Frank Amorino, Vinny Straccia, and Tommy Duarte, North Shore Acapella delivers its musical message without instrumental accompaniment. In addition to its own headline gigs, the group has appeared as an opening act for The Temptations, The Platters, Ben E. King, Johnny Maestro, Al Jarreau, Roberta Flack, Frankie Valli, and Gene Pitney. Joining North Shore Acapella this week at the Sheraton in Braintree will be Stephen McNulty with a show featuring music ranging from Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin and Sammy Davis, Jr., to Broadway show tunes. As a performer with Ball in the House, McNulty has sung all over the world, sharing the stage with everyone from Smokey Robinson and Cher to Jessica Simpson and Justin Timberlake. As a recording artist, Stephen has been heard as the lead vocalist on the Billboard Top 20 radio hit "Something I Don't Know" with Ball in the House. On television and radio, he is one of the voices behind the national ad campaign for Cool Whip.

New England's
Favorite Oldies Showband

On October 13, McNulty will be joined by 2005 Boston Pops Idol winner Tracy Silva of New Bedford for a brand new show entitled "With a Song in My Heart: The Music of Life" at Raffael's Nantasket in Hull. Although the pair are still in rehearsals, McDonald hints that their program will include powerful Broadway hits, soulful liturgical selections, patriotic favorites and even some opera.

On October 20, the "P.M.S. Tour" journeys to Raffael's in Walpole for "Simply The Best," a Tina Turner Tribute Show direct from London starring Suzette Dorsey. In her tribute to the legendary woman of rock, Dorsey performs all of Turner's classics - including "Proud Mary," "Private Dancer" and "What's Love Got To Do with It" - in a recreation of one of Turner's high-energy concerts. Joined by a 12-member on-stage troupe of musicians and dancers, Dorsey has performed as Tina Turner all over Europe, Japan and the Middle East and in Las Vegas and Atlantic City.

November 17 at Raffael's Nantasket in Hull and November 18 at the Sheraton in Braintree, the cast of the South Shore favorite "Connie, Brenda, Patsy & Me" will team for a new show, "Guys by Dolls: Sinatra to n*Sync," showcasing the music of well-known male crooners, country singers, and even boy bands. With Sheila Fahey of Neponset on lead vocals, the talented troupe - including Dorchester's Jennifer Fahey, Kethy Teevans-Fitzpatrick of Quincy, and Patricia Lee and Mary Ellen Anson of Braintree - will share their comical perspective on the male species through memorable music.

A musical revue entitled "Forever Christmas," by Masquerade, brings the holiday spirit to Hull December 7-8 while on December 14-15 in Braintree, McDonald will present "The Lascivious Biddies Christmas Tour," direct from New York City where they have been hailed as "Manhattan's Hippest Girl Group." Guitarist Amanda Monaco and pianist Deidre Rodman both rank among New York City's foremost young jazzers, while bassist Saskia Lane comes equipped with conservatory-honed chops and singer Lee Ann Westover adds power vocals to the quartet's doo-wop and jazz harmonizing.

If Ryan Seacrest's pinch-hitting for ailing American Bandstand veteran Dick Clark on ABC-TV's annual New Year's Rockin' Eve isn't enough to keep you home New Year's Eve, then JM Productions offers Bandstand Revue in Braintree with a dinner show celebrating 27 years of playing the greatest hits of the 50's, 60's and 70's. Bandstand Revue specializes in oldies and rock 'n' roll with a play list covering swing and standards from the late 1940's right up to the 70's. Joe Gionti, on keyboards, bass and vocals, formed the five-piece oldies show band in 1979. Other band members include Greg Mulvey, lead vocals, Fran Donnelly, guitar and vocals, Pete Vanasse, saxophone, and Tony Aquilante on drums.

At the Sheraton Hotel, 37 Forbes Road, Braintree, JM Productions will offer patrons a choice of four different packages including Show only, Dinner and Show, Show, Dinner & Stay over at the hotel, and Show, Dinner, Stay over plus a holiday shopping excursion to Wrentham Village Premium Outlets. Dinner and Show packages and just show tickets are available for the productions at Raffael's at 1601 Main Street, Route 1A in Walpole and 45 Hull Shore Drive in Hull.

Movie review

'Dahlia' makes a killer movie

"The Black Dahlia" (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

With her hair bleached a perfect shade of Hitchcock blonde, Scarlett Johansson is one of four or five femme fatales in Brian De Palma's "The Black Dahlia." A pulp noir fever dream based on a book by "L.A. Confidential" scribe James Ellroy, the film riffs the famous true case of the unsolved 1940s murder of a Hollywood starlet, Elizabeth Short (Mia Kirschner).

Adapted by Josh Friedman, whose screenplays for "The War of the Worlds" (2005) and "Chain Reaction" (1996) were undistinguished, the film begins with a back story involving the "friendly" rivalry of Los Angeles police detectives Bucky Bleichert (a monotone Josh Hartnett) and Lee Blanchard (a squirrely Aaron Eckhart), also known as Mr. Fire and Mr. Ice.

Bucky and Lee soon become embroiled in the investigation into the death of Medford-born Short, also known as the Black Dahlia. Elizabeth was an aspiring actress who frequented various Hollywood demimondes, including a swank lesbian bar, and whose death and gruesome disfigurement caused a national sensation.

When Ellroy flips over an L.A. rock, some of the nastiest, most lurid things you can imagine crawl out. Among these are the dysfunctional Linscott family headed by a corrupt developer (John Kavanagh) and numbering among its members sometimes-lesbian daughter Madeleine (Hilary Swank, channeling Katharine Hepburn), who is the deceased starlet's look-alike, and a gargoyle-like wife (Fiona Shaw) given to drunken rants.

Detective Bleichert (Josh Hartnett) has his hands full with the mysterious Madeleine (Hilary Swank).

Lee lives with the beautiful Kay Lake (Johansson), a mystery woman with a dark past. A love triangle involving Bucky, Lee and Kay develops. Bucky and Madeleine also become lovers in part because of her striking resemblance to the dead woman.

The rococo "Chinatown"-like plot of "The Black Dahlia" further involves the character Conrad Veidt plays in Paul Leni's famous silent film "The Man Who Laughs" (1928); the imminent release from prison of a man (Richard Brake) who once sexually abused Kay; and a DePalma set piece in which Bucky races in dreamlike slo-mo to save Lee from danger.

Also the basis of the unsatisfying 1981 drama "True Confessions," the murder of Elizabeth Short has become an archetype of all the bad things that can befall beautiful young women lured to Hollywood by the siren song of fame.

In the crucial role of the Dahlia herself, who is seen alive only in the films she made, some of them pornographic, Kirschner is touching and sexy. But the character remains an enigma.

"The Black Dahlia," which was shot in Bulgaria, is also notably DePalma's third or fourth attempt to make his version of "Vertigo," Hitchcock's classic depiction of male sexual obsession. But unlike Hitchcock, DePalma fails to get inside the heads of his obsessed males, and his lead actors do not help. Maybe it was the water in Bulgaria, but neither actor is particularly convincing. In the supporting cast, Rose McGowan has a nice turn as a cynical starlet friend of Elizabeth's. K.D. Lang, however, is distracting as a cross-dressing singer.

In spite of its flaws, "The Black Dahlia" is still a De Palma film, which means it's a ready-made guilty pleasure for both movie lovers and devoted parishioners of the Church of Hollyweird. Breathe deeply. This incense has a real kick.

Rated R. "The Black Dahlia" contains nudity, profanity and violence.

"Corteo" will run through Oct. 8

Cirque du Soleil takes clowns to elegant heights in 'Corteo'

Some of us may find it uncomfotable to picture our own funerals, but for the dead clown (Mauro Mozzani) at the heart of "Corteo" — the latest touring production of Cirque du Soleil now at Suffolk Downs — the experience is quite magical. His funeral "Corteo," which means "cortege" in Italian, is a joyous procession that sets the stage for a show, which uses the theatrical world of fun and comedy to explore the mysterious space between heaven and earth.

With "Corteo," Cirque du Soleil presents an array of beloved circus arts in a fresh, exciting manner. As the show opens, the dead clown's four former female friends (Evelynne Allard, Julie Dionne, Marie Michelle-Faber, and Helena Sadanha), come together in dreamlike joy as they perform aerial acrobatics on three giant, swinging chandeliers that dangle above the clown in his bed. The former girlfriends soon become angels who remain just out of reach of the clown. As with most of Corteo's most memorable scenes, this one lasts but a few moments. Soon we are watching young people (Mitchell Head, Gustavo Lobo, Edi Moreno Barata, Mary Sanders, Ciprian Veres, Omar Cortes and Julian Panel) jump on two over-sized beds. In a playful romp on rotating platforms, the beds are soon revealed to be more trampolines than mattresses. The performers execute acrobatic feats that find them landing on their feet on the headboards after some dazzling dismounts.

In 18 different vignettes featuring teeterboards, tight wires, and juggling, 58 supremely talented circus artists bring the story to vivid life against Jean Rabasse's elegantly beautiful circus backdrop and enhanced by glorious costumes by Dominique Lemieux.

As with other Cirque du Soleil incarnations, this show is stunning virtually from start to finish. Its sweetest moment, however, comes in act one when lovely little person Valentyna Pahlevanyan whimsically floats over the audience suspended by three huge helium balloons. It is a moment not to be missed and never to be forgotten.

Cirque du Soleil's "Corteo" will be performed under the Grand Chapiteau at Suffolk Downs, Route 1A, East Boston, through Oct. 8. For tickets and information, call 1-800-678-5440 or visit www.cirquedusoleil.com

New Releases

CRANK (B)

A scruffy hit man (Jason Statham) learns that he has been injected with a poison known as the Beijing Cocktail and has an hour left to live. Racing against time, he stocks up on energy drinks and seeks out the punk, Verona (Jose Pablo Cantillo) who pricked him. "Crank" isn't going to make or break the crime thriller genre. But the 87 minutes flies fast, and the conclusion to this amazing race is worth the time. (Rated R) -Chelsea Bain

HALF NELSON (A-)

"Half Nelson" tells the story of the fascinating if not altogether healthy relationship that develops between a young, white, male teacher (Ryan Gosling) with a serious substance abuse problem and a 13-year-old female African-American student (Shareeka Epps) from a broken home. It's not your father's teacher-student formula film. An offbeat "To Sir with Love" for a new generation, "Half Nelson" is a small, quiet stunner. (Rated R)

NOBELITY (C)

Can one man — and one documentary — save the world? Turk Pipkin certainly hopes so. His dreamy "Nobelity," a film that pieces together interviews with nine Nobel laureates, puts Earth's problems under a microscope and asks his audience to go out and change. It's tough to argue with the guy, especially when he rounds up a bunch of smart people and lets them loose in front of his camera. But the documentary is filled to the brim with bad news and often comes across as preachy. It would have been nice to see Pipkin pick one problem and run with it. (Not rated) -Chelsea Bain

PAPER DOLLS (C+)

It's not easy to make a film about Filipino drag queens working in Israel, so documentary filmmaker Tomer Heymann stepped into a pair of high heels himself. The result is "Paper Dolls," a touching but meandering film that follows a group of flashy transvestites. The story seems to be about sexuality in Israel, but the film lacks focus, tackling everything from the director's own stifled sexuality to violence in Israel. There are heartfelt moments, and Heymann has a poignant story, but the message is often lost in the shuffle. (Not Rated) -Chelsea Bain

THE PROTECTOR (C+)

"The Protector," a Thai martial-arts action fest also known as "Ong Bak 2" in some markets, features the amazing Tony Jaa, who deserved a worthier follow-up to "Ong Bak" (2003). Jaa is Kham, a member of a sacred sect of Thai warriors whose duty is to protect the king's fighting elephants, who ends up in Australia hot on the trail of poachers. Most of the film's fight scenes are so patently ridiculous the suspense is nonexistent. Featuring some of the worst acting and most hissable villains, "The Protector" is something to watch on DVD with your friends and a six-pack or two. In English and Thai, Mandarin and Vietnamese, with subtitles. (Rated R)

RIDING ALONE FOR THOUSANDS OF MILES (A-)

When venerable Japanese fisherman Takata (Ken Takakura) is called to Tokyo because his adult son Ken-ichi (Kiichi Nakai) is gravely ill, he learns his son, who refuses to see him, has some unfinished business. Ken-ichi has a date to return to the Chinese mainland to photograph the great opera artist Li Jiamin (Li Jiamin). Takata resolves to take his son's place and film the performance. What follows is a unique road movie about a stranger in a strange land who finds himself trying to connect with his estranged son, and attempting to reunite Li Jiamin, who is in prison for assault, with a son he has never met. This beautifully shot film is both a moving, modern-day parable and a tribute to the warmth and generosity of the rural Chinese people. In Japanese and Mandarin with subtitles. (Not rated)

A hungry Billy (Luke Benward) prepares to have a little appetizer in "How to Eat Fried Worms."

Ongoing

ACCEPTED (C+)

Hitting the books isn't easy, but the coeds in "Accepted" — a harmless and occasionally funny film — are totally stoked. They're a group of slackers and high school weirdos who, one way or another, kissed their futures goodbye. Denied acceptance elsewhere, they tidy up a mental institution and create South Harmon Institute of Technology, a university of their own. It's been years since the antics of "Animal House" brought cinematic justice to dorm life, and it's going to take more to do it again. Still, "Accepted," for all its faults, earns a passing grade. Rated PG-13 – Chelsea Bain

BARNYARD: THE ORIGINAL PARTY ANIMALS (D)

The crudely animated, gender-confused and visually loud "Barnyard" takes place on a farm where animals walk upright, talk and refer to one another as "men" and "women." Otis (voice of Kevin James) is a young party animal whose father, Ben (Sam Elliott), wants him to shape up and guard the fence to protect the barnyard from a marauding band of evil coyotes. Otis would rather not. But after Ben is attacked by the coyotes and later dies, what's a party animal to do? Do you smell another generic, by-the-numbers, kiddie-movie script featuring that obligatory, insincere life lesson? (Rated PG)

BEERFEST (D)

With Germany as the butt of its jokes, "Beerfest" takes us into the lives of Todd (Erik Stolhanske) and Jan (Paul Soter) Wolfhouse, two American brothers who are asked by their Great Gam Gam (Cloris Leachman) to scatter her deceased husband's ashes at Oktoberfest. The siblings fly to Deutschland and uncover an underground sporting event that involves yodeling and slamming back beers. Taunted by a group of Germans, Jan and Todd vow to take home the gold. "Beerfest" is at best a sketch comedy that relies on profanity to get laughs. Dudes who love to drink may get a kick out of it, but the morning after "Beerfest" will be similar to those college days: bad memories and a headache that smarts. (Rated R.) -Chelsea Bain

CROSSOVER (F)

It's hard to tell which is worse in this shoddily crafted tale of hoops-loving teens — the acting or the basketball. Friends Tech (Anthony Mackie) and Noah (Wesley Jonathan) hail from the same tough Detroit neighborhood but are headed in different directions. Noah is an aspiring doctor whose ball skills land him a free ride to college, while Tech is a passionate player who must settle for getting his GED and attending community college. Tech involves Noah in the underground streetball circuit, even though participating could jeopardize Noah's college career. Like many urban-focused movies, "Crossover" enables stereotypes instead of digging for truth or justice. And as for the basketball footage, stick to the classic sports stations for real game. (Rated PG) -Tenley Woodman

DESCENT (B+)

If you like movies that rile audiences and get them to scream, hold their breaths, laugh in relief and shout things at the screen, experience "The Descent." It is the most frightening non-J-horror film I've seen in a long time. The film tells of six British spelunkers trapped in an underground labyrinth with what look like an army of flesh-eating Gollums. Compared to other splatter horror film, "Descent"'s terrors are far more primal and psychological. If you're claustrophobic, you're in for a rough ride. (Rated R.)

THE DEVIL WEARS PRADA (B+)

"The Devil Wears Prada" is a stiletto-heeled, high-couture hoot. Dowdily innocent, aspiring journalist Andy Sachs (Anne Hathaway) arrives in New York City and is offered a job "a million girls would kill to have." That is, being second assistant to ultrachic diva and Runway magazine editor Miranda (Meryl Streep), a dragon lady with a tongue like a knife. As she struggles to make Franken-Miranda happy by meeting her outrageous demands, Andy is pitied by the magazine's art director Nigel (Stanley Tucci) and made over into a new age Eliza Doolittle. (Rated PG-13)

EDMOND (B+)

In this blackest of black comedies, William H. Macy is middle-aged Edmond who abandons his wife (Rebecca Pidgeon) to look for excitement — and sex — on the mean streets. Edmond, who rails against gays, women and blacks, almost immediately finds himself in an alarming downward spiral. Each defeat turns Edmond emotionally, physically and mentally into mincemeat. Only in the aftermath, when he finds himself stripped of power, does Edmond discover the bitter truth about what he says: "Every fear hides a wish." (Rated R) -Stephen Schaefer

FACTOTUM (B-)

How much you enjoy "Factotum" depends on how seriously you take Charles Bukowski, the philosopher-drunk, romancer of wretchedness and favorite of middle-class hipsters. "Factotum," which is based on Bukowski's 1975 novel of the same name, is a familiar down-and-out story about struggling writer Hank Chinaski (Matt Dillon) and his drunken sexual exploits. It's a ghost of American indie films past. Dillon's work passes muster, and his Hank is surprisingly agreeable. (Rated R)

HOUSE OF SAND (A-)

An epic depiction of a battle of wills, featuring "trading-places" performances by mother-daughter actors, the Brazilian effort "House of Sand" is unique. It's 1910 and Vasco de Sa (Ruy Guerra), forcibly moves his pregnant, much-younger wife, Aurea (Fernanda Torres), and her aged mother, Donna Maria (Fernanda Montenegro) to the middle of Brazil's northern desert. The film charts Aurea's lifelong struggle to leave the area and seek a better life somewhere, anywhere more settled. "House of Sand" is an example of magical-realism at its most minimalist, an at-times thin tale about the passage of time and the way we lay down roots almost involuntarily. In Portuguese with subtitles. (Rated R)

HOW TO EAT FRIED WORMS (B+)

Sweet and satisfying, "How to Eat Fried Worms" will tickle the taste buds of any kid who thinks cooking critters is cool. Based on the popular book by Thomas Rockwell, the film stars Luke Benward as Billy, the new kid in town, who challenges the resident bully, Joe (Adam Hicks), to a worm-eating showdown in a battle for schoolyard respect. It's a simple plot, but then so is the grub. Bon appetit. (Rated PG.) -Chelsea Bain

IDLEWILD (C-)

Self-indulgent, melodically unimpressive and featuring, believe it or not, a telltale hint of necrophilia, the musical "Idlewild" arrives at a theater near you with a thud. Set in the 1930s days of Prohibition, the film features Andre Benjamin and Antwan A. Patton, of Outkast, as lifelong friends and speakeasy performers. The mix of shootouts, sex, a car chase, semi-nude dancers and song is visually lush, but also lacking in momentum. Written and directed by music-video director Bryan Barber ("Hey Ya"), "Idlewild" can be kindly described as the world's longest music video. (Rated R.)

THE ILLUSIONIST (B)

Eisenheim (Edward Norton) is an early 20th century, Austro-Hungarian mesmerist and magician who seems capable of unbelievable feats of sorcery — including perhaps even raising the dead on a theater stage. While the empire is ablaze with talk about this mysterious magician, Eisenheim is also reunited, on stage, with his childhood love, Duchess Sophie (Jessica Biel), who is now engaged to be married. When Sophie and Eisenheim are discovered meeting illicitly, and Eisenheim is threatened by Chief Inspector Uhl (Paul Giamatti). Shot in sepia tones and beautiful to look at, "The Illusionist" is stylish, often riveting, and its cast is addictively watchable. But it has its flaws: How good is its final "twist" if we've lost interest in the film? (Rated PG-13)

AN INCONVENIENT TRUTH (B+)

"An Inconvenient Truth" or "Al Gore: Superstar" is either a piece of rhetorical brilliance proving the case for global warming or an attempt on Gore's part to position himself as the savior of the world. Brandishing a big Mac Powerbook and impressive PowerPoint presentation, Gore mounts a sufficiently entertaining and enlightening combination of a Doomsday tent revival, production number, new age Sermon on the Mount, belated campaign speech and Al Gore Whole Earth Concert Tour. (Rated PG)

INVINCIBLE (B-)

Back in the bad-old recessionary 1970s, Vince Papale (Mark Wahlberg) was a substitute school teacher, bartender and back-lot football player who responded to an open call for tryouts for the beleaguered Philadelphia Eagles and — holy cheese steak! — made the cut and played a few seasons. The generic film blandly charts Vince's attempt to make the team, survive grueling summer practice sessions and be accepted by his fellow players, who consider him with some validity an amateur and a freakish sideshow act. (Rated PG.)

LITTLE MISS SUNSHINE (B)

"Little Miss Sunshine" is a dysfunctional-family road picture featuring the Hoovers (Steve Carell, Toni Collette, Greg Kinnear, Alan Arkin and Paul Dano), who trundle into a beat-up yellow VW Microbus for a trip to Los Angeles where preteen daughter Olive (Abigail Breslin) will compete in a Little Miss Sunshine Beauty pageant. Comic hijinks and quirkiness with a capital "Q" ensue. (Rated R)

THE OH IN OHIO (C)

Advertising executive ice queen Priscilla (Parker Posey) has never experienced an orgasm. After her fed-up husband (Paul Rudd) moves into the garage and starts getting it on with one of his high school students (Mischa Barton), Priscilla plunges down a path of self-discovery with vibrating toys and sexual romps with several men and a wacky lesbian (Heather Graham). Over-the-top and underdeveloped, "The Oh in Ohio" has its head in the right place but lets its libido call the shots. From schmaltzy sex scenes to casting Danny DeVito as a love interest, "The Oh in Ohio" ends up shooting blanks. (Not Rated) -Chelsea Bain

Get well, Jon

Kids sign cards for Sox pitcher

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Students at the Deer Hill and Osgood schools know what it means to be compassionate. Over the course of the past two weeks, students at both schools have been busily signing get-well wishes for one of their favorite Red Sox pitchers, Jon Lester. Lester was recently diagnosed with anaplastic large cell lymphoma, which is a cancer of the lymph nodes.

Mary Jo Blackington, a parent, has been the coordinator behind the project. At the end of this week at least seven poster-board-sized cards, full of sweet sentiments from some of Cohasset's youngest students, will be sent to the Red Sox offices at Fenway Park.

Blackington said the idea came to her while preparing to launch the schools' annual gift-wrap fund-raiser. To generate interest and a team spirit around

Thumbs up for triathlon

Includes bike, run, and swim

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Athletes of all ages and abilities have a sporting event to look forward to, as a triathlon is being planned for the summer of 2007. While the goal of raising as much funding as possible for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation has been set, the event is also intended to bring the community together and bring out-of-towners into Cohasset's beautiful setting.

Race Director Bill Burnett of Linden Drive is coordinating the event, and came before the Board of Selectmen for approval Monday. The board gave its unanimous support for the event, which will include a 1/4-mile swim, followed by a 12-mile bike and a 3.2-mile run. Burnett had already received the OK from Police Chief James Hussey, Town Manager Bill Griffin, and Sandy Beach Association President Robin Lawrence.

"This will be a great event for the town and I am certainly hoping for a great turnout, lots of volunteers and cheering along the race course," Burnett said in an interview after the meeting.

While originally Burnett had floated June 10, 2007 for the date of the triathlon, members of the board felt the water might be too cold at Sandy Beach to safely conduct the swimming portion of the race. Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer lives on Atlantic Avenue and said he swims all the time throughout the summer, but in June, water temperatures are still very frigid.

"This will be a great event for the town and I am certainly hoping for a great turnout, lots of volunteers and cheering along the race course."
— Bill Burnett, race director

Burnett said June was chosen in part due to its high tides, which could keep swimmers closer to shore. "People say it will be cold, but I think they'll still give it a try," said Burnett, adding there is always the option to wear a wet suit.

But Selectman Gary Vanderweil noted the Clark's Fund Run road race is held every June, and he wouldn't want the two events to compete for participants. Burnett said in scheduling his event, he had been careful to ensure there were no conflicts, but he had not heard of Clark's

Democrats go for Deval

Patrick will face Lt. Gov. Healey on Nov. 7

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

When it comes to turnout, Tuesday's primary won't get into the record books. But the results are interesting nonetheless.

Gubernatorial candidate, Deval Patrick, a corporate attorney and Milton resident, won handily in Cohasset where just over 20 percent of the town's registered voters went to the polls.

The results of the primary determined which Democrat and Republican names will appear on the Nov. 7th election ballot.

"There were some slow periods but we had a big surge at the end of the day," said Assistant Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre. Polls were open from 7a .m. until 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

Across the state Patrick also finished ahead of fellow Democrats, Chris Gabrieli and Attorney General Tom Reilly.

There is now a three-way race for governor that includes, Patrick; Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey, a Republican; and independent candidate Christy Mihos.

The race for the keys to the state's top office is creating excitement among political activists.

This year's Health Screening Day may have had the largest turnout yet. Held annually by the Board of Health, this year's event drew even more residents than last year, who were eager to learn about different health topics and have themselves evaluated.

On hand were healthcare professionals from various areas of expertise, providing many helpful services for the community. There were free cholesterol and blood sugar screenings, vision and hearing tests, and oral and skin cancer analyses. There were also free chair massages and bone density screenings.

"We had a good steady stream of people in here from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m.," said Town Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik, adding while the stream slowed down from noon until 2 p.m., there were still many people taking advantage of the services being offered at the Second Congregational Church.

Motorcycle chase ends in arrest

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police said he ran stop signs and red lights, and at times operated over the centerline as he traveled along Scituate roads.

As it turned out a Braintree man, who ran from police, was wanted on an outstanding felony warrant out of Quincy District Court for breaking and entering in the daytime, police said.

It all started at about 3:15 p.m. Saturday (Sept. 16) when a Cohasset police officer stopped a motorcycle for following too close to other vehicles on Route 3A near Brewster Road. However, when the officer got out of the cruiser, the motorcycle took off toward Scituate. Police said the man, who was later identified as John H. Mulloy, 26, was traveling at speeds of up to 60 m.p.h. in a 30 m.p.h. zone. They said he ran stop signs and red lights, and at times operated over the centerline as he traveled along Scituate roads. The Cohasset officer kept a safe distance, activated the lights and siren, and had dispatch run the motorcycle plate.

Mulloy finally left his bike on a small street, dropped his helmet and ran. K-9 units were called in to help with the search. The subject was later found secreted under a bush. Scituate police, who may also seek charges, arrested Mulloy and turned him over to Cohasset.

In addition to the outstanding warrant, Mulloy, who lives at 319 Lisle St., Braintree, is facing charges of negligent operation of a motor vehicle, speeding, marked lanes violation, failure to stop for a police officer, and following too close on a state highway.

Pedestrian struck

A woman using the crosswalk at Shaw's parking lot was struck on the foot by a vehicle causing her to fall on her wrist and hit her head last Thursday (Sept. 14) at about 5:45 p.m. She was transported to the hospital, police said.

Apparently a vehicle exiting one of the parking lot corridors was making a left, when another vehicle traveling along the main drive in front of the shops, stopped to allow the vehicle to make the left. The driver of the car making the left turn apparently did not see the woman in the crosswalk. The woman tried to jump back, but the car struck her foot, police said.

Police stress motorists should always use care and watch out for pedestrians. However, even though pedestrians have the right-of-way, they should walk defensively. "Don't count on a motorist to stop," Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon said.

Fake licenses

Police arrested two Brazilian men over the past week, both of whom showed fake Brazilian licenses.

Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon said forged Brazilian licenses are becoming so common that police are briefed on what to look out for during their annual training at the police academy.

The first incident occurred at about 6 p.m. Friday (Sept. 15), when an officer observed a white Dodge Caravan cross the fog line on three occasions on Beechwood Road and King Street. The officer stopped the vehicle near Wheelwright Park. The operator showed a Brazilian license and allegedly told the officer the car did not belong to him and he did not know where the registration was.

Police arrested Ronan C. DeOliveira, 35, of 590 Middle St. #307, Weymouth, for unlicensed operation and failure to stay in marked lanes. At the station, Cohasset Police sought help over the telephone from a translator with the Boston Police due to the language barrier, Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon said.

At just past 1 a.m. Saturday (Sept. 16), police stopped Joao Filho, 38, of 12 Newbury Ave, #2, Quincy, for having a license plate light out. Filho was driving a black Ford Ranger pickup west on Sohier Street and police made the stop after he turned onto Route 3A. Further investigation revealed Filho's license was fake, police said. Filho was charged for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and equipment violation.

Schools track SPED costs

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Keeping an eye on the special education budget is always a top priority for the school department. This year is no different, as the start of school should bring to a close four pending special education out-of-district cases Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said could leave the district roughly $225,000 under-budget.

The School Committee was scheduled to receive an update on out-of-district tuition costs at its meeting last night (Thursday) after the Mariner went to press. A report of Walsh's update will appear in next week's Mariner.

At the committee's Aug. 23 meeting, Walsh presented a handout, which said there were 20 students currently enrolled in the special education program, which required out-of-district placement to the tune of $1,088,502.

At that time she also said there were four pending cases: one at the South Shore Educational Collaborative pre-school for $37,368; two therapeutic placements for a total of $100,000; and one placement at the May Center for $87,900. The total pending cases at that time was $225,268.

The total special education budget for fiscal 2007 is $679,117. Using Walsh's definite tuition figure of $1,088,502 for the 20 students already placed, it leaves a shortfall of $409,385. However, there were funds left over from fiscal 2006, which Walsh was able to use to pre-pay tuitions for fiscal 2007, which brought the shortfall down to $320,264. An additional $150,089 in anticipated circuit breaker funds would bring the deficit down to $170,175.

However, the four pending cases Walsh has anticipated coming in at approximately $225,268 would bring the deficit up to $395,443. The school department has additional circuit breaker funds available in the amount of $110,808, which it could choose to use, but Walsh said it would deplete that fund. Even using that money, there would still be a deficit of roughly $284,635.

But this year the school department has introduced transportation fees, which will be used to pay for the costs associated with transportation. In turn, money that would have been used to pay for those costs can be shifted to other line items.

Students who ride the bus must pay $180 per student to ride and students who are old enough to drive themselves may pay to park for $180 per year. At the end of the first week of school, the school department had collected $101,160 in bus and parking fees and more were expected to come in. If that money were put toward the special education tuition deficit, it would be brought down to $183,475. The School Committee was expected to receive an update on transportation fees Thursday as well.

Bike, swim and run for juvenile diabetes research run. "Probably July or August would be your best bet," said Vanderweil.

To that end, Burnett said later in the week the race has been rescheduled for Sunday, July 8, 2007, which works for everyone.

The race will begin at Sandy Beach and swimmers will swim 1/4 mile in a circular pattern. Kayaks and two skiffs will be used for safety. Participants will then change in the transition area and hop onto bikes and travel 12 miles. The course will begin at the beach and will head down Atlantic Avenue to Border Street. Riders will turn right on Gannett Road and head into North Scituate. The course will then take another right onto South Main Street and head through the village, down North Main Street to Hull Street (Route 228). The final turn is onto Jerusalem Road, which turns back into Atlantic Avenue and brings the riders back to the transition area at the beach.

From the beach, the run will begin as participants head up Atlantic Avenue to Jerusalem Road and at the intersection with Forest Avenue, turn back again to go back down Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue to Sandy Beach to complete the 3.2-mile loop.

The triathlon will be a USA Triathlon Sanctioned Event, and although it is 10 months away, Burnett has many plans in place to help get the word out from now until then. He will be working with www.active.com to be able to provide online registration for the event, which will cost $60 per individual and $90 per relay. "The more proceeds that go to diabetes the better, without sacrificing event safety or fun," he said.

Burnett also has plans to set up a Web page for the event to help endorse not only the triathlon, but also the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation. The Foundation has already been contacted about the event and Burnett said the paperwork is underway for it to formally state its endorsement.

To make the day possible Burnett will be asking for help from volunteers. He will need a swim coordinator who will be in charge of all activities on the swim course, including lifeguards, people in kayaks and the skiffs and to ensure a "clean beach start." He will also need a bike coordinator and a run coordinator to help organize volunteers, set up the courses with proper markings and signage and set up water stops.

Burnett will also need a registration coordinator to oversee all registration activities and a parking coordinator. He will need someone to provide the music for the event by regulating an iPod with speakers at the main transition area. He will also need a finish line coordinator.

The Mariner will provide updates on the planning for the race in the coming months and will provide contact information for those residents interested in volunteering.

ZBA fee increase gets go-ahead

In an effort to cover all costs associated with running the department, the Board of Selectmen voted Monday to approve the Zoning Board of Appeals' recommendation to increase filing fees. Applicants had been paying $100 for all single-family residential filings, but that fee has been upped to $150. All other filings will now be $300.

ZBA Chairman Woodworth Chittick stated in a memo to the Board of Selectmen that the ZBA also endorsed having the applicants pay for their legal advertising. (Legal advertising of hearings appears in the newspaper.)

"With the increase of the fees, coupled with the advertising costs now being covered, all administrative, postage and other costs for the Zoning Board of Appeals should be adequately covered," he said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he felt increasing the fees was a good idea, although it is hard to tell from year to year just how much money would be brought in as the number of permits fluctuates. He added many other boards require applicants take care of their own advertising, and it makes sense for the ZBA to have the same policy in place.

Griffin said total costs associated with the ZBA are roughly $5,000 per year, and the fees should help cover that cost. "It's not a lot of money, but we're taking things one department at a time," said Griffin.

A structure built at 11 Grace Drive is causing some waves in the neighborhood. While the owner of the property says the building will provide necessary storage space so she can tidy up her yard, neighbors say it is not fitting for a residential neighborhood.

Residents from the street came to Selectmen on Monday seeking answers to what they feel is a zoning problem in their neighborhood. Not only do they feel the building could be used for commercial use in a residential neighborhood, they question whether it meets other zoning requirements of the town's bylaws.

The building in question belongs to Linda Nickerson, 11 Grace Drive, and was permitted as storage shed by Building Commissioner Bob Egan. However, neighbors say the building, which has an aluminum, rounded roof and is 30 ft. long by 30 ft. wide and 18 ft. high, is not in keeping with the residential character of the neighborhood.

"We thought what was to be built was a shed, but this is a Quonset hut. We feel this takes down the value of our homes," said Charles McLaughlin, 31 Grace Drive, who spoke on behalf of himself and other residents of the street, as well as those on Hull Street that also abut Nickerson's property. "This building is commercial in nature and it is made of aluminum. We're getting de-facto rezoning and we haven't had due process."

McLaughlin added there has been a front-end loader parked in the Nickerson yard, which could be an indication there is more than just residential use going on at the home. The new building is large enough to house the machine.

Liliane Miller, 195 Hull St., said she lives just behind the Nickerson property. "I can nearly touch the building (from my property) and I don't have a 15-foot arm," she said, as buildings more than 15 ft. tall are required to have a 15-foot setback from all boundaries.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer asked whether Miller was sure about her property lines. She replied there is a stonewall with a fence on top of it that is the demarcation between the properties. She said if the fence was not erected along the property line, it would have had to have been built nine feet into the Nickerson property and she cannot see why Nickerson would have chosen to lose that much of her yard.

Dormitzer suggested as a first step to resolving the issue, the neighbors gather together to hire an engineer to conduct an independent survey and find the actual property line. "It is critical to have the property line established," he said. "You may have a case then."

Grace Drive residents feel this rounded building constructed at 11 Grace Drive is inappropriate for the neighborhood and violates zoning regulations. Residents came before selectmen Monday seeking answers. This picture was included in selectmen's correspondence this week.

"You wouldn't see something like this on Jerusalem Road or Atlantic Avenue or the Town Common."
— John Kierce, 27 Grace Drive

John Kierce, 27 Grace Drive, also weighed in and said, "This is Cohasset, it's a beautiful town. You wouldn't see something like this on Jerusalem Road or Atlantic Avenue or the Town Common. We've got just as much a right to have our neighborhood look nice," he said, adding, "Grace Drive is becoming disgrace drive."

Dormitzer asked Egan to weigh in on the situation. Egan said he stands by his issuance of the permit and in his opinion, it meets the required zoning setbacks, and is serving the purpose of a residential storage space. He said the town's zoning bylaws do not dictate design, and the building has been built within the town's regulations.

Egan said if the abutters feel they have been aggrieved, they may file an appeal of the building permit with the Zoning Board of Appeals. The ZBA will then review the case.

McLaughlin asked whether in the meantime, building on the structure could be stopped. Selectman Gary Vanderweil replied, "There is nothing that prevents someone from building an ugly building. The town has bylaws and we live in America. She can build whatever she wants."

Nickerson, who attended the meeting, said the building will provide the storage she needs. She said there is a barn on her property that needs to be torn down, and her basement floods, which renders it useless in terms of storage. She said she needs someplace to store her lawnmower, her lawn furniture, and a large truck. "I just want to put it all away and clean up my yard. That was my intention," she said.

Nickerson said while the building is shiny and silver right now, it will fade in the weather and will become gray. She said the building could also be painted. Nickerson added she has also thought about setting up trellises along its sides with climbing roses to help make it more attractive.

Dormitzer said the Board of Selectmen is limited in its jurisdiction when it comes to cases such as this one and suggested the abutters first have the property lines surveyed to see if there is a zoning issue. He also suggested if neighbors feel it is appropriate, they take action with the ZBA. While he said he understands the neighbors feel the building is not in keeping with the neighborhood, there was nothing selectmen can do.

Kelsey Bell receives Who's Who award

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

FAMILY NEWS

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing? I love to write about all the different events and programs happening around town but would love to have some news about our children, families, birthdays, and more. Send it all in when you can.

WHO'S WHO

Here is some wonderful news for one of Cohasset's young adults. The publisher of "Who's Who Among American High School Students" has awarded a $1,000 college scholarship to Kelsey Bell, a Cohasset High graduate. Kelsey, who is attending Tufts University, was selected for her academic achievements, participation in school and community activities, and her essay. Kelsey was one of 130 students selected from 90,000 applicants to receive financial awards for college expenses this year by the Educational Communications Scholarship Foundation, which is funded by the publishers of Who's Who. Congratulations Kelsey on a job well done.

CALLING YOUNG ARTISTS

The South Shore Art Center would like to let everyone know that art classes for children and teenagers begin next week and include multi-media classes for ages 4 and up, intensive drawing classes for grades 4 and up, "Elements of Design," for grades 6-9, and "Portfolio Studio," a class for high school students interested in producing work for art school submissions. For more information or to register for classes, contact the Art Center at 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

COFFEE WITH AUTHORS

Buttonwood Books semi-annual event, "Coffee with the Authors," is a treat for your mind. Invite a friend or two and enjoy a relaxed morning to hear three wonderful authors speak about their latest work. The date is Tue, Oct. 10, 9:45 –11:30 a.m. at the Atlantica Restaurant. Featured authors are Suzanne Berne, Elisabeth Brink, and Rachel Kadish. Suzanne Berne, winner of Great Britain's Orange Prize for her first book, "A Crime in the Neighborhood" will discuss "The Ghost at the Table", her stunning new novel about the Thanksgiving reunion of estranged family members, with a few innocent bystanders thrown in to heighten the tension. Berne is known for her insightful character studies, and "The Ghost at the Table" beautifully captures the vacillating emotion of the Fiske family members. This is an extraordinary new novel by one of today's best writers in the genre. Berne lives in Newton.

Elisabeth Brink has created a quirky academic in her book, "Save Your Own", a funny satire about a four-foot-nine geeky grad student at the Harvard School of Divinity. Her research leads her to a halfway house in Cambridge, where Gillian encounters the wild and wonderful characters that will transform her. Brink's deft handling of her nerdy misfit makes Gillian's oddities endearing, and her unusual perspective compels us to champion her in her quest. Brink was raised in Milton, and graduated from Fontbonne Academy.

Rachel Kadish's new book, "Tolstoy Lied: A Love Story" is a romantic comedy rooted in a quote from Tolstoy. "Happy families are all alike; every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way, " the opening line from "Anna Karenina". Tracy Farber is a woman in her thirties, happily single and a professor of American Literature. She questions Tolstoy's famous maxim and embarks on a private quest through literature to see if happiness is as vanilla as Tolstoy believes. The proof lies around the corner when Tracy meets George and her ideas are put to the real test. Kadish is an intelligent writer and tells her story with life and wit. Kadish lives outside Boston. Reservations and tickets ($15 per person, non-refundable) are required for this event.

To reserve, please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665, or send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Rt.3A, Cohasset, MA 02025

ENGAGEMENTS

David A. Carpenter and Amy Mae Silvia

Silvia-Carpenter

Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Silvia of Cohasset have announced the engagement of their daughter, Amy Mae, to David A. Carpenter, son of Richard A. Carpenter of Orwell, Vt., and Joanne C. Carpenter of Hingham. He proposed to her during a surprise hot-air balloon ride in June. All four parents were part of the chase crew, and shared in the champagne celebration at the landing.

The future bride graduated from Cohasset High School and Massachusetts College of Art. She teaches at Cushman Scott Children's Center in Amherst.

Her fiancé is a graduate of Williston Northampton School and George Washington University. He is a self-employed videographer/producer.

An August 2007 wedding is being planned.

Order spring bulbs this month

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is currently taking orders for a selection of spring flowering bulbs that will fill gardens with color from April to June. The assortment includes a violet-rose peony, flowering tulip, double narcissi with huge creamy yellow flowers, parrot tulips, deer- and rodent-resistant alliums, as well as petite muscari and scilla. Bulbs ordered now will become available at the end of September, and each order will be accompanied with directions for planting. Dutch organic bulb food is also available and recommended to enhance a garden's performance.

To order now for the best selection, call 781-383-0838. The bulbs will also be sold at the Cohasset Farmer's Market on Cohasset Common on Thursdays from 2:30 to 5 p.m., beginning Sept. 28. All purchases help fund club programs and community services.

Residents get checkup at annual health screening day

located in the James Brook Crossing shops, was on hand to provide tips for eating healthy, organic food and even provided a sweet treat for those who came to speak with him. He provided samples of a "health by chocolate" bar, which he sells in his store, which is packed full of vitamins, including calcium for "beautiful bones."

Resident Paula Pozniak was also dishing out advice on healthy eating, and provided a chart to calculate Body Mass Index, which can be used as an indicator of health. Former Cohasset resident Susan Cameron had "Juice Plus" capsules on display, which are essentially dehydrated fruits and vegetables in pill form, which can be added to a person's diet for a boost of nutrition.

Public health intern Sharon Ravid provided residents with information on the Medical Reserve Corps. Volunteers from the community may sign up to become part of the corps and serve during a local emergency health situation and assist with local public health needs throughout the year. The goal of the MRC is to bring together the knowledge and skills of many different health professionals and other volunteers to address public health crises.

The towns on the South Shore are small, and Ravid explained the more resources every town can pull together the better, as they can all help each other out during an emergency. Cohasset is part of the state's Region 4b, which includes the South Shore towns of Braintree, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth. Residents with any area of expertise that could be used during an emergency are encouraged to volunteer.

"We've given out a lot of applications," said Ravid, adding she is hopeful many residents will lend a hand during a crisis.

Resident Mary Whitley has been an oncology nurse for years and lent a hand at the fair conducting skin cancer screenings for the face. Using a special ultraviolet light, spots that could be melanoma can be seen and detected early for the best treatment.

Robin Lawrence, a dentist, provided the public with information on oral and esophageal cancer. "Cancer in any part of the body kills," he said, adding most people don't think of the mouth as one of the major culprits, but they should. He said there are roughly 30,000 cases of oral cancer diagnosed every year, which cause roughly 8,000 deaths. Oral cancer is the sixth most common cancer in men and the 14th most common cancer in women. The cancer can spread quickly and on average, only half of those diagnosed with the disease will survive more than five years. "Early detection is key," he said.

Oral cancer is more common in people who use smokeless tobacco, or "dip." Lawrence said the co-use of alcohol and tobacco lead to a far higher risk of getting oral cancer. He said in some cases, treatment requires removing a portion of the mandible, or lower jaw. "I have a nice slogan I use. It's '32 to 1.' You have 32 teeth and one life, which would you rather give up?" he said.

Some residents relaxed during the fair and took advantage of the free chair massage. Lynn and Paul Wilson of Nantasket Therapeutic Massage and Reflexology in Hull provide various kinds of massage at their office, and loosened the muscles of many throughout the day.

Lynn Wilson explained because a good number of residents who attend Health Screening Day are senior citizens who have never been massaged before, she and her husband have essentially been introducing them to the healing power of touch. In fact, she said she had spoken to Linda Elworthy, Director of the Council on Elder Affairs, and the two were planning to partner together to have a reflexology session once per month. Reflexology is based on the theory that all of the body systems are mirrored in the feet. Stimulating the nerves in the feet is thought to bring the body back into balance, allowing it to better heal itself.

"Getting the circulation going in the feet is really important for diabetics," said Lynn Wilson, adding many seniors are not flexible enough to be able to perform reflexology on their own feet, and she is excited about working with the CEA to provide that service.

In addition, Lynn Wilson said they offer prenatal massage using a table specifically designed for the comfort of the expectant mother. She said being pregnant and carrying around additional weight on the front of the body puts much strain on the back and having the opportunity to lie down on the stomach with the special massage table helps alleviate that back pain.

There were some tests geared specifically for seniors, such as the bone density screening provided by the Norwell Visiting Nurse Association. By placing the foot into a special ultrasound screening devise, bone mass is measured in the heel. The spine, hip and heel are considered the best sites for measuring bone mass density.

Holly Heggie, a case manager for the Massachusetts Association for the Blind, also provided information for seniors who might be experiencing loss of sight to some degree. She said while there are many services for people who are legally blind, those who only have partial vision loss due to glaucoma or macular degeneration have limited services available. She said one of her duties is matching up seniors with helpful equipment to make their everyday lives easier, such as bank checks with large print and talking pocket watches.

Linda Elworthy of the Council on Elder Affairs was also available to help seniors with questions about the services at the CEA. She said the CEA has a three-part lecture series coming up in October, which deals with preparing for the future. The lectures will be held Oct. 4, 18, and 25 with a light supper from 5:30 to 6 p.m., followed by the lecture from 6 to 7:30 p.m. The first lecture is "Planning for Long Term Care and Massachusetts Eligibility," the second is, "Memory Loss: What to Do," and the third is "Preparing Healthy Meals."

Representatives from Health Watch, Inc., provided blood testing throughout the day and tested residents' cholesterol and blood sugar levels. Town Health Nurse Judy Fitzsimmons also took blood pressure readings. "It was a great success. I really think we had even more people this year than last year," she said.

PSO annual gift-wrap fundraiser is under way

Osgood and Deer Hill PSO has launched the Innisbrook Giftwrap Fundraiser. There are two new and different catalogs from which to choose this year. They are filled with gift wrap, as well as candy and chocolates, and many other gift ideas. An assortment of magazine subscriptions is also offered. Fifty percent of all sales go directly to the PSO. Last year's fundraiser had sales of more than $39,000, and the money earned helped fund programs such as Character Education, classroom and library grants, curriculum enrichment and teacher appreciation events. The Character Education programs enhance children's learning by providing opportunities to teach social skills such as problem-solving, conflict resolution and dealing with bullying and peer pressure. The curriculum enrichment programs provide hands-on educational programs specific to each grade to supplement and complement existing curriculum.

New this year is the PSO's ability to process orders online and have them mailed directly to the student family for distribution.

New this year for the fundraiser is the PSO's ability to process orders online and have them mailed directly to the student family for distribution. Orders can still be placed with students and at the schools, and there will also be catalogs available for viewing at all the schools, the library, Town Hall, South Shore Community Center Nursery School and Carriage House Nursery School. There are various raffles and prizes for participation that are being offered. The fundraiser will end Oct. 2. For families receiving the Innisbrook catalogs directly, make sure the directions for online processing are used to take advantage of the speedy and convenient delivery of items.

For more information about the fundraiser or to place an order, call Mary Jo Blackington, fundraiser coordinator, at 781-383-0626.

Committee takes stormwater in stride

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When a heavy rain falls on Cohasset, the stormwater which flows into the town's drains picks up all the contaminants, or non-point source pollution, in its path. Certain areas in town have become "hot spots" for bacteria and a new stormwater study committee has been formed to track pollution issues and make recommendations for how to remedy the situation.

Currently, there is not one specific board or commission responsible for dealing with all the issues surrounding stormwater and pollution issues. To that end, Water Commissioner John McNabb and Health Board member Steve Bobo asked the Board of Selectmen at its Aug. 28 meeting to appoint a temporary, five-member Stormwater Management Committee composed of representatives from many areas of town government.

"The citizens of Cohasset call everyone because of a flooded basement," said Bobo, adding without having anyone specifically designated to speak to flooding and stormwater issues, residents do not know where to turn. He said appointing the committee as a temporary body may help the town figure out a way to have a permanent committee, which can get to the bottom of the town's stormwater issues.

McNabb suggested the committee be comprised of a representative from the Water Commission, the Board of Health, the Harbor Health Committee, the Water Resources Protection Committee, the Conservation Commission and the Planning Board. At its Sept. 18 meeting, the Board of Selectmen voted to appoint John McNabb, Steve Bobo, Karen Quigley, Jim Kinch, and Sara Charron. A recommendation has not yet been made for a representative of the Planning Board. Hull resident Lawry Reid, president of the Straits Pond Watershed Association, was appointed as a non-voting citizen-at-large. The town is still looking for a Cohasset resident to serve on the committee.

The Stormwater Management Committee will be charged with surveying the existing stormwater and non-point source pollution situation in Cohasset and make recommendations to the Selectmen and Town Meeting on:

- Planning and implementation of measures such as installing rain gardens or other Low Impact Development (LID) applications to alleviate existing stormwater problems;
- Drafting and the adoption of bylaws or other regulatory controls to prevent additional stormwater issues, such as a Model Stormwater Bylaw, to propose to Town Meeting;
- Creation of a permanent Stormwater Management Committee or Commission to have jurisdiction over stormwater issues.

The idea to form a committee comes on the heels of a meeting hosted by the Water Commission and Board of Health on July 29. More than 30 people attended the meeting to discuss stormwater and non-point source pollution including members of the Water Commission, Board of Health, Planning Board, Harbor Health Committee, Water Resource Protection Committee, Sewer Commission and Conservation Commission. Members of the Straits Pond Watershed Association and other residents adversely affected by flooding or non-point source pollution attended as well.

Currently, there is not one specific board or commission responsible for dealing with all the issues surrounding stormwater and pollution issues.

McNabb said those at the meeting agreed there are very serious stormwater and non-point source pollution problems in town that affect virtually all of its water bodies including Lily Pond, Treats Pond, the Gulf River, Straits Pond, Little Harbor, Cohasset Harbor, Jacobs Meadow and Sanctuary Pond. Flooding is also a problem in many areas of Cohasset including Beach Street, Jacobs Meadow, Brewster Road, Deep Run and the downtown area.

McNabb said there are numerous existing causes for the problems, including historic filling of drainage areas, current development including the MBTA Greenbush project, existing bottlenecks, tide gate issues, and increasing acreage of impervious surfaces. He said there was also discussion about the role of the sewer plant with flooding in the Jacob's Meadow area, which the Sewer Commission planned to further discuss with affected residents.

McNabb said while the Board of Health has been working on stormwater issues, there is no board, committee or official with the authority to deal with stormwater and non-point source pollution issues. Therefore, the problems are "falling through the cracks," and are not being adequately addressed.

Town Manager Bill Griffin suggested the committee study strictly non-point source pollution, and leave flooding out of the equation. "When you're dealing with flooding, it can be the cleanest water in the world, or the dirtiest," he said, and to him, it sounded as if the pollutants are at the root of the town's concerns.

There is still an opening for a citizen-at-large on the committee. Interested candidates should send a letter of interest and résumé to Town Manager Bill Griffin at Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Town Manager Griffin receives 30-year award

The International City Management Association recognized Town Manager Bill Griffin for his 30 years of service in municipal government, at its Annual Conference, held Sept. 10-13 in San Antonio, Texas. Members of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen congratulated Griffin on his accomplishment at their Monday meeting.

"You started out young!" quipped Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer. Griffin, 53, has been working in municipal government since graduating with a master's degree in public administration from Syracuse University. "It's been 30 years and I still have some energy left," Griffin joked.

The ICMA service awards recognize and celebrate members' dedication to public service and professional management at the local level. The awards are based on the number of years of full-time, paid employment in a local government.

Special Town Meeting Warrant closes Sept. 29

The Board of Selectmen voted to have the Special Town Meeting Warrant close at 1 p.m., Friday, Sept. 29.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said essentially, the Warrant is always open, and the board must vote to close it to give the town time to prepare for the upcoming Special Town Meeting, which will be held starting at 7 p.m. Nov. 13.

Residents interested in submitting an article for the Warrant must collect 100 signatures for citizens' petitions.

For more information, please call Town Clerk Marion Douglas at (781) 383-4100.

Cohasset kids throw pitcher a bunch of get-well wishes raising funds for the schools, Blackington said she puts up large cardboard cutouts of Red Sox players such as David Ortiz and Curt Schilling. She said Deer Hill students began coming up to her asking if she had any pictures or posters of Lester, one of their favorite players, and told her how they had heard he was sick.

"We had two great superstars showcased, and another one of their favorite players had just started treatment for cancer," said Blackington, who thought being able to show support for Lester would be a wonderful lesson for students. Part of the proceeds from the PSO-sponsored gift-wrap fund-raiser go toward character education programs, and she said having the children express their concern for Lester's condition would tie in with the lessons being taught at both schools.

Blackington said the card signing was done first at the Deer Hill School. Friday, Sept. 8, the first Friday of the new school year, students were informed they would be able to sign a card for Lester starting that Monday during lunchtime. By giving students time to think over the weekend, Blackington said they were really able to carefully consider the message they wanted to send. She said she was pleased with what the children thought of.

"I was really impressed," she said, adding every student who wished to sign the card had the opportunity to do so. Soon, four sheets of poster board were filled with kind messages from Deer Hill students. Blackington said every student came to her first to tell her the message they wanted to write. There were a few Yankees fans whose messages had to be redirected, but everyone seemed to have put a lot of thought into what they wanted to say, she said

Blackington said one student remembered Lester had pitched a game against the Baltimore Orioles and won. In his message, he told Lester to remember how he had played hard and beat the Orioles and that he could fight the cancer just as hard and win again. "They were just inspirational," said Blackington. At the end of last week, Deer Hill celebrated "Jon Lester Day" and everyone wore Red Sox gear.

On the same day Deer Hill was closing out its week with a celebration, students at the Osgood School were being introduced to the card signing. This week, students in grades one and two signed the cards during their library classes. Blackington said after some thought, it was decided students in kindergarten were too young to fully comprehend the project, but the older students in the school did a great job.

Parents received a memo from the school prior to the weekend to let them know their children would have the option to sign the card. Parents were encouraged to explain to their children Lester is sick and getting treatment from his doctor and it would help cheer him up to have get well messages from the students.

"They were adorable," said Blackington of the messages, adding while some chose to write just their names, others left messages such as, "fel betre," in their best penmanship.

Blackington said she feels the project was very worthwhile for students at the school. "The whole process was very character-building," she said. She added the cards would be on display for Open House nights for parents and then sent to the Red Sox offices at Fenway to be delivered to Lester.

OPINION

GUEST EDITORIAL/Alice Coyle

Edgy about EEE

I'm on edge about EEE and I know I'm not alone.

Mosquitoes, which were once just a summertime nuisance, have become a feared enemy we need to arm ourselves and our children against.

The other day I spent a good portion of my son's youth soccer team practice chasing 7-and 8-year-old boys around with insect repellent wipes, worried about anyone getting bitten by a mosquito on my watch. And when my son came home with a large mosquito bite on the back of his leg after attending an outdoor block party, I felt a strange panic begin to well up inside of me and began monitoring him closely for any signs of illness.

My concern, and that of other parents is warranted due to the deadly nature of the Eastern Equine Encephalitis virus, which can cause brain damage and even death in those infected. A 9-year-old Middleboro boy died from EEE last month, and the virus seems to be particularly dangerous to children under age 15 and senior citizens.

Recently the state Department of Public Health announced that mosquito traps in Marshfield, Scituate, Hingham and Cohasset have tested positive for EEE. A total of 130 pools have tested positive statewide so far.

While the infected insects are believed to be a bird-biting rather than mammal-biting breed, it's cause for concern and increased precautions.

Scituate residents were put on high alert after a llama became infected with EEE and was euthanized last week. The existence of mammal-biting mosquitoes indicates a higher risk to humans.

The mosquito season is winding down, but until the temperature dips down to the freezing point, we're not out of the woods, health officials say. It's tough to say goodbye to summer, but with the mosquito menace facing us this season, the first frost can't come fast enough.

Here are some precautions if you have to be outside during mosquito hours (about 5:30 p.m. to dawn):

- Repair screens – Keep mosquitoes outside by having well fitting screens on all windows and doors.
- Drain standing water – Mosquitoes lay their eggs in standing water. Check rain gutters and drains.
- Wear long sleeves and long pants. Use insect repellant with DEET.

Corrections to Armed Services tribute

In last week's tribute to the 10 men from Cohasset serving in Iraq and Afghanistan there were two errors.

The story should have said US Army Spc. Justin H. Maitland, 26, is a 1999 graduate of Cohasset High School, not 1991 as was reported. Spc. Maitland is deployed in Afghanistan.

The story also gave the incorrect high school for US Marine Sgt. Michael R. Kennedy, 26, who is deployed in Iraq. Sgt. Kennedy attended Cohasset High and is a graduate of West Roxbury High School, not Roxbury High School as reported.

The Mariner apologizes for the mistakes.

The good ol' days weren't so great

To the Editor:

Last week's commentary ("A breath, a break, a little sportsmanship") regarding sports fans and sportsmanship was a classic example of seeing the past through rose-colored glasses. Although the writer's commentary was mostly a personal memoir of her father's insistence on good sportsmanship by her family, implicit in her comments was the view that sports fans and athletes of a generation ago conducted themselves with a higher level of sportsmanship than they do today.

Yet, the object of her affection, the 1970 Boston Bruins, were known as, "The Big, Bad, Boston Bruins" because, to be blunt about it, they were bullies on the ice. There was barely a Bruins game in that era which did not involve a fight, with the combatants eagerly cheered on by the blood-lusting Boston Garden crowd. Indeed, the Bruins of that time ushered in a new era of physical intimidation in ice hockey thanks to the fisticuffs of players like Johnny McKenzie, Derek Sanderson, Wayne Cashman, and others. (Every Bruin fan from that era recalls the time that Sanderson got into a fight in Chicago with the Black Hawks' bad guy, Keith Magnuson, and pulled Magnuson's shirt over his head. Sandy skated around the ice with the bloodied shirt in his hands and then cavalierly tossed Magnuson's shirt into the crowd as he stepped into the penalty box, causing a near riot by the fans. It was great theater!)

The writer noted with disapproval the Patriots' fans recent booing at halftime of the opening game with Buffalo after a lackluster first half by their heroes. But being a Pats' season ticket holder in the early 70s (when the Pats were dreadful), I can attest that there were far more boos than cheers at Schaefer Stadium; there was no evidence of good sportsmanship, as defined by the writer, in the stands in those years. Even Red Sox fans in those days gave the razz mercilessly to Yaz, the now-exalted Carl Yastrzemski, when both he and the Sox failed more often than not to duplicate their 1967 Impossible Dream.

And let's not forget that during the 1950s and 1960s, when the Celtics' dynasty was in full bloom, Bill Russell referred to Boston as the "most racist city in America." Even off the court, Boston fans in the so-called "good ol' days" were hardly good sports.

The writer further seeks to contrast today's "era of senseless violence and hateful actions" (referring to 9-11 and Middle East wars) with the 1940s, when her father first started to go to Bruins games, as if to suggest that the world was some sort of wonderful place back then. Yet, the 1940s saw a world war, the Holocaust, and the dropping of two atomic bombs on civilian populations. By any measurable standard, even given the inhumanity that we see on our TV screens nightly, the world is a lot nicer place than it was when the writer's father was a young man.

There are many fathers today who, like the writer's dad, try to instill the quality of good sportsmanship into their children as part of an overall attitude of respect for others. For the writer to suggest that fans and athletes today are more boorish, crude, and unsportsmanlike than those of previous generations, or that the world today is more brutal than previous eras, is to hearken to a place and a time that never have existed in the history of mankind.

'Angel Food Project' support appreciated

To the Editor:

Thank you for publishing the article about "The Angel Food Project" in your Aug. 25 issue. We have received many positive comments as a result of the article, including the fact that many people did not know that the Center for Elder Affairs (CEA) provide congregate lunches to our seniors three days a week.

Some of you may not be aware there are many wonderful programs, services and activities provided by the CEA here in Cohasset. All of this is coordinated by a small working staff and many, many volunteers.

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the amazing Angel Food volunteers, who cheerfully chop, dice, steam and sauté every Wednesday for our oldest and frailest citizens. In addition, I would like to thank Maggie Warshaw of "Maggie's Corner Bake Shop" who generously donates baked goods each week to help defray the cost of groceries for this program.

Repaving is not a simple project

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Rocky Lane Bridge as of Sept. 20. CBB's latest word is that the bridge should open by the end of September.

Pond Street at the train tracks. This photo shows the state of affairs as of this past Wednesday to give you an idea of what's going on.

Water Department Paving – We've been asked to let our fellow Cohasset Residents about some other construction work that is underway or soon will be under way in our fair village. The Water Department is in the final stages of completing the major projects that we have been living with all summer. The last phase of these projects is to repave the areas where the Water Department has been working. However, repaving is not a simple project. In order to avoid too much asphalt from building up on the roads; the old surface will be ground down first to avoid this buildup. Then, the roads will be paved with new asphalt. Now — when and where? As of right now, the grinding is scheduled to start on Thursday, Sept. 28th. The paving will begin shortly thereafter.

The sequence for this work will be:

- South Main Street from Sestito Lane to Spring Street (in front of the Historical Society's Paul Pratt Building.
- Summer Street from Sankey Road, across S. Main Street to the end of the MBTA's work on Spring Street.
- Norfolk Road from Cushing Road to Hill Street
- Pond Street from Lantern Lane to the High School
- A small section of Forest Avenue across from Heather Drive (about 200 to 300 feet in total)

Also, the Water Department has started redoing water line connections to the buildings on Elm and Brook streets in the Village. This is in preparation for the work that needs to be done to replace the street, sidewalk and curbs in this area when Revitalization is finished.

Forest Avenue — While we are talking about Forest Avenue Town hall has received lots of calls about the very poor condition of Forest Avenue. We fully understand the reason for these complaints. Every time we drive down Forest we think the same thing. So, why can't it be fixed? Actually, the Town already has Chapter 90 money for paving. (This is money from the Commonwealth to be used exclusively for road repair.) The problem is that there are drainage projects that need to be completed before the county will let us do the paving. One of these at Heather Drive was completed this summer. The other is at Forest and Wheelwright Park. The specifications for this second job are just being finished and it should go out for bid shortly. If the weather proves favorable we should be able to get this done before the snow flies. Then and only then will we be allowed to pave Forest Avenue. The DPW is doing a yeoman's job trying to keep the paving passable with cold patch, but as we see it is a very difficult job and it doesn't stay in place very well. Look for a complete paving job next spring.

Veterans Memorial Construction – While we're talking about construction projects in Town there is another project that is just starting. Although this does not fall under our purview, we thought you may want to know about it. Over the last year there have been numerous articles in the Mariner about the plans and fund-raising efforts to reconstruct the Border Street memorial in honor of those Cohasset residents who so nobly served their country. Well, that project has now reached its construction phase. For Memorial Day next year we will have a beautiful new memorial at Veterans Park at the Harbor. So, be careful when driving along Border Street at the Harbor near the Legion, especially since construction equipment may be obstructing both vehicular and pedestrian views.

Town Parking Lot – We mentioned that we did have an opportunity to meet with the MBTA top brass in Boston several weeks ago. Your Greenbush representatives have been busy working on alternative solutions that we can present to the MBTA for its consideration. Our principal interest is to get the discussions moving again. We have heard nothing official, but we have had informal discussion with the MBTA in the Weymouth office since the Boston MBTA meeting.

Pleasant Street intersection — While we are talking about the parking lot we've had discussions with the MBTA and CBB about the incomplete nature of the Pleasant Street intersection. As you can see it has really never been finished. Signs have been installed that make absolutely no sense, in their current alignment. For example, there are "NO Parking" signs that point to the Town Parking Lot. There is no stop line at the intersection of Pleasant Street and Depot Court, so cars entering Depot Court – Ripley Road from Pleasant Street don't know where to stop. Striping has never been completed on Ripley Road near the barbershop to channel the cars effectively into Pleasant Street. CBB is putting so much effort into getting the rail bed complete that small local things that residents must deal with every day sometimes seem to get lost in the shuffle. However, we have reviewed this particular issue with CBB today and they have said they will address this.

Pleasant Street near misses — Also, we've had several residents call us about discourtesies that they have witnessed as cars coming down Ripley Road swing left into the Town Parking lot without yielding to the oncoming Pleasant Street drivers. Several near misses have been reported here. Remember, left turns must always yield to oncoming traffic. We know that the incomplete construction does make things a bit uncertain. But, this is all the more reason to drive slower and with more caution in the Pleasant St. / Depot Court / Pleasant St. area. And, please respect pedestrians, since their crossing areas have not been clearly marked yet.

Pond Street – Well, it's really happened. Pond Street is closed, big time. We expect that it won't be opened for a while (measured in months, not weeks). Of course, Norfolk Road mentioned above is the major detour route for Pond Street. So, when the required several days of grinding and paving start, the detour route will temporarily move to Pleasant Street. Honestly, we don't get our kicks by messing up traffic; we just try to deal with it. Keep in mind, the detour move to Pleasant Street will be brief. The railroad right of way construction is well underway. The asphalt base at Spring and Pond that is placed under all crossings is in place, and on Tuesday of this week the ballast was placed on the track bed. This must be compacted and ties and rails laid and then leveled. Since this area is inaccessible to most residents this photo shows the state of affairs as of this past Wednesday to give you an idea of what's going on.

Rocky Lane Bridge – Work has resumed on the Rocky Lane Bridge once again. CBB's latest word is that the bridge should open by the end of September, but if you look at the picture it will be a very tight photo finish to make that date.

A close call at the ballot box

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Boy, was that a close one!

Do you know I very nearly cast my vote for Chris Gabrieli for governor in the Democratic primary the other day?

There I was, my stylus poised figuratively to punch a hole in my ballot next to his name, leaving nary a chad for the Supreme Court to argue about, when the investigative team from the Boston Herald brought me back to reality.

Do you know that Chris Gabrieli doesn't take out his own trash!

I'll bet Chris had you conned into thinking he was just one of the guys in spite of his home zip code in the most exclusive part of Beacon Hill and the few million in spare change that he invested in his campaign for the corner office.

Do you know that Chris Gabrieli doesn't take out his own trash!

Only a day or so before, the candidate had come out with the new TV spot in which he was being interviewed by his kids when his wife appeared with a bag of trash which he dutifully deposited in a can on the sidewalk.

What newspaper worthy of its Pulitzer can let a fat one like that go by without swinging at it?

Thus it was then that the Herald investigators sprung into action, staking out Chris' Louisburg Square digs for the story and pictures that would blow the campaign apart like Mike Dukakis in a tank or Evelyn Murphy in jogging trunks.

What they got was a page three photo of a young sleepy-eyed woman depositing a trash container (actually a recycling bin) from the Gabrieli hovel at 8 Louisburg Square on the brick sidewalk.

Would you want a governor who has sleepy-eyed young women taking out the trash for him? I thought not.

If that wasn't enough, the Herald also discovered that the bearer of Chris' trash put the bin out at 4:20 p.m., a full 40 minutes before the city says you can, probably an indictable offense anywhere but in Louisburg Square.

Chris' campaign spokesman Joe Ganley tried to weasel his man out of it by saying it was his summerhouse in Beverly, not Boston, where he took out the rubbish but it didn't work. Everybody knows Beverly is the place where the hired help comes from Duxbury.

Actually the fact that Chris lives in Louisburg Square doesn't impress me in the least.

When I was in college, one of my classmates was a Globie named Bud Rodgers, who once freelanced a magazine story on Louisburg Square in which he interviewed a resident who proudly proclaimed that he had the "last active two-holer on the Hill."

For those of you who were not around when ice covered most of the earth, a two-holer is a little house in the backyard, usually with a half moon carved in the door, where, in lieu of indoor plumbing, two people may sit and think at the same time.

Whatever, it has clouded my view of Louisburg Square and the people who live on it ever since.

When life cycles come full circle

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

It's over, people. The end of an era. My last child learned to ride a bike the other day. That cute, "duckling" phase that begins when they enter the world so dumb they have to be told to breathe, and ends roughly the last time you cart them around on the back of your bike, is behind me now. I know, I shouldn't wish for their dependency. I'm glad they're no longer totally helpless; I get it. But there's a reason people love babies — even strangers' babies. Holding one puts you unquestionably on the right side of the issue. The weakest man is made strong. The blackest heart is redeemed.

Then the child grows up, and evolution dictates that she sees you more and more as a dork in her way.

Of course I'm overjoyed for Emily, my six-year-old. I'll never forget what learning to ride a bike felt like. I had a Y-shaped driveway lined on one side with a stonewall, and for three solid hours I rode down on the right, turned left, crashed into the wall, got back on the bike and started around again. I paused briefly for supper, where my scrapes and near-fractures were tended to, then went out for another two hours of the same treatment. I was giddy. There was something supernatural about the trick I was learning. Watching Emily beam as she navigated the driveway I indulged in one of those rare parental moments when you know that nothing could dampen your child's mood.

The timing and the manner in which a child learns to ride a bike may be a perfect window into her personality. Caroline, my oldest, is the quintessential first child. She is the thin edge of the wedge, the point of the spear. She swam a few months after her third birthday and rode a bike at five. She is competitive, focused, a stickler for rules, and her first bike-riding experience reflected all that. She listened to my instructions, followed them, dealt with setbacks, didn't quit, and was off on her own within a day or two.

My middle daughter Mary is from another planet. Mary is a hedonist. Excelling at anything is not high on her agenda. Candy is. And Avatar. Doing something difficult or painful in order to impress someone is an idea that would never cross her mind. She's impervious to peer pressure, or any pressure for that matter. In many ways she is the most intelligent person in the family, and yet she will never graduate from high school because as far as she can tell, Barbie never did either. Mary is living proof that while some girls are headed for the Supreme Court from day one, others are born with their magnetic poles aligned with pop culture and low-cut blue jeans.

Needless to say, my second experience teaching a child to ride a bike was different from the first one. Whereas Caroline was up and riding after a few days of determined effort, Mary chose to spread her lessons over two-and-a-half years. It averaged out to about one minor scrape every four to six months. Then a few weeks ago, quite unexpectedly, she decided bike riding was for her. I don't know why. I suspect it had something to do with a Kim Possible episode, but what's important is that she learned to ride, which finally set the stage for Sister Number 3.

Emily rounds out the field as the absolute definition of a last child. She is the butt of the spear. The caboose on the train. Her only desire is to follow, to be part of the action. She will not be denied her involvement, but refuses to stand out in any way. Until Mary learned to ride a bike Emily showed almost no interest, despite being our most athletic child by far. But once Mary's success cleared Emily for takeoff she was on the runway within minutes, gunning her engines to keep up.

Watching me on a bike for the first time, my parents could tell I was someone who would strive relentlessly and mindlessly toward a goal once I had a good one in sight. Stonewalls, letters of rejection, arrest warrants — these things don't faze me once my wheels are in motion. Have I seen my children's futures as well, with Caroline as a doctor or lawyer, Mary eloping with some dude on the back of his motorcycle, and Emily thrilled with her promotion to Army Private First Class? Only time will tell. You can forgive me for letting these thoughts occupy me over the next several years, while I resign myself to the role of Dork in Their Way.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, still swerving a second too late for some stonewalls, but always happy to be on his bike.

LIBRARY CORNER

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For information on programs and events, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Letters About Literature program under way — It's that time of year again, and Letters About Literature asks students in grades four through 12 to write letters to authors whose work has made a significant difference in their lives. The program invites personal and reflective writing about reading.

LAL is sponsored in Massachusetts by the Massachusetts Center for the Book, with funding from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum, and is a project that feeds into the national program that is run by the Library of Congress with funding from Target.

Local winners receive their awards in a ceremony at the State House. Last year, Madeline Blackburn and Foster Eymer won Level 1 Honorable Mention. To view their letters and read more award-winning letters, go to massbook.org.

Entry forms are available at massbook.org, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, and school libraries. Entry deadline is Dec. 8. See Mrs. Moody or email, smoody@ocln.org for more information.

Artist exhibit – The South Shore Art Center presents "From My Backyard and Beyond," a collection of botanical paintings by Kay Kopper on exhibit at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library through Oct. 31. Gallery hours: Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesday and Friday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Library Book Group – Coffee and discussion of Malika Oufkir's "Stolen Lives: Twenty Years in A Desert Jail" will be discussed Wednesday, Sept. 27, at 10 a.m., in the Meeting Room. This is a biographical account of an upper class Moroccan family's 20 year imprisonment following a 1972 coup attempt against King Hassan II by the father. Call Gayle Walsh 781-383-1348 for more information.

New library hours – As of Sept. 5, library hours will be Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesday and Friday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, from 2 to 5 p.m.

New library brochure – One of the outcomes of the library's Team Works Customer Service grant program is a new brochure guide to library services. The guide, which is available at the Circulation Desk, was funded in part by the federal Library Services Technology Act grant awarded to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in a competitive grant process by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners. The guide is available to the public.

worry that there would be no checks and balances with a Democratic governor and legislature are off base.

"That is a false concern, regularly used to frighten Massachusetts voters into voting Republican," she said. "Checks and balances are built into the structure of government and are blind to party affiliation.

"Checks and balances are built into the structure of government and are blind to party affiliation."

— Agnes McCann, Democratic Town Committee

"Of more concern is that we again elect a person to the Executive Branch who is unwilling or unable to work effectively with the Legislative Branch, like the past several governors."

Kevin O'Donnell, chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee, said he was not surprised by Patrick's victory.

"I travel about the state a lot. The Patrick signs and standouts convinced me he had the extreme liberal voter in a state of euphoria they had not achieved since Bill Clinton swept them off their feet," he said.

O'Donnell said Healey has to explain to the voters that the lack of checks and balances means the failure of a rational governmental process.

"Patrick represents a movement back to the foolish deficit spending of Mike Dukakis," he said. "Patrick and the Democratic house and senate will satisfy the special interests with corrupt, irresponsible spending. They will put the state in a financial death spiral of ever increasing taxes and deficit spending resulting in the loss of business, jobs and citizens fleeing a corrupt system followed by further tax increase on those productive citizens remaining."

Of Cohasset's 5,492 registered voters, 1120 pulled Democratic ballots, and 159 voted Republican. The sole Republican race in the primary was between Kenneth G. Chase and Kevin P. Scott. Chase won Cohasset with a vote of 91-42

Only registered Republicans, Democrats and those who were unenrolled could have voted Tuesday. Unenrolled voters could have asked for either a Republican or Democrat ballot.

State Senator Robert L.Hedlund, a Republican, who was unopposed in the primary, will face Democrat Stephen A. Lynch of Marshfield in November. Lynch beat Matt Mulvey of Weymouth, who has now thrown his support behind Lynch.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, a Democrat, was unopposed in the primary and won't have an opponent in November after all. Hingham resident Bob Green, a Republican, who wanted to challenge Bradley, did not get the 150 write-in votes necessary for his name to appear on the ballot. Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and one precinct in Scituate.

Green described his write-in campaign as positive and a learning experience. "Of course I am disappointed," he said. "It was tough to run a sticker campaign without the volunteers in place.

"I will be ready next time and there will be a next time," he said.

HEALTH NOTES

Operation Poseidon an adventure

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

...it was a full-scale exercise in which participants were brought to the CambridgeSide Galleria Mall to simulate a terrorist event.

Last Sunday, in Cambridge, the towns in Emergency Preparedness district 4-B of which Cohasset is a part, were asked to assist in operation Poseidon, the latest in a series of exercises conducted by Boston Homeland security of the Urban Area Strategic Initiative (UASI) communities, funded by State and Federal authorities and the Office of Homeland Security. It was, in language of the day, a blast! Most of the younger volunteers took the exercise as a lighthearted romp; it was only the professionals who understood the real implications of their work.

Poseidon is the last of three exercises named for Greek gods, Zeus, Prometheus and Poseidon, god of waters, earthquakes and horses. Originally planned for earlier in the year; delayed until September because of expectations for a heavy hurricane season, it was a full-scale exercise in which participants were brought to the CambridgeSide Galleria Mall to simulate a terrorist event. No horses and not much water, except to drink.

The exercise scenario called for the discovery of a potential bomb making apartment in Everett and the receipt of intelligence information indicating that an attack on critical infrastructure near the port was likely. Following the application of protective actions by local law enforcement agencies, the bombers choose less secure targets in the form of the CambridgeSide Galleria and the MBTA's Lechmere Station. While the Lechmere Station bomb was defused, the device at CambridgeSide exploded before anyone could disarm it. The bomb in the Galleria was a radiological dispersal device and for purposes of the exercise it was supposed to have killed and injured a number of shoppers, and contaminated scores of people. In order to test communications, the above information was sent to all area 4-B communities including Cohasset as an opportunity to try our emergency communication capabilities.

The purpose of the affair was to exercise the various local emergency response teams coming from Cambridge and other mutual aid responders and to evaluate and learn from their performance.

A cast of nearly a thousand participants with about 275 volunteer "victims" of all ages participated, with the majority being of late high school or college age. About half of the participants were newcomers and the rest 'old hands'. Participants arrived at the CambridgeSide Galleria parking lot at 5 a.m. Sunday. Shortly before five, the parking area was filled with people. Volunteers manned makeup tables for simulating wounds, facilitators to tell people where to go and what to do, cops, firefighters and every description of medical EMT's that one could imagine, most of whom came from other towns to observe. At the sign-in table, victims were given a laminated 'Operation Poseidon' necklace 'Triage Card' with a patient number, symptoms, condition, simulated respiration, pulse, and blood pressure value and description of mental state. And there the fun begins. Many of the 'victims' were at previous exercises and had come prepared with torn clothes, etc. They would discuss their ailments, and plan what they were going to do, how behave, and what they would say, and tell the eight or ten makeup people what damage to simulate.

The initial "safety" briefing, warned to keep hydrated, and inform medical personnel if they had 'real' symptoms. No pictures were allowed by cameras or cell phones. Finally, we donned white Tyvec suits, which were cut away in spots to reveal our wounds so that, when undressed for examination or decontamination, our real clothes wouldn't have to be removed. Finally, we all went upstairs to be positioned in the dimly lit Galleria.

Upon arrival from the garage, a number of corpse dummies lay about, and several coordinators read every tag and positioned people about the mall depending on symptoms. At 6:30 a.m. the exercise began when a raucous buzzer sounded. Soon, victims began exiting the building, milling around outside, some being carried by other 'victims' some crawling, and in about five minutes the firefighters in full protective clothing began to arrive. A very small number of emergency medical (EMT's) personnel made contact with the victims, and triage points began to develop as individual EMT's began to ask questions and look at the patient tags. In 20 minutes, the radiological decontamination lines were set up and patients scanned with Geiger counters; those with positive readings from having previously been sprayed with a non-hazardous chemical were sent through decon tents. Those who couldn't walk were scanned and then tagged as having to go to Medical facilities for decontamination. Those with red tags labeled as untreatable were left, and those with yellow or green tags were moved to ambulances and busses to go to treatment centers: Mass General, (MGH) Brigham's and several other nearby hospitals. At MGH there was a full decontamination area for wheelchair and stretcher cases. Patients were then sent upstairs for medical examination with full paperwork and patient forms filled out just as done for any hospital patient. These forms were then carried by the patients; either treated and discharged or listed as having been kept for treatment. The exercise ended at about 10:30 and, by about 11:30, all of the victims had been processed and bussed back to the Royal Sonesta for final checkout and lunch.

As a victim/observer for Cohasset, it's clear that we can reach some conclusions about the way we do things here: First, there will never be enough prepared personnel including volunteers notified and trained ahead of time. Organizations such as the Community Center, Elder Affairs and the Board of Health are key to having trained volunteers available to cope with emergencies. These people have one characteristic, which may well prove critical in an emergency: local allegiance. Contract EMT's, ambulance services and other health personnel may not have the motivation to respond to another place if their own homes are threatened. Second, there seems to be lack of medical support with responsibility to cope with local major emergencies. It gives one pause when we consider reduction of the Town's trained staff of emergency personnel; especially EMT's.

Benefit concert Sunday at St. Anthony's

Between the two, they have sung in virtually every major opera house and concert hall in Europe and New England.

Dramatic mezzo-soprano Carla Paryla of Rome will be joined by her teacher, guest soprano Norma Giustiani of Scituate and Rome, for a benefit concert Sunday, Sept. 24, at 5 p.m. at St. Anthony Church, Summer Street. Between the two, they have sung in virtually every major opera house and concert hall in Europe and New England.

Paryla has recently performed for Pope Benedict XVI at Castelgandolfo and at The Church of the Angels in Rome, and Giustiani has recorded "The Student Prince" with Mario Lanza. Pianist at the concert, Bill Merrill, has been featured on the television program "Good Morning America."

Admission is free. Donations welcome for the benefit of the parish HVAC fund.

Music at the Gazebo free Sunday concert

The final "Music at the Gazebo" concert will take place at Veterans' Memorial Park at the intersection of Nantasket and Samoset Avenues across from Lucky Star Restaurant in Hull on Sept. 24 from 3 to 4:30 pm.

On Sept. 24, Bobbi Carrey and Doug Hammer also return to the Gazebo with their nostalgic tunes. Carrey has performed to critical acclaim in Boston and Cambridge. Jordan Rich of WBZ Boston radio has said, "Her vocal interpretations and appreciation of the 'story behind the song' makes her one of our most precious and important performers."

Concertgoers should bring their own seating. Performance will be canceled in case of rain.

CHS field hockey getting good contributions across the board

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

So far in the 2006 season, it appears that the Cohasset High field hockey team is making a break for the upper echelon of South Shore League teams. Time will tell whether they succeed in this undertaking.

Three factors will determine the fate of the Skippers. First, Cohasset needs to defeat the league's tougher teams at Alumni Field. Second, they cannot afford to play down to the skill levels of the average teams on the schedule.

Finally, the Skippers must make use of what head coach Deb Bostwick calls their "secret weapons." Over the past few games, two first-year varsity players – juniors Olivia Kimla and Katina Martone – have emerged as strong forces on the field.

Two first-year varsity players – juniors Olivia Kimla and Katina Martone – have emerged as strong forces on the field.

Take, for example, one of the Skippers' best games to date: a 3-0 loss to Harwich last Friday.

"The score doesn't say much at all about how well the girls played," said Bostwick about her own Cohasset team.

Indeed, to the fans who left at halftime (which was probably very few), it would appear that the Skippers were on the road to beating the Rough Riders for the first time in 18 years.

"We were stride for stride, shot for shot with Harwich in the first half," said senior captain Sheelah Scott.

Under constant fire, the defense held strong against the aggressive Rough Riders. Junior Sally Meehan played "her best game of the year," according to Bostwick. Senior captain Alida Tangherlini owned her zone alongside Meehan, and senior Michelle Madge put on a strong showing at sweeper.

With the very short grass surface, the pace of this game had even the fans out of breath. Despite this, Bostwick made very few substitutions because of how well the Skippers were working with each other.

The next surprise came from the offensive line. Although Cohasset couldn't find the back of the Harwich goal, Bostwick pointed out Kimla for having an outstanding game up front. Coming up from JV last year, Kimla's speed and fearlessness have set her apart so far in the '06 season.

In the midfield, senior captain Caitlin Hurley and junior Corinna Durham kept the Rough Riders on their toes.

Unfortunately, three goals from Harwich in the second half supported their reputation as one of the most feared teams in the SSL.

"When we came off the field tied 0-0 at half time, we realized that this game was ours for the taking," explained senior Molly Gallagher. "Since we wanted the win so badly, we started to feel a lot of pressure. We panicked a little bit, but there's always next time on our home turf."

The Skippers will certainly look forward to the challenge when Harwich comes to CHS on Oct. 5.

Preceding this nerve-wracking Harwich showdown, the Skippers battled out Westwood for a decisive 4-1 victory. In this case, Cohasset exhibited their ability to maintain control against less skilled teams.

In the first half, Meehan found Scott for a goal. Soon after, Durham assisted Kimla on a drive down the right side of the field for goal number two.

In the second half, Kimla shared the wealth with an assist to Scott. Finally, Scott iced the cake with a pass to Martone for the Skippers' final goal. Martone, another first-year varsity player, has been another much-wel-

Skippers stun Archies with 20 fourth quarter points for comeback win

By Mark Goodman

BRAINTREE – Stunned.

That is the best word to sum up the emotions of Archbishop Williams football fans and players last Saturday, as the visiting Skippers of Cohasset High scored all 20 of their points in the fourth quarter for a rousing 20-14 victory.

And the improbable comeback was completed on the most improbable of plays: a halfback option.

With 33 seconds to go and the ball at the Bishops' 44-yard line, Skippers senior quarterback Anthony DiPaulo took the snap and pitched the ball to his left to junior Brian Hill. Hill, last year's backup quarterback, sold the run long enough the draw the defense before lofting a pass down the sideline to junior wideout Pat Doonan.

Archies senior defensive back Branden Morris began scrambling back and looked like he may have a shot at getting to the pass. Instead, it floated just past his fingertips and into the hands of Doonan, who sprinted into the end zone for the game-winning score.

Just a perfectly normal ending to another day at the office for Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw and his team.

"You have to have a few tricks in the bag; that just seemed to be the right call at the time," Afanasiw said of the play. "But the kids still have to make the play, and they did. Brian Hill hit [Doonan] in stride."

As time expired, Cohasset senior Fletcher Smalzel picked off a last-ditch bomb by Bishops senior signal-caller Mike Sieminski. The last play of the game was fitting, as the Skippers' defense was the story of the second half.

Coming off a first half in which it scored 14 points, Archies started the third quarter with its own trick, a brilliant onside kick by senior tri-captain Chris Costello. The Weymouth native kicked the ball along the ground in front of him and fell on it just as it crossed the 50-yard line – a perfectly executed play.

CHS girls soccer kicks off a stretch of 7 straight away matches

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High girls soccer team is entering a part of its schedule that will go a long way in determining what kind of season this is going to be.

The Skippers (5-1 overall, 3-1 league) have thus far been one of the South Shore League's better teams, with their lone blemish being a 2-1 loss to Abington last Thursday. Cohasset rebounded from that with a 4-2 win over Carver on Monday and an 8-0 thrashing of Harwich on Wednesday.

That Harwich match, though, kicked off a run of seven straight games away from Alumni Field. Included in that stretch is a showdown next Friday against three-time defending league champion Norwell (4-0-1, 3-0-1). The Skippers won't play at home again until Oct. 16, when they host the Rough Riders.

In Cohasset's victory against Carver, four different players got into the score column, continuing a season-long theme of goals coming from different sources. Seniors Lara Novak and Haley Haracz scored in the first half, with sophomores Sarah Coggins and Torey Hart tallying in the second.

Haracz's goal, a well placed effort from 25 yards out, was particularly key, as it broke a 1-1 deadlock with 1:56 remaining in the first half.

Cohasset clearly carried the momentum over into the second half. In the 46th minute, Coggins set up freshman Mackenzie Hart with a nice pass across the top of the Carver penalty area, and Hart's shot went just wide of the net. Coggins scored just three minutes later, however, getting to a corner from Torey Hart and poking the ball with the side of her foot into the net for a 3-1 lead.

Travis Roy to speak at Pilgrim Skating Arena

This Saturday (Sept. 23) at 1 p.m., Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham is hosting Travis Roy, who will be speaking to the Yankee Conference hockey players at their yearly mandatory checking clinic and signing copies of his book, Eleven Seconds. The event is open to anyone interested in attending.

The arena is having a raffle to raise money for the Travis Roy Foundation. Among the items that will be raffled off are four luxury box tickets to a Boston Bruins game, donated by Coca-Cola. The Bruins Foundation has donated a hockey stick and Bruins hats signed by the team.

Reebok/CCM, Nike/Bauer, Mission/Itech, Easton and Smart Hockey have all donated to the raffle with all proceeds going to the Travis Roy Foundation. US Foods has donated ice cream, which will be free to the kids attending.

Also available will be coupons to the Pro shop and Snack Bar. If you spend $10 or more you get a free skate sharpening and 10 percent off your entire purchase that day and $1-off coupons for the snack bar.

On Oct. 20, 1995, only 11 seconds into the first shift of his college hockey career at Boston University, Roy was checked from behind into the boards and shattered his fourth and fifth cervical vertebra, severely damaging his spinal cord. Roy is now a quadriplegic, with no feeling below his shoulders and movement only in his right arm.

Roy is now an accomplished public speaker. The Travis Roy Foundation was established in 1997 to help spinal cord injury survivors and to fund research into a cure. Pilgrim Arena will be donating a check to the Foundation.

Skippers stun Archies with comeback win

Three plays later – and thanks in part to a holding penalty on Archies – the Skippers defense had forced a punt.

"The defense held them off nicely; that was a play that could've broken us," Afanasiw said. "A lot of it is because of our seniors. I could hear them in that huddle with coach [Bob] Silvia, and they basically said, 'Get on our backs.' They weren't going to get defeated."

The coach praised his two senior captains, defensive tackle Justin Alexander and linebacker Colin Conway, for establishing that attitude. The Skippers would need that leadership on defense again after they turned the ball over on downs following a 12-play, 75-yard march that brought them to the Bishops' 10.

It was there, however, on a fourth-and-1 that Archies junior Kyle Holmes stuffed Skippers junior P.J. McCaw at the line to give the ball back to the Bishops. After senior Joe Tran ran the ball three times in a row for 18 yards to finish the third quarter, the home team appeared to have all the momentum.

But on the first play of the fourth quarter, Alexander and junior cornerback David Snowdale combined for a sack of Sieminski, and Archies punted two plays later. A solid punt return by Smalzel followed by a 27-yard run from Hill put the ball deep in Archies territory.

Fifty-seven yards and one extra point later, it was a tied game.

and DiPaulo finished the drive four plays later with a four-yard run on an option to the left side.

After Cohasset junior Schyuler Wakefield recovered a Bishops fumble at the Cohasset 25, runs from Hill and McCaw set up a second-and-5 at the Skippers' 43. DiPaulo ran a bootleg around the left side, broke a couple tackles near the line of scrimmage and took off behind the blocking of McCaw and junior tackle Jake Cuneo.

Fifty-seven yards and one extra point later, it was a tied game.

"Without that play, we're still looking for answers," Afanasiw said. "Anthony is just a natural athlete that makes plays and makes things happen."

Another sack by Alexander on Archies' ensuing possession forced the Bishops to punt, and Cohasset took over at its own 24 with 1:15 to play. Seven plays and one timeout later, it was Hill finding Doonan for the game-deciding play.

Hill finished the afternoon with 138 yards rushing, followed by DiPaulo (81), junior Kyle Pinkus (32) and McCaw (12) to round out a 263-yard performance. It was Cohasset's second straight strong game on the ground to open the season, and Afanasiw again gave a lot of the credit to the big guys up front.

"You need linemen that can get the job done. That front five, I'll put them up against everybody," said the coach. "They're executing and getting better each week."

Archies had 164 running yards of their own, led by Tran (61 on 13 rushes), followed by Sieminski (41) junior Kevin Pateline (37) and Costello (23). Tran and Pateline are the Bishops' touchdowns, both on two-yard carries.

The Skippers (2-0) host Cardinal Spellman today (Sept. 22) at 3:30 p.m. The Cardinals are coming off a 20-16 loss to another South Shore League team, Norwell.

Defensive coordinator Bob Silvia instructs David Snowdale (10) and Anderson Lynner to go at a tiring Bishops offense during Saturday's game. Cohasset's defense pitched a second half shutout to keep the Skippers in the game and set the stage for the fourth quarter dramatics.

The players' take

The halfback option that won Saturday's game against Archbishop Williams was just the latest memory in what has become one of the more compelling rivalries in the area.

Here is what the key players had to say about the play:

The pass thrower, Brian Hill: "It was something we knew we could do. We had worked on it a lot in practice, but when we came into the huddle, I had forgotten about it. But when that call came in, I said, 'We're going to score.'"

The pass catcher, Pat Doonan: "It was perfect play execution. I saw the defensive back take one step up, so I ran behind him and Brian made a nice pass. Everything worked."

The quarterback, Anthony DiPaulo: "When we scored that touchdown, you could see their (Archies players) jaws hit the floor. It was gratifying because we've had an especially good rivalry with them. The games have been close for the last three years."

- Mark Goodman

JV gridders working hard

The JV football team is also getting in the swing of things.

In Nantucket two weeks ago, the Skippers opened up a 6-0 lead in the first half on a quarterback sneak by Johnny Maher. Nantucket came back and scored twice to take the lead 14-6.

With 2:30 left to play, the Skippers marched 95 yards down the field for a touchdown. Alec Livingstone converted for the two points, giving the Skippers a tie as they scrambled to the ferry to head back home.

Last week, the JVs battled a bigger Archbishop Williams team. It was a defensive stalemate for much of the game. Early penalties against the Bishops kept them from the end zone as did a fumble on the Skippers 5-yard line.

Coach Brian Pattison commented, "Our field position was tough for the whole game. We had to fight our way out of our territory, but I saw improvements in the second half."

Archies scored in the first half to lead 8-0. In the second half, a focused Skippers squad came out roaring. An interception and 16-yard return by Maher gave the Skippers significant momentum. Derek Schwantner gained much needed yards on a long catch.

And it was Maher to Nick Savage for the touchdown. Unfortunately, the conversion failed. Coach Craig Davis commented, "Our defense played strongly. We need to gain more consistency from our offense and our boys are working hard towards that goal."

Coach Pattison said, "Our sophomore leadership is the heart and soul of this team. They work hard and lead by example. Charlie Mushin, Mike Froio, Matt Wasel, all the sophomores, give 110 percent and are good role models for the freshman. Our backfield is strong; we have good depth. Good things are happening."

CHS golfers aim for second

The Skippers travel to Quincy on Monday before hosting league foe Mashpee on Tuesday and traveling to Harwich on Wednesday.

After losing both of its matches to Norwell – including a tough 27.5-26.5 decision on Tuesday at Cohasset Country Club – the Cohasset High golf team faces long odds in defending its South Shore League championship.

But, having already defeated the other five teams in the league, the Skippers have set the attainable goal of finishing second. The team is also looking forward to the league's stroke play tournament on Oct. 19 at Southers Marsh in Plymouth (Carver's home course).

Cohasset improved to 5-2 on the season with Wednesday's 31-23 win over Abington at Strawberry Valley. Senior Zach Murray earned medalist honors by shooting a +2 36, good enough to defeat his opponent 7.5-1.5 in match play. Fellow senior Kevin Barber was right behind with a 37.

At the fourth spot in the lineup, sophomore Jon Wade improved his record for the season to 6-0-1 with a 5.5-3.5 win. Freshman Ian Quinlin, in his first varsity match, earned a tie with his Green Wave opponent.

In Tuesday's loss to Norwell, Cohasset had three of its six golfers win their match. Skippers number-3, junior Charlie Czerkawski, shot a 44 to defeat Norwell junior Mike White, 5-4. Freshmen Chase Stebbins and John Sturino both won at five and six, respectively.

Stebbins has turned in an impressive season so far, going 5-1-1 while competing at the fifth spot in the lineup all year. At number-6, Sturino (2-1-1) and junior Chris Mills (2-0-1) had both split time before Quinlin's debut on Wednesday.

Playing in the alternate spots have been seniors Owen Stevenson and John Coffey; juniors Matt Blaze, and Conor Michaud; sophomore Pat Hurley; and freshemn Conor Queenan and Harry Cipolla.

The Skippers travel to Quincy on Monday before hosting league foe Mashpee on Tuesday and traveling to Harwich on Wednesday.

Torey Hart (19) is the Skippers' leading scorer with six goals going into Wednesday's (Sept. 20) game against Harwich.

That would be all the scoring Cohasset needed, through Torey Hart put one in for good measure in the middle of the second half, scoring on a breakaway set up by a good pass from sophomore Maggie McGoldrick.

Cohasset head coach Deb Beal said after the game the team made a key adjustment at halftime and then followed it through with proper execution on the pitch.

"At halftime, we talked about possession, and we came out and connected on five or six passes in a row right off the bat," Beal said. "So they listen and they work hard at possessing the ball."

The defense took care of the rest. Coggins and junior left back Anna Haggerty did a nice job of containing Carver's Tina Gillen, one of the league's fastest and most talented players. Sophomore sweeper Sammie Lehr played well as the last line of defense, as Carver rarely got into the Skippers penalty box.

The match got off to a slow start, but in the eighth minute, Novak scored the game's first goal, also coming on a corner from Hart. With that goal, Cohasset's quick passing game began to pick up the pace. On one particular play in the 27th, Sarah Coggins found her older sister, Emily, with a pass up the left sideline. Emily then played a great through ball to junior Meg Anderson for a breakaway; only a good stop from the Carver keeper kept the ball out of the net.

Carver did manage to tie up with nine minutes to go in the half, but the Skippers went right back to work and scored a well-earned goal from Haracz.

The win was the team's first game since the Abington loss. Beal said her team did not play well in the first half and found itself in a 2-0 hole at the break. A goal by Sarah Coggins from just outside the 18 brought the Skippers back in the game, but they couldn't get the equalizer.

Cohasset will be hoping to reproduce that second half over the full 80 minutes when the teams play again in Abington on Oct. 10.

Overall, Beal is pleased with her team's 5-1 start, during which Cohasset has outscored its opponents 31-4. The coach gives a lot of credit to her four senior captains, Novak, Emily Coggins, Caren Garber and Kara Wilcox.

"The senior leadership has been great, and the younger kids are bringing new ideas to the table," said Beal. "We have such great chemistry. I've never had a team get along as well as this one."

comed surprise to Bostwick with her aggressiveness.

In the middle, Bostwick commended senior captain Laura Campedelli, senior Virginia Spofford, junior Meghan Coakley and sophomore Georgia Murley. Defensively, Gallagher and junior Sondra Hart have adapted well to some shifting in positions.

For the near future, the Skippers face off against Mashpee and Carver this week. Bostwick plans to utilize her deep bench to wear down the opponents in the midfield. So far, Bostwick feels that Cohasset's midfield line, consisting of Campedelli, Durham, Hurley, Murley, and Coakley, has done a great job in transition.

Scott agreed, saying, "The middies and the forwards communicate really well together. This definitely helps us to get into scoring position."

Cohasset Youth Baseball Major League tryouts

The tryouts for the 2007 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held on Saturday, Sept. 23 at Barnes Field from noon to 2:30 p.m.

All boys and girls who are age 10 prior to May 1, 2007 and no older than age 12 on April 30, 2007 and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try out. All 12-year olds (born between May 1, 1994 and April 30, 1995) who attend the tryouts are automatically selected for a Major League team.

Please note: Effective for the 2008 season, 12-year olds are automatic selections for the major leagues provided that they attend the tryout and play at least one year in the American League.

Players should register at Barnes Field beginning at 11:30 a.m. This will be the only opportunity to try out. The rain date will be Saturday, Sept. 30. Please visit our website CYBSA.net for more information. Questions regarding the tryouts may be directed to Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538 or Nancy Froio at (781)383-1897.

12U softball tryouts

Cohasset youth softball, a girls fast-pitch organization, will be holding tryouts for their 12U team on Sunday, Sept. 24 from 1 to 3 p.m. at Freedom Diamond at the Barnes Complex in Cohasset. To be considered for the team, you must be 12 years of age on Jan. 1, 2007.

This is a new tournament team that is looking for highly motivated and dedicated team players for the 2007 summer season. All positions are available, making for a great opportunity for players. The current plan is to play a minimum of four weekend tournaments in June and July after the CYBSA season has ended.

For more information on the tryouts or the team in general, contact Rob Spofford at (781)383-1680 or email Spofford@spoffordgroup.com.

Boot Camp fitness training

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a bi-weekly Boot Camp Fitness Training Program to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, Sept. 19 through Thursday, Nov. 23 on Cohasset Common, in front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset. You may register by calling the recreation department at (781)383-4109.

The session concludes Thursday, Nov. 23 (Thanksgiving Day) with a race in Hingham.

Ms. Callanan will run an interval callisthenic and running fitness program for both men and women of all ability levels. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardiovascular training format, included will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit-ups, etc. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardiovascular endurance and strength.

Please dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope, and wear running shoes. Success in this class is based upon your individual personal best, not as a competition with others.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Plenty of news to keep you awake

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Week 3. To sleep or not to sleep, that is the question. Staying up to finish our assignments cuts into the slumber that fuels us through the day. Collectively, students become irritable and struggle to stay conscious in class. Recently, Time Magazine published an article about the detrimental effects of homework. Look it up online, the research is really interesting. This should keep you awake: here's the news for this week, and plenty of it.

• Debate team has a new coach, Mr. Willis.

• The Social Awareness Organization had their first meeting Thursday after school

• National Honor Society is in the process of deciding their group project.

• Project SAFEGUARD met Monday after school.

• This week Student Council speeches were given for the positions of Student Council President and Vice President. Results will be announced next week.

• Wednesday was a gladly welcomed half-day, and Parents Night at the middle and high school

• The Cohasset School Foundation met Thursday night.

• School Committee met Wednesday night.

• Congratulations to Emily Nash and Ellen Tarpey, recently published authors in Teen Ink magazine! Ms. Berman's English classes submit work for this national publication all year, so let's hope we get some more published authors.

• Congratulations to Madame Kelly, department chair of the Foreign Language Department on maternity leave, who gave birth to a baby girl Mackenzie!

• On a personal note, this reporter met with the State Student Advisory Council on Thursday. I serve as an elected delegate and a member of the Legislative work group on the SSAC, representing approximately 23,000 students across the state. Last year Jean Thomae and I were elected to the Greater Boston Regional Student Advisory Council, and we will both be attending meetings throughout the school year.

• The entire sixth-grade will be making their trip to Camp Bournedale next week. The memorable experience is a staple of growing up in Cohasset Public Schools system.

• The Spinnaker staff is hard at work collecting donations and advertisements in addition to completing their stories. Some members were at Back to School night Wednesday selling subscriptions and accepting donations.

•Seniors are compiling résumés, brag sheets and writing college essays. The challenge here is writing effectively and setting oneself apart from the masses of applicants in 500 words or so. Piece of cake, right?

The weather is all that remains of summer as we near the end of September. Have a great weekend. Cohasset. Monday will be here before we know it.

Thomas Buckley and Emily St. John, who are now freshmen, received their Scholar Leader Awards for outstanding scholarship and leadership last spring.

CMHS students earn Scholar Leader Award

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Two new freshmen at Cohasset High School ended their careers at the middle school on a high note, as both were awarded the Scholar Leader Award, given by the New England League of Middle Schools.

Emily St. John and Thomas Buckley were both recognized for their achievements at a banquet held this spring at the DCU Center in Worcester. In a letter sent to the students from Middle School Assistant Principal Beth Sternala she praised the students for their achievements.

"During your career at Cohasset Middle School, you have achieved high standards academically; you have demonstrated integrity, honesty, self-discipline and courage; you have provided service to your classmates and school, and you have served as a role model for your peers, making you an optimal candidate for this award. We are proud of your efforts and achievements and feel honored to have you represent our school."

The Scholar Leader Award program is intended to give public recognition to two students from each middle school in the state that have distinguished themselves in terms of outstanding scholarship and leadership. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts Middle Level Educators and the New England League of Middle Schools organize the award annually.

Informal screening for 3 and 4 year olds

The Osgood Preschool staff in conjunction with the school nurse will hold informal screenings for children on the third Friday of every month from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. The remaining dates are Oct. 20, Nov. 17, Dec. 15, 2006; Jan. 19, Feb. 16, March 16, April 27, May 18, 2007.

These screenings will consist of a play group activity as well as opportunities for vision, hearing and posture screening. These screenings are to assist in identifying those students who should be referred for an evaluation to determine eligibility for special education.

If you are interested in having your child participate, contact one of the preschool staff at 781-383-6117 no later than the Wednesday prior to one of the scheduled screenings.

August was busy for fire department

A summary of Fire Department responses during the August is as follows: building fires two; brush fires two; motor vehicle fires two; motor vehicle crashes 10; medical emergencies 88; inspections 57; investigations eight; assistance calls four; and miscellaneous responses 45. Forty-eight emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 47 medical emergencies and one fire call, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln stated in his monthly status report.

The Fire Department ambulance transported 63 patients to South Shore Hospital. Mutual aid ambulances transported five patients to South Shore Hospital. Med-Flight Helicopter transported a victim of an industrial accident to a Boston hospital. One motor vehicle crash required that a patient be transported to South Shore Hospital, Lincoln said.

Fire alarm activation responses totaled 20 during the month of August. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for six responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of 14 responses. The two responses classified as building fires were caused by electrical malfunctions: one in a fluorescent light fixture and one in an air conditioning system component, Lincoln said.

You can make enormous profits!

How To Buy & Sell Houses In The New England Area Without Using Your Money Or Credit!

Let's say you don't have enough money... plus you have lousy credit or don't want to use your good credit.

And, let's say you want to make huge profits buying and selling houses in New England.

Can it be done? Absolutely! And, here's why: There's a man in Jacksonville, Florida who's bought and sold over 1600 houses all over the United States. He became a multi-millionaire doing this.

From humble beginnings as an auto mechanic, working fourteen hours a day to make ends meet, he built a fortune in real estate… starting from scratch… with no previous experience.

Why is this important to you? Simple! Over the years as he was struggling to figure out the secrets of real estate investing, without using his money or credit, he began building step-by-step systems almost anyone could duplicate to knock off ten years from their learning curve.

Then he started sharing his secrets with others and it wasn't long before the success stories started rolling in and he became known as the world's leading expert in Quick Turn Real Estate and built a secret society of real millionaires spanning North America.

If you'd like to be part of this, the first thing you have to do is learn how to find great real estate deals. Plus, there are a few other "trade secrets" you need to know. How are you going to learn all these secrets? That's easy. The man in Jacksonville (his name is Ron LeGrand) has spent a small fortune to put on Workshops in the New England area. All you have to do is go to one of these Workshops and you'll learn his secrets...

100% Free!

There's no cost to you whatsoever to attend. There are 6 Workshops scheduled throughout the course of 3 days: Friday, September 22nd, 1:00-4:30 p.m. and 6:00-9:30 p.m.; September 23rd, Saturday 9:00 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. and 2:00 - 5:30 p.m.; and Sunday, September 24th 9:00 a.m. - 12:30 and 2:00 - 5:30 p.m.

It's recommended you get there about an hour early. Be sure to bring pen and paper... because... during this Workshop, you'll learn secrets about making HUGE profits in real estate... which... will amaze you... and...

You Can Come To This Workshop Absolutely Free!

Here's a "taste" of what you'll learn at this Workshop:

- ✔ How you (regardless of your credit or financial status) can make $10,000 per month (every month of the year) without spending a dime of your own money!
- ✔ Where to find the best deals in the shortest time with the least amount of effort!
- ✔ How to buy your own "dream home" without money or credit! (URGENT: Don't even think about buying a home until you learn this.)
- ✔ Why you should NEVER ask a bank for a loan! It's absolutely NOT necessary... and... it's also a royal pain.
- ✔ The 5 steps to real estate success and why... if even one of them is out of place... your real estate profits will *vanish!
- ✔ Who are the very best people to buy houses from... and why... you should ONLY deal with these people!
- ✔ The two fastest ways to pick up a big check ($10,000 or more) in less than one month after you come to the free Workshop!
- ✔ How to (legally) make all your real estate profits... 100% tax free!

"...two fast ways to pick up a big check ($10,000 or more) in less than 30-days after you attend the Workshop..."

This Workshop could change your life. Just think: You'll be able to buy and sell houses in New England with no credit, no money and without risking any of your savings. Actually, even if your credit is perfect, there's still no reason to tie up your credit and put yourself at risk with loads of loans.

You'll never have to deal with bad tenants who kick holes in your walls, stop up toilets... or... who move out in the middle of the night... still owing you rent!

No loans and no banks. The secrets you'll learn will make banks and loans 100% unnecessary.

No real estate license required! When you learn to do business this way, you will NOT need any kind of license.

Isn't It Time To Get Some Excitement Back In Your Life And Have Some Fun While You Get Rich?

If that's something which appeals to you, come check out this Workshop. You'll probably be so excited by what's revealed, you'll have a hard time sleeping that night.

The Workshops will be held on Friday, September 22nd at the Marriott Hartford Rocky Hill in Rocky Hill CT.; Saturday, September 23rd at the Marriott Boston Burlington in Burlington, MA; and Sunday, September 24th at the Marriott Boston Newton in Newton, MA

Be sure to go to one of these Workshops. It'll only last a few hours... but... it will change your life.

Seats are limited and pre-registration is required. Seats are given on a first-call, first-served basis.

Once you attend you'll receive Ron LeGrand's Property Inspection Quick Start Kit... valued at $99.95. This kit is designed to help launch your new career so you'll be able to leave the Workshop and start looking at properties like a professional.

It's easy to attend. All you have to do is call the toll-free number below (it won't cost you a single penny to make this call), give your name and address and...

You Can Bring Your Friends!

Flute and Harp Concert celebrates Mozart's birthday

Boston-based duo 2, with Peter H. Bloom, flute, and Mary Jane Rupert, harp, will perform "Intimate Mozart," a flute and harp concert celebrating Mozart's 250th birthday, on Sunday, Sept. 24, at 3 p.m., at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave. Cohasset. Admission is free; donations are welcome. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

The program will feature two of the composer's masterpieces: Concerto in C Major (K.299) for Flute and Harp and the Turkish Concerto in A Major (K. 219), originally written for violin and performed in the Sept. 24 concert in a seldom-heard transcription for flute. The duo will also perform selections from "Don Giovanni" and other Mozart operas.

"We're performing two of Mozart's most famous and spectacular concertos," said Bloom. "Usually, they're presented in large concert halls with full orchestra. In our 'unplugged Wolfgang,' the audience has a rare chance to hear the soloists in an intimate setting, without the distraction of an orchestra. No notes, nuances or gestures are lost, yet everything is more vivid."

Bloom and Rupert have performed together for more than 15 years, appearing in venues across the United States, and have two compact discs on the North Star label.

Acclaimed as a concert pianist and harpist, Rupert has given solo recitals from Carnegie Hall to Beijing Concert Hall, and has appeared with symphony orchestras and chamber ensembles throughout the United States. She can be heard on CDs from North Star and Harmony Hill. She's on the faculties of Wellesley College, Tufts University, Boston College and MIT. Rupert earned a bachelor of music degree in piano from Oberlin College, and holds master's degrees in piano and harp, and a doctor of music degree in piano performance and music literature from Indiana University.

— Peter H. Bloom, Boston-based duo 2

Bloom has given solo recitals from Boston's Jordan Hall to Beverly Hills, tours nationally with chamber groups and jazz ensembles and appears on more than 25 CDs. He is a winner of the American Musicological Society's Noah Greenberg Award for his work in 19th century American music. Bloom is a historical instrument consultant to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, has served on the faculties of New England Conservatory and Regis College, and is a board member of the James Pappoutsakis Flute Competition. He holds a master's degree in music in flute performance with distinction from the New England Conservatory.

Tickets available for animal shelter benefit

Tickets are now available for the Scituate Animal Shelter's Bark 'n Howl Ball, Saturday, Oct. 28, at the River Club in Scituate, from 7 p.m. to midnight. The evening will include a buffet dinner, cash bar and dancing to the music of local band Section 8. There will also be silent and live auctions.

Tickets are $125 each, $100 is tax deductible, and all proceeds benefit the 3A Farm Fund. Volunteers still need to raise $150,000 for a new 2,500 square foot animal shelter at Route 3A and Mann Lot Road, Scituate, to replace the facility currently on the Driftway. Since 1993, the no-kill shelter has served the towns of Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull, accommodating stray, homeless, injured and surrendered companion animals.

Tickets are $125 each, $100 is tax deductible, and all proceeds benefit the 3A Farm Fund.

Tickets to the Bark 'n Howl Ball are limited and are available at the Shelter on the Driftway in Scituate and Sylvia's by the Sea in Scituate Harbor. Reserved tables and sponsorships are available.

For more information, call the shelter at 781-545-8703. Shelter hours are Monday through Friday, from 4 to 6 p.m., and Saturday 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information and to follow the progress of the relocation, visit town.scituate.ma.us/animalshelter or 3afarmfund.com.

Love, Caribbean style

Royal Clipper provides tropical setting for romance

By JESSICA HESLAM and DAVE WEDGE

ABOARD THE ROYAL CLIPPER -- As we relaxed in a rope net suspended over the turquoise waters of the Caribbean, we watched spectacular sails being hoisted and knew this was no ordinary cruise.

But with a diamond ring hidden away in a suitcase, only one of us knew just how unforgettable it would be.

We had arrived in sunny Bridgetown, Barbados, to catch this classic sailing ship, and were welcomed onboard with rum punch-filled champagne flutes, tropical music and a buffet of appetizers.

Our hammock relaxing came after an overnight in one of the Royal Clipper's standard oceanview cabins, small but comfortable (some cabins are inside, without views, and there are also suites available).

On our first full day onboard this 220-passenger, five-mast vessel, we were slicing through the smooth-as-glass waters of the Caribbean en route to Union Island, a tiny and nearly deserted paradise in the Grenadine Islands of the West Indies.

The white-sand beach of remote Chatham Bay was a quick and easy boat ride from our vessel, and we carried along towels, sunblock and reading material -- and an urge to relax.

There wasn't a cloud in the sky as we claimed a spot in the shade of a palm tree and headed into the crystal clear waters, admiring our proud sailing ship anchored in the distance.

While there are the usual cruise ship spaces onboard the Royal Clipper -- dining room, swimming pools, spa, bar -- they are limited and being on this ship is much more intimate. We felt like lucky guests on some millionaire's private yacht.

Built in 1990 in Europe, the Royal Clipper boasts 42 sails that stretch nearly 200 feet into the sky, making it the tallest fully-rigged sailing ship in the world.

Royal Clipper in The Grenadines

St. Lucia hot springs

Each time the vessel leaves port, guests flock to the top deck and marvel as the crew lowers the massive sails while dramatic Greek music plays -- locals onshore admire the sight too.

There's nothing quite like the first time you see the sails go up; we never tired of the sight, although that music got old after a point. Admiring the sails at night with cocktails in hand on the open deck is very romantic in a swashbuckling sort of way.

The Royal Clipper is a classy, upscale ship, but it isn't for everybody. It's not as stabilized as cruise ships and some may get seasick. At times, you can really feel every roll and every wave. It took some getting used to, but by the second night we had our sea legs.

Another port on our weeklong adventure was Grenada, a tropical island known for its spices. Our cab driver took us to the tourist-packed Grand Mal beach, where we were instantly mobbed by locals peddling trinkets.

We passed and instead wandered to the Grenada Grand Beach Resort, where we found some chairs under a leafy tree and relaxed with a reasonably priced cold beer and pina colada from a nearby outdoor bar.

After sunset, we took a small boat back to our ship, its white lights shimmering off the sea.

Dinner shipboard is in the dining room, with an ornate, grand spiral staircase descending into the space and colorful murals giving the setting an old European charm. The international menu is heightened by the attentive and diverse staff who hail from around the globe.

The guests, too, come from all over for this unusual sailing experience. Among our newfound friends were a Guatamalan ship builder named Achilles, a friendly couple from the tiny British island of Guernsey, a Texas couple on their 25th anniversary and a Pittsburgh neurologist and his wife.

The food is less mass-produced and much fresher than the fare on large cruise ships. The chefs pick up the catch of the day at each port and prepare it flawlessly. We didn't have a morsel of seafood -- or even a piece of fruit -- that was anything less than outstanding.

By far, our favorite port was Tobago Cays, part of a chain of tiny islands near Trinidad and Tobago where wealthy yacht owners from surrounding resorts party and sunbathe. We took a snorkeling excursion organized by the ship to breathtaking Saltwhistle Bay, where we swam among tropical fish, including a huge manta ray. The snorkeling trip included unlimited rum punch -- which we took full advantage of -- and equipment, for about $50 a person. Afterward, the ship hosted a free beach barbecue that proved to be a guest favorite.

The ship's watersports team brought out banana boats, wake boards, kayaks and sailboats, which are available for passenger use at every port for no extra charge. A late-afternoon banana boat ride around the bay capped a perfect day for us -- except we also had quite a night ahead of us.

After another delicious seafood dinner onboard, we hit the ship's bar for the weekly gaming activity, a live crab race. We won $70. Still laughing about our victory, we went for a moonlight stroll on the deck and proved just how romantic this cruise can be: Dave popped the question and we got engaged.

As new spouses-to-be, we woke up early the next day for a dolphin sightseeing tour on St. Vincent. We didn't see any dolphins, but the guide brought us to a tranquil, volcanic black-sand beach accessible only by boat.

The picturesque island, home to the region's only active volcano, is where some of the footage for the "Pirates of the Caribbean" movies was shot.

Later that day, the Royal Clipper sailed to Bequia, another tropical paradise where million-dollar yachts dot the shoreline. A beachside playground for superstars like Jimmy Buffett, David Bowie and Mick Jagger, the island is lined with quaint shops, bars and restaurants. For us, The Frangiapani hotel/bar was the perfect spot to watch the Caribbean sunset.

We needed to unwind, as visiting two islands in one day made us feel a bit rushed and certainly cut into beach time. The ship also did two stops in Martinique -- one in the Fort de France shopping district and a second in the afternoon at a gorgeous beachfront resort.

Another day in St. Lucia, we stopped at a beach resort at Marigot Bay before heading to the sulphur-spring mudbaths and a rain-forest waterfall in Soufriere.

In between stops we got plenty of relaxation aboard the ship, swimming in its three pools, reading in the shade of the sails and gazing out into the open ocean.

With coconut oil still on our skin, we had one final day on the beach in Barbados before catching a late-afternoon flight home -- tan, relaxed and engaged.

Caribbean sailings on Star Clippers' Royal Clipper start up again in November. Rates for seven nights start at $1,675 per person plus port fees of $175.

OBITUARIES

Charles P. Sweeney

Charles P. Sweeney, 92, of Cohasset, died Sept. 10, 2006, at his home.

The son of the late Daniel Patrick Sweeney and Mary Agnes (Nelligan) Sweeney, he had been employed as a produce wholesaler in Boston prior to his retirement.

Mr. Sweeney was a former member of Hatherly Country Club and Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

He leaves his wife, Virginia C. (Carraher) Sweeney; his children, Daniel P. Sweeney of Campbell, Calif., Kathleen C. Sweeney and Maureen C. Richards, both of Chestnut Hill, and Michelle Lage of Pembroke; his grandchildren, Mark P. Sweeney and Caroline V. Almeda; and his great-grandson, Jack Almeda. He was the brother of the late Daniel Patrick Sweeney Jr., Edward Sweeney, Francis L. Sweeney and Paul F. Sweeney.

A memorial Mass was celebrated Thursday, Sept. 14, at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to American Parkinson's Disease Association, 135 Parkinson Ave., Staten Island, NY 10305.

Molly Tornberg Orr

Molly Tornberg (Goggi) Orr, 90, died Sept. 18, 2006.

Born in Boston, she was the daughter of the late Anne Quinn Tornberg and Per Frederick Tornberg. Mrs. Orr and her five brothers and sisters enjoyed a charmed life in Cohasset, where their father was keeper of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. She was a graduate of the Osgood School in Cohasset.

Later living in Lancaster, Pa., she worked at the Farmers Bank and Trust Co. until she married Fred Earl Orr of Glade Springs, Va. Mrs. Orr was a member of the Iris Club, Lancaster Country Club, St. James Episcopal Church and Gray Ladies of Lancaster General Hospital. She had been the owner and bookkeeper of Meiskey's Wholesale Watch Co. After retirement, she moved to St. Petersburg, Fla., where she continued to play golf, exercise, and travel with Elderhostel International. In recent years, she moved to Richmond, Va., and lived at Imperial Plaza.

She leaves three children, Molly Orr Alcott of Locust Grove, Va., Fred E. Orr and his wife, Rachel, of Sydney, Australia, and Cassandra Orr Stoddart of Richmond, Va.; seven grandchildren, Jon Alan Slabaugh and his wife, Claire, of Bethesda, Md., Andrew Kirk Slabaugh and his wife, Jennifer, of Richmond, Va., Laura Alcott Northway and her husband, Robert, of Austin, Texas, Jennifer Alcott Argoe and her husband, Buss, of Beaufort, S.C., Mathew Orr, of Long Beach Island, N.Y., Vanessa Orr Chafer and her husband, Murray, Sydney, Australia, and Katherine Orr, of Sydney, Australia; and her great-grandchildren, Grace, Georgia and Grant Northway, of Austin, Texas, Brooke Chafer, of Sydney, Australia, Kate and Anne Slabaugh, of Bethesda, Md., and Quinn Slabaugh, of Richmond, Va.

Memories of Mrs. Orr, the last of the Tornberg clan, will be brought to mind when the sun sets and Minot's Light flashes the 1-4-3, I Love You, signal.

A service was held at The Warsaw in Richmond, Va. Interment in Conestoga Memorial Park, Lancaster, Pa.

Memorial contributions may be made to Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA, 02025.

9/11 REFLECTION

Among those attending a meeting of religious leaders of all faiths at the Greek Orthodox Metropolis of Boston in Brookline, to mark Sept. 11, were Cardinal Sean P. O'Malley of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, and Scituate resident the Rev. John Maheras, pastor of the Nativity Greek Orthodox Church in Cohasset, who is also the ecumenical officer of the Greek Orthodox Metropolis of Boston, appointed by Metropolitan Methodios. These and other local religious leaders prayed and reflected on the tragic event of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks. Said Metropolitan Methodios, who hosted the meeting, "The God of the Jews and the God of the Christians and the God of the Muslims cannot and does not sanction violence."

Leaving Las Vegas

Entertainer Susan Anton — now starring in the national tour of "All Shook Up!" which comes to Boston's Opera House next week — hasn't been on the road in years. She has had no reason to leave Las Vegas where she has been living and working since 1995. The leggy song and dance woman headlined some 5,000 performances of "The Great Radio City Music Hall Spectacular" at the Flamingo Hilton and when when she was cast in the Vegas company of "Hairspray" at the Luxor earlier this year, it seemed a safe bet that she'd be sleeping in her own bed for some time. When that Tony Award-winning musical closed in just a few months instead of running for years as it has in New York, Anton thought she'd use her unplanned break to settle into a new home. She ended up unpacking fast.

"My husband and I had just bought a beautiful new house in Vegas, only days before I got this job so I was shocked to find myself saying yes when the offer came to do this show. I hadn't been on the road in over 10 years," explained Anton by telephone last week from her first tour stop in Milwaukee. "This show is so much fun and the music is just fantastic, of course, so I'm really looking forward to visiting 35 cities in the nine next months."

Combining 24 Elvis Presley hits, including "Love Me Tender," 'Heartbreak Hotel," and "Devil in Disguise," with an original book by Joe DiPietro ("I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change"), "All Shook Up" tells the story of a young woman whose dream comes true when a guitar-playing young rebel turns her small town upside down with his music. The show ran for 213 performances on Broadway last year, not exactly long enough to be labeled a hit. Anton acknowledges that national tour's don't usually follow such relatively short New York stints.

"I didn't get the chance to see the Broadway production, but I know that there are lots of people who feel this show didn't get its due on Broadway. It was part of a season which featured several of what are called jukebox musicals. While other shows of this type, like 'Mamma Mia!' and 'Movin' Out,' succeeded, last year's group fared less well. In some ways, 'All Shook Up' fell victim to the failure of 'Good Vibrations' and 'Lennon.' What makes this tour so wonderful is that it gives people a second chance to see this show."

"This is a wonderful opportunity to take a joyful show out on the road. I'm very lucky to be able to have this experience."
Susan Anton

What people won't see, however, is the Elvis Presley story on stage.

"The show doesn't deal with Elvis's life or Elvis at all for that matter," Anton points out. "Instead, it utilizes his material and marries the classic Elvis music with a timeless story. Our lead character is a roustabout who looks a little like Elvis, but that's as far as it goes."

A second runner-up to Miss America 1970, the 55-year-old Anton — who 25 years ago famously replaced Edie Adams as the Muriel Cigar Girl - has no problem playing a supporting role.

"My character, Miss Sandra, comes to the small town to run a museum. Before long, she has a wonderful little discovery of love. My solo is 'Let Yourself Go,' an Elvis song I didn't even know before, but which I now really love. I also get to sing part of a medley of 'Hound Dog' and 'Teddy Bear' that is a lot of fun."

Mindful that Presley himself was a major Las Vegas headliner in the 1960's and '70's, Anton says she wouldn't be surprised to see "All Shook Up" set up shop in Sin City, despite the failures of bigger Broadway hits like "Avenue Q" and "Hairspray."

"This show is a natural fit for Las Vegas, so I would bet it will end up there at some point. Vegas is still figuring out how to do New York shows in Nevada. The Vegas production of 'Hairspray' (which opened in February with Tony Award-winning original Broadway stars Harvey Fierstein and Dick Latessa and was closed by early June) was spectacular. It had so many big, fabulous elements to it. Even with all that going for it, it still takes time to build an audience and the new corporate Las Vegas isn't always willing to be patient."

While Vegas figures out how to make the Great White Way work in Glitter Gulch, Anton is content to be on tour.

"This is a wonderful opportunity to take a joyful show out on the road. I'm very lucky to be able to have this experience."

Movie review

Governor Willie Stark (Sean Penn) delivers another powerful message to his minions, in "All the King's Men."

A Long haul for 'King's Men'

"All the King's Men" (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

You've heard of "Citizen Kane." Meet "Citizen Willie."

The Humpty Dumpty-ish rise and fall of Huey Long-like Willie Stark is the subject of Robert Penn Warren's Pulitzer Prize-winning 1946 novel "All the King's Men." It's also the subject of Steve Zaillian's long-gestating film version, a follow-up to Robert Rossen's classic 1949 film that featured a definitive Oscar-winning performance from Broderick Crawford as Willie.

Zaillian's version boasts Best Actor winner Sean Penn ("Mystic River") in the iconic role, along with Jude Law, Kate Winslet, Patricia Clarkson, Mark Ruffalo and Anthony Hopkins in an impressive supporting cast. A successful screenwriter whose directing credits include "Searching for Bobby Fischer" (1993) and "A Civil Action" (1998), Zaillian has not given us a Willie for the highly politicized times in which we live. His movie begs the question: What's the point?

But good old Willie still has the power to bind us. Although miscast and often incomprehensible, Penn gives us a Willie who is part Fuller Brush salesman, part Elmer Gantry-like revivalist preacher and part right-wing talk-radio host.

Standing alone on a dais or the back of a pickup, he calls his overall- and calico-garbed and, in some cases, shoeless crowds "hicks." Referring to his evil rivals, he oddly implores his listeners to "nail 'em up." Penn wears a crown of tousled brown locks atop his head and holds his smallish hands in front of his chest when he talks, shaking them like a pair of maracas accompanying his campaign trail speech.

An obscure town treasurer who becomes famous when a schoolhouse he did not want built collapses due to faulty materials, Willie is thrust upon the statewide stage — and eventually into the governor's office — by political boss Duffy (James Gandolfini) in late 1940s Louisiana (the film moves Warren's action up about 10 years). In addition to a pistol-packing driver Sugar (Jackie Earle Haley), Willie's entourage includes Jack Burden (Law), a high-born law student-turned journalist whose Oedipal travails are laborious and who becomes Willie's Boswell, gofer, sounding board and, some say, pimp.

When Willie, on the verge of impeachment, asks Jack to get his oldest friend Dr. Adam Stanton (Ruffalo), the son of a former governor, to head the hospital Willie is planning to build, darkness descends. Toss in Adam's sister Anne (Winslet), a philanthropist for whom Jack carries a torch; a witchy political operative who is Willie's mistress (Clarkson), and dirt dug up by Jack on his surrogate father Judge Montague Irwin (Hopkins), and you've got trouble, right here in Mason City.

Well, as Willie once said, "He who touches pitch shall be defiled." Warren aspired to transform "polyticks" in the American South into Greek tragedy and by and large succeeded, although one might quibble about how Warren's novel stands anxiously beneath the shadow of the great William Faulkner.

Zaillian hasn't failed entirely. His film has drama and period atmospherics. But it's too obvious and plodding.

Law demonstrates a facility for imitating Paul Newman circa "The Long Hot Summer" and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," although he is less dazzling than the original. James Horner's pounding score drove me up the wall, and Winslet's and Ruffalo's roles have been shaved to within an inch of their lives.

Apparently, all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't put this movie together again, either.

Rated PG-13. "All the King's Men" contains violence, sexual situations and nudity.

Paul Pratt building a historic gem

Is up for national recognition

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Paul Pratt Building on South Main Street could soon be added to the list of Cohasset landmarks, which have been recognized on the National Register of Historic Places.

While the Historical Society has not yet received formal word the application has been accepted, it has made it through many preliminary approvals and is now in Washington, D.C., which is a very good sign.

"I'm expecting any day now to see an announcement in our mailbox," said David Wadsworth of the Historical Society, who has been the driving force behind the application process. "I don't know of any problems, so when it is approved, you may hear the fireworks go off," he quipped.

The process of receiving approval for inclusion on the Register is "long and involved," said Wadsworth, adding it usually starts at the local level with a town's historical society or commission. In Cohasset's case, Wadsworth took the lead and gathered all the information necessary for the application, including the history of the community, the building's social

SPED deficit shrinks

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee had been bracing itself for a $400,000 deficit in special education out-of-district tuition charges. However, the board learned this week the deficit would be nearly $150,000 less.

The good news did not sit well with School Committee member Jamie Williams, who said decisions — such as charging bus fees — were made without the timliest information available.

Concerned about a potential fiscal 2007 budget deficit, due largely in part to special education out-of-district tuitions, the School Committee recently voted to charge fees to offset transportation costs. Savings in the transportation line item could then be used elsewhere, such as to pay for special education out-of-district tuitions. However, the vote to implement fees was taken while the School Committee was under the assumption it was facing a tuition deficit of roughly $400,000.

The apparent confusion on the part of the School Committee stems from a report Supt. of

Wine initiative to get round at Ballot Box

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Want to buy a bottle of Chardonnay with your chicken at the market? How about some Merlot with your filet mignon?

If the "Yes on Question One" backers have their way, then Massachusetts will join some 34 other states nationwide in offering wine at supermarkets and grocery stores.

Touting customer convenience as key, supermarket officials say it's time for the Bay State to get up-to-date.

Judy Chong, spokesperson for Shaw's, which has more than 90 stores in the state, says the supermarket chain's customers lead busy lives.

"Our customers would have an opportunity to pick up a bottle of wine which is a complement to dinner," Chong says. "It's a matter of convenience."

Voters on both sides of the issue will be able to weigh in on Election Day Nov. 7 by voting "Yes" or "No" on Ballot Question One, dubbed the Wine at Food Stores Initiative. A "Yes" vote would seek to allow the sale of wine in qualified grocery stores that must carry fresh or processed meat, poultry, dairy products, eggs, fresh fruit and produce, baked goods, baking ingredients, canned goods and dessert items.

Justine Griffin, spokesperson for the "Vote No on Question 1" campaign that is working with a group of package stores, liquor distributors, and a number of public safety and other public officials, says the food requirements are minimal. She says many convenience stores and gas stations with markets could easily qualify.

"You can't compare one state to another, without asking if that was always the way it was."

— State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham

"They (supporters) want to you think its about picking up a bottle of wine with your chicken for dinner," Griffin said. "But the initiative would more than double the number of liquor licenses allowed."

But Kim Hinden, spokesperson for the "Vote Yes on One" campaign, which is supported by the Massachusetts Food Association, said statements to the effect that the number of liquor licenses in the state would double are exaggerated. "There are only 1200 grocery stores in Massachusetts," she said. Hinden also stressed that the local licensing board (ie., selectmen) has the discretion whether to issue a license and there is no appeal.

"What this does is create a new class of wine only licenses," she explained.

If passed, towns would be allowed five wine licenses for the first 5,000 population and one for each additional 5,000 or part thereof.

At about 7,200 people — Cohasset, which has a total of 5 package store all-alcoholic and wine & malt licenses (not counting restaurant and club liquor licenses) — would be allowed six new licenses.

To Police Chief James Hussey the clear choice is to "vote no" over concerns about public safety.

"Strictly from a law enforcement point of view any increase in the number of liquor licenses could translate into more opportunity for alcohol to get into the hands of young people," Hussey said.

While State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said his constituents do not need him to tell them how to vote, he would be voting "no."

Hedlund, who said he supports consumer choice and the free market, said he is opposed to

Retired school librarian really delivers

Shares love of reading with elderly

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For 25 years, Marjorie "Marjie" Murphy served as the librarian at the Deer Hill School, sharing her love of reading with the town's elementary students. Now in retirement, she is still sharing her love of reading, but with a new crowd.

As the Volunteer Coordinator for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's Homebound Delivery service, sponsored by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Murphy is now working with the town's eldest residents, who are not able to get to the library on their own to check out books. Instead, she spends three days per week delivering specially requested titles from the library to Sunrise Assisted Living, Cohasset Knoll, and homebound residents, who in turn are providing her with many rewarding friendships.

"They love all the reading and they love discussing it with someone," said Murphy, adding some of the seniors who are not able to leave their homes spend a lot of time alone during the day and look forward to their "book chats."

PICTURE THIS/John Wands

The Cohasset Mariner caught up with Dr. John Wands this week in his office at Cohasset Middle High School.

Name: John Wands

Occupation: English Department Head at Cohasset Middle High School.

Best day of your life: The last day of an NEH (National Endowment for the Humanities) seminar on the Industrial Revolution in England that showed us what it must have been like to be a miner or a mill worker in 19th-century England. Fifteen teachers from all across America spent five weeks in England studying together, and it was on that last day that one of the seminar participants and I fell in love with each other. It's for that reason I am now teaching in Massachusetts.

Best vacation: This last summer I spent 41 days in England, Scotland, and France visiting literary sites connected to my teaching. Every day was wonderful, but perhaps the single best day was awakening in Avaranche, a city near the Normandy beaches, to the sounds of a French military jazz band playing 1940s American jazz!

Favorite season: Fall-- it's when things cool down and I can get my wool clothing out.

Favorite holiday: Christmas. I grew up in a rather poor family, but my parents always made me feel like a little prince at Christmas time.

Favorite junk food: Ice-cold regular Coca-Cola and peppermint patties.

Best book: "Mrs. Dalloway," by Virginia Woolf. No other 20th-century novel explores the difficulties of communication between men and women as deeply or as beautifully as this novel.

Best movie: "The French Lieutenant's Woman," with Meryl Streep (my favorite actress) and Jeremy Irons. It's a valiant attempt at recreating John Fowles' brilliant critique of 19th-century England.

Best TV show: I don't watch TV for months on end. Occasionally I will watch Antiques Road Show on PBS.

Pet peeve: That people continue to waste energy given the obvious deleterious effects of global warming.

Most embarrassing moment: Going out for the swimming team in high school. I was the slowest swimmer ever, usually ending up half a lap behind every other swimmer in any race I entered.

Goal: To teach students how to make sense of any text — literary or otherwise — they encounter and be able to write or speak persuasively about their understanding of that text. No matter what career they may eventually have, this is an essential skill.

Person I'd most like to meet: Jimmy Carter. He seems to me the epitome of a man who has never stopped trying to make the world a better place for the poor and the disadvantaged.

Biggest worry: That I'll never get to explore all the parts of England that I want to see.

Best part of Cohasset: Students who shoulder the work I assign willingly.

Protecting yourself from credit card fraud

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Credit card fraud and stealing one's identity are two crimes that are on the rise.

Police Chief James Hussey offers a few tips about how residents can protect themselves.

- Report a lost or stolen card right away.
- Make sure you sign a new credit card immediately.
- Memorize your Social Security number and pin numbers. Do not carry them with you.
- Do not use your date-of-birth as a password or pin number, it's the first numbers a thief will try.
- Do not leave ATM, credit card, or gasoline receipts behind -- take them home.
- Check your credit card and bank statements monthly for accuracy.
- Get a periodic credit report.

This week a woman reported to police that her husband's credit card had been stolen. The couple believes it was taken while they were on vacation. The purchases in question total $3,000 in charges, Hussey said.

Dog's best friend

A Cohasset police officer was definitely a good friend to a dog this week whose owner reported the animal's claws got stuck in the holes in steps to a porch or deck and could not get free. The woman, who called, said she was worried her dog would break its legs.

Chief James Hussey said the officer climbed underneath the stairs and was able to unhook the animal's claws and paws from between the pieces of wood. Hussey said the officer did not know the breed but said it was a large dog.

Road rage

A frightened caller notified police at about 10:30 a.m. last Wednesday (Sept. 20) that the vehicle behind her was riding directly on her bumper and beeping its horn.

The female motorist, who was doing the tailgating, then pulled into a parking lot on Chief Justice Cushing Highway, saw the police, and ran into the building.

Chief James Hussey said the woman apparently knew she was wrong and took off. Police, however, did speak to her about her driving behavior.

Hussey said victims of road rage should not do anything to provoke the other driver, such as slamming on their brakes. The best thing to do is to try and pull over or pull into a parking lot when it is safe to do so. He said police want to be notified about road rage incidents so they can follow up.

Faucet melts

A candle that was apparently placed too close to a faucet melted the plastic part of the fixture, releasing the pressure and causing the water to stream out last Thursday in a house on Beechwood Street. The fire department had to shut the water off in the cellar until the faucet could be replaced.

Wet suit lost

Saturday a caller reported losing her wet suit (black with long sleeves and short pants). It was on the back of her truck when she went for a ride from Summer Street to Holly Lane. Police said the wet suit is still missing.

Unclaimed bike day

Cohasset police are hosting an "unclaimed bicycle day" from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday (Oct. 7) at police headquarters on Elm Street.

The department has about 30 unclaimed bicycles that were lost or stolen over the past two years.

If residents think the police may have recovered a lost or stolen bicycle that belongs to them, they should plan to attend. Dispatch Supervisor Thomas Wigmore said.

Chief James Hussey said in some cases people may not have reported a stolen or lost bicycle. "We would like to give them back to the rightful owners," he said.

Bicycles not picked up that day could be declared surplus.

Dead seals

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said seals that washed up on Cohasset shores in the past several weeks were likely the result of very rough seas caused by a hurricane in the Atlantic.

"Their injuries were from natural causes," Murphy explained.

Sheila Sinclaire of the New England Aquarium said the deceased seals were in a bad state of decomposition. The only research taken was length, species, ID and a photo for the Aquarium's photo archive. The animals were left on site, she said and the animal control officer would try to remove them.

Murphy said the seals were disposed of at sea with the help of the harbormaster and the Department of Public Works.

Register to vote

Wednesday, Oct. 18 will be the last day to register to vote and change party enrollment for the state election on Nov. 7.

Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on Wednesday, Oct. 18 from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

School budget transfer policy firmed up

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee is in need of updating its policy manual, and members are taking on one issue at a time. The first to be analyzed is its policy on budget accounting, transfers and reporting, which was discussed at its Sept. 21 meeting.

Rick Flynn and Steve Fusco, who make up the School Committee's Budget and Finance Subcommittee, drafted language for a new policy, which will require the superintendent receive School Committee approval before making line item transfers. The policy would establish 10 "cost centers" and essentially, transferring money out of one cost center to another would require the superintendent to first obtain approval from the School Committee.

"Most (of the transfers) would take place in the fourth quarter," said Flynn, as the end of the budget cycle shows where there are surpluses and deficits.

While the School Committee has planned to update its budget policies for some time, members put the issue on the front burner after finding out the department had a roughly $430,000 surplus at the close of fiscal 2006. Some members of the committee were confused when they heard about the surplus, and wondered both where it came from and where it would be used. While members of the School Committee had thought there would be a small surplus, they did not know it would be in the $400,000 range. At the same time the committee was informed of the total amount available, it was also told some of the funds, which came from various line items, had already been used to pre-pay supplies and materials as well as special education tuition.

To that end, the School Committee has asked School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro to come up with a financial document, which lists all sources of income and all expenses on one sheet. The committee would like to see the net budget number on a regular basis, so it knows the financial situation the district is in at all times. It would also like to see the amount of money which is coming in through taxation, and which money is not. "We need it straightforward and simple so anyone can understand it," said Flynn.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said he appreciated the work done by Flynn and Fusco. He noted it was good to have a new policy in place because the former policy went against Massachusetts State Law. The former budget policy states, "Any proposed expenditure or line item in excess of $5,000 not included in the district's annual operating budget will be pre-approved by the School Committee." However, according to Massachusetts State Law Chapter 71, Section 34, the power to transfer amounts between line items in the school operating budgets belongs exclusively to the School Committee and cannot be delegated to any other municipal board or officer. The new policy will make it absolutely clear all transfers will require School Committee approval.

Draft school budget transfer authority policy

"No transfer of funds from one budget category to another may be made except by a vote of the School Committee.

Budget categories are identified and approved in the School Committee's vote of the school system's annual budget.

a. Re-allocations within any one account within the budget category may be made at the discretion of the superintendent, but only for purposes included in the original budget.

b. The decision not to expend funds for a budget item may be made by the superintendent.

c. Funds may be withheld from a budgeted item to be spent on something not in the budget, only by vote of the School Committee."

This policy would replace the policy currently in use by the School Committee.

Shrinking special education deficit raises questions

Schools Denise Walsh provided at a previous meeting. Walsh had reported at the board's Aug. 23 meeting there were still four, out-of-district special education cases pending, which could total as much as $225,000. Cases are pending when the district knows it will be responsible for paying the tuition cost, but the student has not yet been formally placed in a school, leaving tuition rates temporarily unknown. But last week, Walsh announced there is now only one case pending, which will cost about $40,000. With firm numbers in place, the estimated $400,000 deficit has dropped to $253,525, a difference of $146,475.

While the School Committee was glad to hear the news, some members questioned the timeliness of its delivery, and said had they had the full fiscal picture a few weeks ago, they may not have voted the bus fees the way they did. Some speculated the tuition costs were known at the time the committee took a vote on the fees.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said through a recent conversation with Student Services Director Linda Gill, he was under the impression the district knew there has been one case pending since the beginning of August, not four. However, the School Committee was told there were four Aug. 23.

"I wish we had known," Slanetz said, as the committee chose to leave transportation fees in place for added revenue.

"You had more than one in August," said Walsh of the pending cases.

Williams said when the committee voted to implement the fees, the administration must have known three of the cases were settled, as it was late August. She said the administration must have also known it had additional available money to put toward tuition costs, which had not previously been presented as an alternative. An additional $76,000 in offsets appeared on the committee's Sept. 21 tuition update.

Roughly $70,000 of those funds is circuit breaker money — or reimbursements from the state for part of the out-of-district special education charges a district pays. According to the Department of Education, the state plans to grant $223,875 to the town in circuit breaker funding for fiscal 2007. Walsh said she intended on using $150,089 of those funds to pay for out-of-district tuition costs this year.

The remaining roughly $70,000 was to be kept in the school department's circuit breaker account. There is also an additional $6,000, which the School Committee said it did not know about. That is the funding paid by the South Shore Educational Collaborative for use of facilities.

"Was that money not available (two weeks ago)?" Williams asked.

Williams said had the committee known the pending deficit was likely going to be substantially smaller than $400,000, it might have voted differently on the transportation fees. "Why didn't we have all the information?" she said. Walsh said the information was in the committee's monthly report.

However, Williams said the committee was given a handout presented by the superintendent at its Aug. 23 meeting that clearly stated the district should anticipate a deficit of $395,444 for its special education tuitions.

Slanetz said in speaking with Gill, he also understood the district would be reimbursed by the state for one special education case it appealed and lost. The town deferred payment for the student during the appeals process, but is now responsible for paying a portion of the student's fiscal 2005 costs and all of her fiscal 2006 costs. The district is eligible to receive some reimbursement for what it will have to spend, but Slanetz said Walsh has made no mention of the possibility of reimbursement at any of the meetings.

"We haven't received final approval from the DOE (Department of Education) yet," said Walsh, but noted the district has applied for the reimbursement.

Slanetz said from what he had heard from Gill, it sounds as if the district should be fairly optimistic about receiving some reimbursement, and he would like to see a potential figure included on tuition cost updates in the future, even if the numbers are only pending. Walsh replied it is important for the board to remember, funding is given to districts based on a formula and it will get back, "No where near what we paid."

"But it is still something that would eat away at our deficit," Williams said.

Slanetz said taking the formula into account, if the district was reimbursed for two fiscal years, it could likely receive $50,000 for each year, which would give the district an additional $100,000 to put toward its $250,000 expected tuition deficit. "We might be as low as $150,000" in deficit, he said.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro then said the district would be reimbursed for 18 months.

"Everything is still pending," said Walsh.

Williams said going forward, the reporting of information needs to change. "We took that bus fee vote with a potential $400,000 deficit," but said the school department had to have known there was more circuit breaker money that could be used as well as the fees for use of the facilities by the South Shore Educational Collaborative. "We continue to make decisions based on information that is not as timely as it should be," she said.

The school department has applied for relief from the state for one special education case which it appealed and lost. The school is responsible for a portion of fiscal 2005 tuition for the student and all of fiscal 2006. It is likely the district will receive reimbursement for18 months of that student's schooling costs, which will be used to further offset special education costs.*

Special fall Town Meeting date set

The fall Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 13. While selectmen had discussed moving the meeting to a weekend, in the end they agreed to keep the meeting on a Monday night. However, this year the meeting will begin at 7 p.m. instead of 7:30 p.m.

On a related note, Selectman Rob Spofford asked Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, to draft two articles for the Special Town Meeting Warrant. One would change the town's bylaws to amend the date for the annual Town Election, to allow both the town election, any override elections or other elections which need Town Meeting approval, to be held on the same day. The second would change the start time of the Annual Town Meeting, always held on Saturday mornings, to begin at 9 a.m. rather than 10 a.m.

Patrick Holway has a big fish story to share

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

WELCOME BACK!

Welcome back to all Grade 6 students, teachers and chaperones from their weeklong stay at Camp Bournedale. This annual event is such a tradition here in Cohasset and many thanks go out to the teachers, Bournedale staff and parent volunteers who give of themselves to care for these wonderful, at times high spirited and adored children of the sixth grade. As a mom who is so looking forward to getting her son back at 1:15 today (not that I am counting the time or anything) and hearing all about the week's adventures, I know what it means to me to have such dedication on our sixth-grade staff's part and the Camp Bournedale people, other parents etc. You are all wonderful and I know I speak for all the parents when I say, "Enjoy this weekend from beginning to end and don't lift a finger, you deserve it!"

BIG FISH STORY!

Boy oh boy, here is one fishing story for the record books. Patrick Holway, 9, was the second-place winner in the kids' bass category at Cohasset Yacht Club's annual Fishing Tournament. Pat was fishing on Retrieve with his uncle, Dave Holway. Pat's fish was 35 ins. long and weighed in at 13 lbs., 12 oz. It is unusual for Retrieve not to put a few fish on the scale on any given day and this day was no different as Pat also took third place in the kids' bluefish category with a 5-3/4 lb. blue. The crew on board Dave Holway's boat, Retrieve, included his nephew Conor Holway, 17; his brother Dick; son-in-law, Bill Fitzgerald, and Bob Gledhill. Fantastic fishing!

NEW ARRIVAL

Can and Juliana (Chittick) Tiryaki, of Pleasant Street, welcomed a baby boy, Aydin Bennett Tiryaki, on Sept. 8. Proud grandparents are Woody and JoAnne Chittick, South Main Street, and Sabri and Nacide Tiryaki, of Istanbul, Turkey. The Tiryaki family, including Can's sister, Zeynep, and brother, Cem, are visiting Cohasset for two weeks, as they meet the newest Tiryaki. Welcome to the world Aydin and congratulations to all!

SOUND OF MUSIC

The Hills are alive.... That's right, "The Sound of Music" is getting ready to be performed in Hingham with the Hingham Civic Music Theater and three Cohasset girls are playing the roles of three of Captain Von Trapp's children. Betsy Crawford, plays Brigitta, Madison Pratt plays Gretl and Logan Pratt (yes, they are sisters in real life) plays Louisa. The show runs Oct. 20, 21, 27, 28, at 7:30 p.m. and Oct. 22 and 29 at 2 p.m. at Sanborn Auditorium at Hingham Town Hall. Tickets are $16 for adults and $13 for students and seniors. Call the ticket hotline at781-837-1499 to reserve yours today. Group tickets are available for parties of 10 or more, at the price of$12 per ticket. For more information or to make a group reservation please call Kathy Campbell at 781-749-0083 or the ticket hotline.

GAME SHOW WINNER

Charlie Blackington, 9, of Cohasset was a contestant on a game show, which was filmed on June 29th and will air during the weeks of Oct. 2nd and Nov. 25th. The game show is "WOW", an educational series for kids of all ages produced by Boston Catholic Television and staring students representing different Catholic schools and parishes from all around the Archdiocese of Boston. Charlie is in the fourth grade and a parishioner of St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Cohasset.

Charlie's sister, Sara, 7, and his parents, Mary Jo and Jay Blackington, and his grandmother, Irene Blackington (of Newton) were in the studio audience and were able to see Charlie compete and win. Actually, after Charlie was declared the winner with the highest score, Charlie pointed out to the Game Show Host, Father Reed, that another child had the same score, and so both were declared winners.

"WOW" airs six times a week on Channel 56, Monday at 6:30p.m., Tuesday at 4p.m., Wednesday at 10:30p.m., Thursday at 4;30p.m., Friday at 1p.m. and Saturday at 7:30p.m.

Wow, Charlie, this is great news! We will be tuning in!

RELAY AMBASSADOR

Congressman Bill Delahunt recently welcomed ten American Cancer Society volunteers from Southeastern Massachusetts to his office as part of "Celebration on the Hill" - a grassroots event celebrating cancer survivorship and empowering all those affected by cancer to bring their stories to the nation's capital. Cohasset's own Harry St. Onge was one of the 10 volunteers who was welcomed.

"All of us have been affected by cancer, either personally or through family and friends," Delahunt said. "Every day brings us closer to a cure, and every day our neighbors and friends do their part to raise awareness for early detection and offer expressions of support to survivors and their families."

According to the American Cancer society more than 1.2 million new cancer cases will be diagnosed in the United States this year. Celebration on the Hill is a part of the American Cancer Society's signature activity, "Relay For Life". Relay For Life is unique 24-hour overnight activity that offers everyone in the community an opportunity to participate in the fight against cancer. Participants are organized into teams and walk or run around a track to demonstrate their resolve to eliminate cancer as a major public health problem. The volunteers from the Tenth District were specifically chosen to serve as "Relay Community Ambassadors," and they joined thousands of other Ambassadors from all 50 states and 435 congressional district for today's celebration and advocacy day. Thank you Harry and to all who were welcomed as part of this great event.

SAVE BOX TOPS

Here is a great way to help earn free money for our schools and our children! Just by saving your box tops coupons, the Deer Hill school alone has earned more than $700 last year and $1450 the year before. A big thank you goes out to all who participate, especially our friends at the recycling center, who save the coupons from the boxes that get recycled! Every little bit helps. For more information on products with box tops coupons and other ways to earn free money go to boxtops4education.com. There is a link to Box Tops Marketplace that you can use when you are shopping online at your favorite stores and the stores donate a percentage back to our schools. So save those coupons and return them to our schools, it's that easy.

Cohasset girl plays Scout in stage adaptation of novel

Stars in 'To Kill a Mockingbird'

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"I'm pretty much in every scene."
— Clara Baumgarten

At 9 years old, Clara Baumgarten is already an actress who knows what it means to be fully dedicated to a show. Playing the part of "Scout" in the Company Theatre's upcoming production of "To Kill A Mockingbird" has required much sacrifice, requiring Clara to put in long hours of rehearsal and even changing her look to fit the character. But when she steps out onto the stage and the curtain rises, Clara says she knows all the work and effort will be worth it.

Clara is a fourth grader in Jennifer Clark's class at the Deer Hill School. However, while she was still in the third grade she began the audition process and was cast in the show last May.

"I was going for anything, but I wanted to be Scout," recalls Clara, adding before she tried out for the part, she had to learn to speak with a southern accent. "To Kill A Mockingbird" is set in Alabama, and fortunately Clara's father George has a friend who grew up in North Carolina and was able to help her learn to speak with a drawl.

Clara auditioned with a group of between 10 and 12 girls who were also vying for the role of the precocious tomboy, Scout. "We had to read our lines and we had to run around," Clara says. After the first audition, she was called back two more times. On the third round, she was one of three girls up for the part.

"For a 9-year-old, it was a pretty rigorous audition process," says Barbara Baumgarten, Clara's mother. But when the call came in that Clara had been chosen for the part, she couldn't have been happier. "They called while Clara was at school and offered her the part and I gladly accepted for her, knowing that was what she wanted," she says.

When Clara got home from school and her mother told her the news, "I was really excited. I felt really special because there were a lot of other kids there," Clara says about other girls who wanted the role.

Throughout the summer months, Clara attended rehearsal once per week, and since the beginning of September, rehearsals have been running three times per week. Tuesdays and Fridays, rehearsal runs from 7 to 10 p.m., as the majority of cast members are adults who practice after working all day. "They try to let the kids go early, at 9 or 9:30 p.m.," Barbara says, but the week before the show will be a different story.

With opening night scheduled for Friday Oct. 13, Clara will soon be in the midst of production week, which will be kicked off with an all-day rehearsal on "Super Sunday."

"I'm pretty much in every scene," says Clara, meaning there will be relatively little downtime between rehearsing scenes. However, when she does get a few minutes to relax during rehearsal, she said she enjoys hanging out with the two boys who play Jem and Dill, the other two main children's parts in the play.

"At home, she doesn't have any brothers, she has two sisters," says Barbara about her other two daughters, Ellie and Emily. However, hanging out with boys is a welcome change for Clara. "They're fun," Clara says, adding sometimes they all throw a football around between their scenes.

While Clara said she might be a little nervous on opening night, it won't last long. "It's my favorite part!" she says of the moment she actually gets to take the stage. Clara has been in plays before, including "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever" with the Cohasset Dramatic Club when she was 3 years old, and "The Sound of Music" which was also a CDC production. She also played the role of "Chip" in the Company Theatre's production of "Beauty and the Beast."

While she said she typically does not get nervous before a show, "This one's so big" that she's not ruling out a few butterflies.

Playing Scout will be Clara's most challenging role to date for many reasons. Not only is she working with a mostly adult cast, the storyline deals with adult themes. Set in the South during the Great Depression, there is prejudice and hatred, and some complex issues. Barbara said Clara would not have been exposed to, had the play not dealt with them. "There are words she had to learn that did not come out naturally," says Barbara, adding there are scenes where Clara still feels unsettled. But in the end, the story teaches a great lesson about sympathy and understanding. "She hasn't read the book yet, but it will be interesting to see what she thinks of it when she's older," Barbara says.

When not on the stage, Clara participates in many sports including soccer, tennis, swimming, basketball, skiing and horseback riding. After the show ends, she will also be taking dance lessons. In the future, Clara said she would like to continue acting in plays, but ultimately sees herself as a member of the "Animal Police," who rescue animals in trouble, just like the show on Animal Planet.

"To Kill A Mockingbird" will run from Oct. 13 through Oct. 29 at The Company Theatre, located at 30 Accord Park Drive in Norwell. Shows will be held Thursdays through Sundays during its three-week run. Tickets are $20-$22 each, with the exception of students who may present a valid ID and purchase a ticket for $12. Tickets can be purchased at the theatre box office Monday-Friday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and during all performances, or by calling (781) 871-2787. Ticket requests may also be faxed to (781) 871-6914, or can be purchased online at www.companytheatre.com.

Gulf Association meeting features cross-country bicyclists

Jim Spelman, past president of the Gulf Association, and his daughter, Kate, will recount their adventures bicycling coast-to-coast at the annual meeting of the Gulf Association. The meeting will take place Wednesday, Oct. 18, at Lightkeepers on Cohasset Harbor, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Attendance at the meeting is open to all. Refreshments will be served.

The trip began as a challenge from Kate to her father to accompany her on the trip to benefit the Jimmy Fund. A graduate of Noble & Greenough School, she is now a first-year student at Wellesley College. Age difference notwithstanding, the two covered the country at an average of 61 miles per day, the longest covering 104 miles.

Roadside scenes recorded in photos will accompany the presentation.

Attendance at the meeting is open to all. Refreshments will be served.

Father-daughter bicyclists proudly dip tires in the Atlantic Ocean at Minot Beach May 29, marking completion of a 4,464-mile trip beginning at San Diego, Calif., March 8.

At CVS/pharmacy, we put a lot more into the communities we serve than a store. Like confidence, in the form of Teaberry Knoll's therapeutic riding for disabled children. Achievement, through our continuing work with Special Olympics. And support, with things like our CVS/pharmacy Charity Classic golf tournament, which has raised millions of dollars for hundreds of family and children's charities. We do all this because every community that we serve is also a community where we live. This is our home. And home is always where your heart is.

COHASSET'S WEEK

School committee executive session

An executive session was listed on the Sept. 21 School Committee agenda, but not all members were unanimous in casting a vote to meet in private. At the end of the open session, members of the board asked each other whether it was still necessary to hold an executive session that night and School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said she felt it was not.

However, School Committee members Jamie Williams and Alfred Slanetz said they would like to receive an update on contracts with non-union personnel. MacCarthy said she had nothing to report. However, Williams said it was important for the board to have a conversation and made a motion to go into executive session for the purpose of discussing non-union personnel contracts. Slanetz seconded the motion. A role call vote was taken and members voted 3-1 in favor of the executive session. Rick Flynn joined Williams and Slanetz in voting in favor. MacCarthy voted against going into executive session. Member Steve Fusco did not attend last week's School Committee meeting.

Price of natural gas locked in for schools

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro told the School Committee at its Sept. 21 meeting the school department has been able to lock in its natural gas pricing for the fiscal year. "This is a perfect time to lock in," he said, but he did not provide the figures for the rate at which the schools have obtained. In an interview after the meeting, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she did not have the figures, but that DeGennaro would make the figures available as soon as they were complete.

Although the exact cost savings is unknown, members of the School Committee speculated it could have a profound impact on the fiscal 2007 school budget, as there was a surplus in the fiscal 2006 budget of roughly $84,000 in middle-high school utilities. The school department had budgeted $244,400 for middle-high school utilities and in fiscal 2006, the actual heating cost was $161,055. The utility budget for fiscal 2007 is $332,147, which is roughly $88,000 more than was budgeted last year, when the school department saw a surplus of $84,000.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said with the savings that will be seen from the prices being locked in, plus the potential over-budgeting of the line item, the school department could see a roughly $200,000 surplus at the end of next year, pending the weather.

PSO calendar

The PSO calendar has been printed and sent out to the homes of all students in the district. Those who did not receive a calendar may pick up a copy at any of the three schools, at the library or at Town Hall.

EEE update

The high school will not be having any sporting events beyond 5 or 6 p.m. until at least Oct. 10. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said with the threat of Eastern Equine Encephalitis in the area, sporting events will continue to be held before dusk. As fall approaches, the sun will be setting earlier, and will require students coming indoors closer to 5 p.m. rather than 6 p.m. "We're taking this week by week, unless we have a nice frost between now and then," said Walsh. The first frost will kill the mosquito population.

On a related note, the change in game times could result in a loss of gate receipt funds. "That is money we've come to rely upon that we're not going to see," said Walsh. This year's athletic budget was built upon the assumption sporting events would bring in $18,000 in gate receipts.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you...you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING...BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

A no on Question One

With the Sept. 19 state primary now relegated to the annals of history, the race for governor and other contested offices are picking up steam. If this week's gubernatorial debate is a gauge then voters can expect spirited campaigning and lots of issues, programs and promises to consider.

However, races involving state offices are not the only things for voters to consider Nov. 7.

An issue that would make a wholesale change in wine sales in Massachusetts is also on the ballot.

Question One, dubbed the Wine Food Initiative, would allow supermarkets and grocery stores to carry wine — something that is permitted in some 34 other states.

Proponents say passing Question One will be good for the consumer. When you go to the grocery store on your way home from work to buy chicken or steak, you could also pick up a bottle of red or white wine, or both. Those backing the measure say it is a convenience issue and claim wine prices would come down as competition picks up.

Opponents warn that more liquor licenses could translate into more problems with under-age drinking.

Those opposing the measure also worry about the small package stores losing business, and hence, jobs.

Our local legislators, state Sen. Robert Hedlund, and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, both say they will "vote no." So does Police Chief James Hussey.

Sen. Hedlund thinks a piecemeal approach to changing the state's liquor laws is the wrong way to go and would prefer to revisit the entire issue.

Rep. Bradley worries about the impact on small business and public safety.

Chief Hussey comes down squarely on the public safety issue. He is concerned an increase in the number of liquor licenses could translate into more opportunity for alcohol to get into the hands of young people.

The Cohasset Mariner has featured Question One in a story this week. It's an interesting issue especially for those Massachusetts residents who like the idea that we once had strict Blue Laws and that we don't always do things the way other states do.

However, we should all admit to wishing we could pick up a bottle of wine at the supermarket when another stop is going to add more minutes to an already busy day. We certainly understand the convenience issue and the desire for supermarkets to satisfy their customers.

Supermarkets, however, are not going to go out of business if they cannot sell wine. Some smaller package stores could lose business if the question wins with voters.

If Question One were approved it would allow all qualified grocery stores to apply for a wine-only license. Each town would be allowed five for the first 5,000 population and one for each additional 5,000 or part thereof. Issuing the licenses would be at the discretion of the licensing authority, in Cohasset's case that is the selectmen.

While we realize Question One only concerns the sale of wine – we wonder if beer could be far behind. We know from visiting other states that supermarkets that have wine also carry beer.

How many parties or family events have you attended that do not have both beer and wine? Granted there are wine stores that specialize in wine, but package stores carry both beverages.

Beer is the underage drink of choice – so while this initiative would not allow beer to be sold at supermarkets – we doubt there could be guarantees that the law could not be changed down the road.

In many Massachusetts towns, residents still go to the dump (and do not have curbside pickup). This practice drives out-of-staters crazy. In this state, we've always marched to the sound of a different drummer. There are Wal-Marts and big chains, but there are also small pizza parlors and unique downtowns, a rarity in many parts of the country.

So while the current liquor laws date back to just after Prohibition – we're not persuaded that we should change.

Competition and convenience count for a lot, but tradition and small business count for more.

We vote "No" on Question One.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MCAS test results for Grade 10 look pretty good

To the Editor:

The 2007 MCAS results were published on Sept. 27 for Grade 10 English and mathematics. The percent of Cohasset students passing the English exam (advanced and proficient) was 93, nicely up from 90 last year. In both years our score ranked sixth among the 14 benchmark school systems. The percent passing in mathematics this year was 89, the same as last year and our ranking improved to 3 from 4.

Particularly noteworthy was the 72 percent of our students who achieved the advanced score in Mathematics — a good improvement over the 64 percent last year. This is a very strong result even though three other systems did do better with one scoring 79 percent. Many had much lower advanced scores — three were in the mid 50 percent range.

Unfortunately, only 23 percent of our students achieved the advanced score in English — down from 45 percent in 2005. Only one of the other benchmark school systems had a lower score. The four best systems scored between 41 percent and 50 percent.

Cohasset students have traditionally done well on these two exams and this year was no exception. In the past few years, our students have had poor results in the lower grades and in science. The results for those tests will be released in late October.

On balance, we can be pleased that our students did well on the Grade 10 exams.

HEALTH NOTES

Volunteer for Medical Reserve Corps

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last week, we talked about the full-scale exercise at the CambridgeSide Galleria in which a dirty bomb was supposed to explode. It was mainly a test for a number of public service professionals hired to keep the peace, fight fires and aid the sick and injured. It was a small exercise; with only 250 victims supposed to be involved.

Cohasset participated in the widespread communication elements of the exercise. But more importantly, the exercise highlighted the need to recruit a group of special volunteers.

We recently sent out a call for such volunteers in Cohasset: people to join the Medical Reserve Corps (MRC) that would assist in the event of a health emergency. The MRC is a community-based group of volunteers who can serve during a local emergency health situation and assist with local public health needs throughout the year. Members are being recruited, trained and mobilized under the direction of the Cohasset Health Department and Public Health Region 4b.

The goal for the MRC is to bring together the knowledge and skills of many different health professionals and other volunteers to address public health crises.

The Town needs a diversity of types of volunteers, including:

- Practicing, retired or otherwise employed health professionals including physicians, nurses, pharmacists, dentists, nursing assistants, veterinarians, respiratory therapists and others.
- Public health professionals including epidemiologists and health educators.
- Medical, nursing, public health and other allied health professional students.

Others who are interested in assisting their community including social workers, interpreters, chaplains, and any others who can provide administrative assistance.

MRC volunteers can be active or inactive in their profession, they could be retired, or they could be students. Licensed medical professionals must maintain a current license if they are volunteering to provide medical services within the scope of their license. These volunteers may elect to serve their community both during emergencies and for more routine public health needs such as immunization clinics, screenings and health education, or strictly during emergencies.

Because Cohasset is working in cooperation with 27 area communities to share resources, volunteers may also choose to serve only in their town or as part of the regional Medical Reserve Corps. In addition to pure medical, we're asking for mental health specialist, social workers, chaplains, language interpreters, lawyers, funeral directors and administrators. We will also need citizens who just want to help; there'll be a place found for you.

If you think you want to help, call us. We want to identify, credential and train as many volunteers as possible. There's a story people tell about New Orleans. Early on, the people who stood out first in the minds of many New Orleans victims were those who brought water — those who found clean jugs or tanks or cartons of bottles and loaded their trucks and cars and SUVs and brought clean drinkable water.

Recognizing that many professionals have limited time to volunteer, we encourage potential MRC members to choose their level of participation. Volunteers may elect to serve their community both during emergencies and for more routine public health needs such as immunization clinics, screenings and health education, or strictly during emergencies.

For more information, contact Judy Fitzsimmons, RN, Cohasset Board of Health Public Health Nurse, at (781) 383-2210 or Alison Minkoff, MRC Coordinator for Region 4B, at (617) 665-3871.

A disaster affects all kinds of people. It's a measure of the humanity of a community to see the number of volunteers offering help. Cohasset has always been blessed by an abundance of volunteers. More than a 150 years ago, when the brig St.John broke up on the Grampuses spreading its cargo of human grief on our shores, the entire town came out to help in one way or another. The best way to find your center as a human being is to volunteer. When the dam breaks, or the blizzard comes, sometimes the most useful and best appreciated are those who help the sick, row the boats, shovel the snow — or carry the water.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Pond St. area temporarily reopens

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Construction stuff – Well, once again we've been out maneuvered and out foxed. Last week we published a detailed list of road closures for the Water Department construction projects, the Veterans Memorial and the MBTA Greenbush closures. Before you even had a chance to read all of this, it changed. Of course, by now, you know this because what is actually happening was a bit different from what we said. Oh well, best laid plans…

But, now there's more. This week you will have experienced a closure on Pleasant Street. We were informed on this past Monday that Greenbush would be closing Pleasant Street during mid-day on Tuesday (Sept. 26) so that they could pull rail across that crossing. Then Thursday or Friday of this week Sohier Street would be closed for the same reason. Once again, we asked the project to give us a bit more notice so that we could let you know before the fact rather than after.

One good thing did come out of this chaotic construction "to do" list. The MBTA did agree to remove the barriers at the foot of the Pond Street hill so that traffic can travel between the northern part of Spring Street and Pond Street during the Water Department work. The Pond Street area will stay open through Friday, Oct. 6. This temporary reopening should be very helpful while the Water Department does their paving in the hillside area.

In addition, the Rocky Lane Bridge should open this Thursday or Friday (Sept. 28th or 29th). As soon as the new bridge is open, the old crossing will close. Later on, on or about Oct. 5 or 6 or Oct. 10, the MBTA will be pulling rails across Lower King Street, which will necessitate the closure of this crossing in mid-day. Two days later (Oct. 12 or 13), the North Main Street crossing will be closed for the same reason.

Once rails have been pulled and set in their permanent home, you can expect to see equipment moving up and down the rails periodically. CBB will be moving construction equipment and materials back and forth as they work feverishly to finish each rail section. So, plan on occasional temporary delays at all crossing locations until the track is ready for rail traffic.

Other Greenbush Progress — Earlier, we spoke about the Rocky Lane Bridge nearing completion. The photo of the bridge shows the workmen scurrying around to complete the bridge.

Even though it is very difficult to see the work that is underway at the new Cohasset Station, this photo shows some of the work that has been accomplished at the new station site. The station platform is nearly complete from a structural standpoint. As you can see from the photo, it is quite long. Actually, it is 800 feet long so that all cars on the longest possible train can access the platform to comply with Universal Access requirements. The platform is made from precast concrete pieces that are trucked to the station site and erected on the base with a large crane. The Greenbush has utilized many different precast structures in the construction of the rail line, such as retaining walls and underground drainage structures. Precast structures improve quality of the concrete work, reduce costs, and increase the speed of construction.

Many people have asked us what is going on Route 3A just south of JJ's Dairy Hut and they want to know when construction will finish in this area. This is the area that was formerly the Barnes landscaping materials business. Well, the construction is complete. What has been constructed is a brand spanking new wetland. For every acre of wetlands that the MBTA reclaimed in order to build the Greenbush, they agreed to create two new acres of wetland. This photo shows that new wetland. We're not sure how good the detail is, but in the accompanying photo there are several interesting features. In the foreground there is a red maple that has been planted as a part of the wetland restoration. Beyond that you can see the various wetland grasses which have been planted. In the distance, in front of the background trees there is a lighter colored mound. That mound is made up of wood chips and has been created as a turtle habitat. So far the turtles have not complained, so we assume they like their new low cost condos.

This temporary reopening should be very helpful while the Water Department does their paving in the hillside area.

Right, the wetland replication area is near JJ's Dairy Hut.

Falling off the perfectionist bandwagon

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

Perfection is for people with plenty of free time and personal assistants. At least that's what I tell myself these days. You see, a long time ago, in a galaxy far, far away, I used to be one of those perfectionist people. I didn't enjoy anything unless I was doing it "perfectly." It was as if I had "six sigma'd" my entire life, leaving no room for any deviation from an unrealistic standard of perfection. While this can work quite well in business, and did for me for a long time, it doesn't leave a lot of room for error — or fun — in the rest of your life.

However, despite my best efforts, my "perfect" world came to a screeching halt seven years ago. There is nothing like a divorce and a newborn baby to unceremoniously bounce your perfectly-pilated behind right off that perfectionist bandwagon. It doesn't matter how single motherhood comes about (divorce, by choice, or by accident) throughout all of history and society, it's about as far from "perfect" as one can possibly imagine.

Yet, my status as a divorcee and single mom was never a stigma that bothered me much. Perhaps I was too sleep-deprived to notice? On the other hand, the shock was learning that I was never actually going to live up to those "perfect" moms they feature in parenting magazines; that the adorable "perfect" baby room was never really going to make it out of the Pottery Barn catalog; and that trying to excel at a 60 hour a week corporate job was no longer my "perfect" life choice. I tried, I really did; but somehow I kept falling asleep in the middle of it all.

That was until I finally realized that falling off the perfectionist bandwagon was the best thing that ever happened to me. Now, rather than ask about trees falling in the forest, the much more relevant question in my life is "if no one is ever going to see my bed is there really a point in making it?" In fact, simply doing the laundry is a major accomplishment. That means washed and left in the laundry basket. Folding it may or may not happen until a few days later. (I've even discovered that if you wait long enough, you can actually wear everything again before you waste time putting it away.)

I've also come to terms with the fact that work assignments no longer get turned in a day early with "extra research;" and that my only exercise for the week might be running for the school bus in the morning. And, yes, that was me piling the "Kid's Cuisine" frozen dinners into my cart at the supermarket. Although, with fresh vegetables having suddenly turned deadly, frozen chicken nuggets and freeze-dried corn aren't looking so bad.

Do I miss my perfectionism? Of course, an orderly house and life would be nice, but I don't miss how hard I used to be on myself. Nor do I miss those parenting magazines that have finally stopped coming in the mail. I'm also betting my son wouldn't have much liked the "before" version of Mommy. I highly doubt she would have been game to participate in his preferred six-year old activities that range from normal levels of messy to downright gross most of the time. So, for now, while our street address might be listed Cohasset, Massachusetts, my son and I know that we're happily living on the Far Side of Perfect.

Presidential perspective

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

"I more than suspect that he is deeply conscious of being in the wrong," said the Congressman, "that he feels the blood of this war, like the blood of Abel, is crying to Heaven against him. He is a bewildered, confounded and miserably perplexed man."

The "miserably perplexed" man was the president of the United States, not George W. Bush, but James K. Polk. The war was not in Iraq but in Mexico. And the critic was an obscure Whig congressman from Illinois named Abraham Lincoln.

American presidents have been the targets of critics and masters of the insult since the founding of the republic, although verbal attacks launched by foreign dignitaries like Hugo Chavez and the guy from Iran (I still can't spell it) are rare.

Not even the sainted George Washington could escape.

"As to you, sir, treacherous to private friendship and a hypocrite in public life, the world will be puzzled to decide whether you are an apostate or an imposter, whether you have abandoned good principles or whether you ever had any."

That was the pamphleteer Thomas Paine, one Founding Father to another, in a letter to the Father of his Country.

Lincoln himself was an inviting target of insult.

"I never did see or converse with so weak and imbecile a man; the weakest man I ever knew in high place," said Sen. William Saulsbury, a Delaware Democrat. "If I wanted to paint a despot, a man perfectly regardless of every Constitutional right of the people, I would paint the hideous, ape-like form of Abraham Lincoln."

Even the man he named to lead the nation's armed forces at the start of the Civil War could not conceal his contempt for his commander-in-chief.

"The president is nothing more than a well-meaning baboon. He is the original gorilla. What a specimen to be at the head of our affairs now," said Gen. George McClelland, who brought his criticism of his boss to the polls in '64 and got licked.

"McKinley (President William) has no more backbone than a chocolate éclair," said Teddy Roosevelt when he was assistant secretary of the Navy. Nevertheless, McKinley picked him as his vice president for his second term.

Teddy is a gold mine of presidential insult.

"Taft (President William Howard), who is such an admirable fellow, has shown himself such a commonplace leader, good natured, feebly well-meaning, but with plenty of small motive, and totally unable to grasp or put into execution any great policy," he said of his successor.

"He (President Woodrow Wilson) hasn't a touch of idealism in him. His advocacy of the League of Nations no more represents idealism on his part than his advocacy of peace without victory. He is a silly doctrinaire at times and an utterly selfish and cold-blooded politician always," he said of his successor's successor.

When he wasn't firing off insults, Teddy was a target himself.

"Now look! That damned cowboy is president of the United States," said Sen. Mark Hanna, Ohio Republican, when Teddy succeeded after McKinley's assassination.

They underestimated Harry Truman, too.

"It defies all commonsense to send that roughneck ward politician back to the White House," said Sen. Robert Taft, another Ohio Republican, after Harry upset Tom Dewey in 1948.

It was a comment for which Harry had an all-purpose retort.

"If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

So far, no one has.

Animal shelter effort

Tune into Our Town starting Monday. The program, hosted by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo, will feature Susan Phippen and David Cerruti who will talk about the efforts to build a new Scituate Animal Shelter at the 3A Farm at the corner of Mann Lot Road and Route 3A.

Volunteers still need to raise $150,000 for a new 2,500 square foot animal shelter to replace the facility currently on the Driftway. Since 1993, the no-kill shelter has served the towns of Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull, accommodating stray, homeless, injured and surrendered companion animals.

For more information and to follow the progress of the relocation, visit town.scituate.ma.us/animalshelter or 3afarmfund.com.

OUR TOWN is happy to announce that it will also be offering viewers two new specials over the next several weeks. First, the Cohasset High School Class of 2006 Graduation Ceremony is airing on Fridays at 7:30p.m., followed on Saturdays and Sundays at 3:30p.m.

A very special two-hour presentation on the correlation of mercury based vaccines for children and autism which is airing this Saturday and Sunday at 8p.m., followed on Mondays at 7p.m., all on Comcast channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed.

carving out this small exception in the current liquor laws. He said he would support a comprehensive review of the state liquor license distribution system that he described both as confusing and "somewhat unique."

Currently, towns are allowed a certain number of liquor licenses based on a formula that takes population into account. If a municipality needs more than the allotted number, it can file a home rule petition. For example, Hingham, which had no more licenses available, filed a home rule petition for liquor licenses at Derby Street Shoppes that was supported by the Legislature.

Hedlund, who represents the Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset, said the reason the question includes only wine and not beer is because supporters think that would be more palatable to the voters. He also expects that large retail outlets like Walmart and BJs would try to get into the wine business.

Question One proponents say with the option of grocery store purchases, consumers would have more choices and pay lower prices.

But Joe Ierardi, who owns Hingham Liquors in Hingham Square and another package store in Holbrook, said the proliferation of new wine licenses would put small stores out of business. He also questioned whether the larger retail stores and small convenience stores would be as vigilant in insuring no underage customers buy wine.

"This would about double the amount of licenses in the state but there is zero funding to police it," Ierardi said.

Ierardi said Walmart is the biggest retailer of alcohol in the country. Ierardi keeps "Vote No" literature next to the cash register and has dropped off informational packets at the Hingham Selectmen's Office.

Andy Hailer, manager of Curtis Liquors in Cohasset, also questioned whether adding the potential for 2800 new outlets for alcohol statewide is smart from a public safety perspective, especially in retail stores that employ a large number of under-age workers.

"We card everyone under 40," Hailer explained. Hailer, who is also concerned about the effect on small businesses, said Curtis Liquors has informational material available for customers about the pitfalls of selling wine at food stores.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, is also opposed to Ballot Question One. He too is concerned that allowing supermarkets to sell wine could put smaller liquor stores out of business. He disputes the argument that other states have liquor stores that remained in business despite liquor being sold in grocery stores.

"You can't compare one state to another, without asking if that was always the way it was," Bradley said.

Bradley, who represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Cohasset, said if Question One passes, it would only be a matter of time before carrying beer was also allowed.

Griffin of the "Vote No" campaign agreed. "It's only adding two words 'and beer' to the act," she said.

But Hinden of the "Vote Yes" campaign said grocery stores realize that food and wine go together. "As far as the public safety issue goes, wine is not the drink of choice for minors," said Hinden. She said studies show 7.7 percent of kids who drink, drink wine, and 72.9 percent drink beer.

Hinden said the claim grocery stores will sell to minors is unfounded. "We believe grocery stores with their vast security systems in place will do as good or better job than package stores in preventing sales to minors."

Robert Keane, spokesperson for Stop & Shop that supports Question One, described the effort as the end result of customer requests.

"When people come in from out of state and ask for our wine section, we have to say 'we don't have one,'" said Keane, who stressed the supermarket is customer-focused and customer convenience is the crux of the issue.

Stop & Shop has 119 supermarkets across the state. Under current state law, any business — including a supermarket — can only have a total of three liquor licenses. Super Stop & Shop in Hingham has a full liquor license. Keane said that would not change if Question One should pass.

Wine at Food Stores Initiative

Proponents claim:
- Would only apply to qualified grocery stores selling a range of food products
- Would provide customer convenience
- Current 72-year-old liquor state law gives liquor stores a virtual monopoly on selling wine
- Current law limits competition and consumer choice resulting in higher wine prices

Opponents claim:
- Virtually every convenience store, drug store and some gas stations would be able to sell wine
- Would increase sales to underage customers because many convenience stores employ teenagers.
- No provisions for policing the about double the number of liquor licenses
- 3,000-4,000 people would lose their jobs as liquor stores go out of business.

Paul Pratt building a historic gem history, its architectural details, photographs, charts of geologic surveys and other specific information regarding the building's historical significance.

Once the application is complete, it is sent to the National Register office of the Massachusetts Historical Commission. It, in turn, sends a historical preservation editor, who specializes in historical preservation, out to the building to gather more specific information about the building's historic integrity. "He knows much more about it than we do," said Wadsworth.

The editor then sends a second rough application with new, additional information, which must make it through the state review board of the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and is then sent on to the Keeper of the Register in Washington, D.C. This entire process usually takes close to two years.

"Our application passed the review board in June, and in August, it went to Washington to the Keeper of the Register" which awards the certification, Wadsworth said.

Having a building on the National Register is a very prestigious honor to have, as it marks the building as being worthy of preservation due to its cultural and historical value. By having the designation, it also helps towns secure grant funding and it protects the building in a limited way from any government activity at both the state and federal level, which might take place on the property. Any proposed projects for the property on which a nationally registered building exists have to be reviewed, and it must be determined the activity will not affect the building's historical significance.

"I don't know of any problems, so when it is approved, you may hear the fireworks go off."

— David Wadsworth, Cohasset Historical Society

The Paul Pratt Building is one of Cohasset's historical gems. It was built in 1903, which was a time in which there was a national movement to increase education and culture and many libraries were built. Most were built with funds provided by Andrew Carnegie, however, the Pratt Building, while it was built in the same style as many of the Carnegie libraries, was funded privately by Cohasset resident Paul Pratt.

Pratt lived on South Main Street and was a merchant in Boston. When he died, he was very well off and his money was passed on to his two daughters. Neither one married and together, they gave the money to build the library. The land to build the library on was given by Samuel T. Snow, and Wadsworth's grandfather, Edward Nichols, designed the building. "I'd consider it some of his best work," he said.

Upon its completion, the building became a private library. However, there was another library, the Cohasset Free Public Library, which had books, but did not have a building in which to house them. The Pratt Library then offered some shelf space to the Free Library to keep its books, and for a time, Cohasset had two separate libraries under one roof. Over the years, the libraries merged into one public library.

Cohasset has a number of buildings listed on the National Register. All of Government Island is listed as a historic district on the register, as is the Town Common. The Walter Gropius House by Sandy Beach, Central Cemetery, the Wilson House and Maritime Museum and the Caleb Lothrup house are all on the Register as well.

Weymouth firefighters, carpenters endorse Hedlund

Weymouth Fire Fighters Union, Local 1616, has endorsed State Sen. Robert Hedlund's bid for reelection, representing the Plymouth and Norfolk District. Sen. Hedlund has supported increased funding for fire safety equipment at the state level.

"I am extremely proud and grateful for the support of the Weymouth Fire Fighters. As State Senator, I have always made public safety a top priority and I will continue to work hard on behalf of the brave men and women of the public safety community," Hedlund said.

In addition to the Weymouth Fire Fighters endorsement, Sen. Hedlund also received the endorsement of the Carpenters Union Woodframers Local 723 of the New England Regional Council of Carpenters, AFL-CIO.

"The Woodframers endorsement is a true honor. I am pleased to share and support many of the same working-class values that these hard-working men and women exhibit on a daily basis," said Hedlund.

The endorsement of Hedlund by Carpenters Local 424 and Woodframers Local 723 are the only endorsement by those Unions of a Republican candidate at any level in Massachusetts.

Hedlund also received endorsements from the Boston Carmen's Union Local 589, SEIU 5000-NAGE, Carpenters Local 424 and the Massachusetts Correction Officers Federated Union.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on three roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$2 MILLION FOR INTENSIVE PROBATION AND PAROLE SUPERVISION (H 5000)

House 131-21, Senate 37-0, override Gov. Mitt Romney's $2 million reduction (from $16.1 million to $14.1 million) in funding for intensive supervision of convicts on probation and parole. The funds would be used for tracking, community service, educational assistance, drug and alcohol testing and treatment, curfew enforcement and home confinement. Supporters of the $2 million said that the funding is crucial to ensure that these probationers and parolees are properly supervised in order to protect the public and integrate them back into society. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the item to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $2 million. A "No" vote is against the $2 million).

$14 MILLION FOR HUMAN SERVICE WORKERS (H 5000)

House 153-0, Senate 36-0, override Gov. Romney's $14 million reduction (from $28 million to $14 million) in funding for pay raises for human service workers earning less than $40,000 per year. Supporters of the additional $14 million said that this would allow long overdue pay increases for hardworking, underpaid human service workers who provide valuable services to thousands of vulnerable citizens including the homeless, elderly, abused children and individuals with mental and physical disabilities. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the item to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the additional $14 million).

$250,000 FOR LIBRARIES (H 5000)

House 153-0, Senate 38-0, override Gov. Romney's veto of the entire $250,000 in funding for a public library matching incentive grant program that provides a 50-cent state match for each dollar raised by local libraries. Supporters of the $250,000 said that many local libraries are facing financial hardships and noted that this matching program would help libraries raise money. In his veto message, Romney said that he vetoed the funding because it is not consistent with his original budget recommendation. (A "Yes" vote is for the $250,000).

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL

SEX CRIMES AGAINST CHILDREN (H 5234): Lt. Governor Kerry Healey signed into law a bill giving child victims of sexual abuse a longer period of time to report the crimes. The measure extends the time period from 15 to 27 years after the victim turns 16. The time period could be extended indefinitely if independent, outside evidence corroborates the victim's allegations. Other provisions prohibit Level 3 sex offenders from living in a nursing home; require more sex offenders on probation or parole to wear GPS tracking devices and impose lifetime parole on Level 3 sex offenders who fail to meet registration requirements. Supporters say that many children who are victims of sexual abuse are not emotionally ready to confront the situation until many years later and noted that current law allows many sexual predators to get away with their crimes. Opponents say that the bill would result in many people being wrongly convicted because evidence and memories are often hazy and unreliable after many years.

DISCHARGE FROM NURSING HOMES (H 2681): Gov. Romney vetoed a bill requiring the Division of Medical Assistance (DMA) to hold a hearing when requested by a resident of a nursing facility who is being discharged or transferred. The DMA would determine whether the person's new setting is safe and appropriate. Supporters of the bill say that some seniors who are discharged from nursing homes end up in inappropriate settings including homeless shelters or in a home with a relative who is too ill to care for them. They note that under a current vague federal policy, hearing officers often do not question where the senior will reside. In his veto message, Romney said that the bill is unnecessary because federal regulations already require hearings and mandate that nursing homes "ensure the safe and orderly transfer or discharge from the facility."

POLL WORKERS AND ELECTIONS (S 2277): Gov. Romney signed into law a bill allowing local communities to hire 16 and 17-year olds as poll workers and eliminating the requirement that they live in the community in which they will work. The measure also prohibits the secretary of state, city and town clerks and members of board of registrars of voters or election commissions from serving as the chair, treasurer or officer for political candidates other than themselves. Supporters say that cities and towns are struggling to find poll workers and argue that these changes would increase the number of workers. They also say that it is inappropriate for election officials to serve on a candidate's committee.

VETERANS' LICENSE PLATES (H 1706): The Senate approved and sent to Gov. Romney legislation allowing a surviving spouse of a deceased veteran, unless remarried, to keep the special veterans license plates on his or her vehicle. Supporters said that current law only allows retention of the plates by the surviving spouses of some veterans including ex-prisoners of war, Purple Heart recipients, Pearl Harbor survivors and soldiers killed in action. They argued that the honor of retaining the plates should be available to the widowed spouses of all veterans who served the nation.

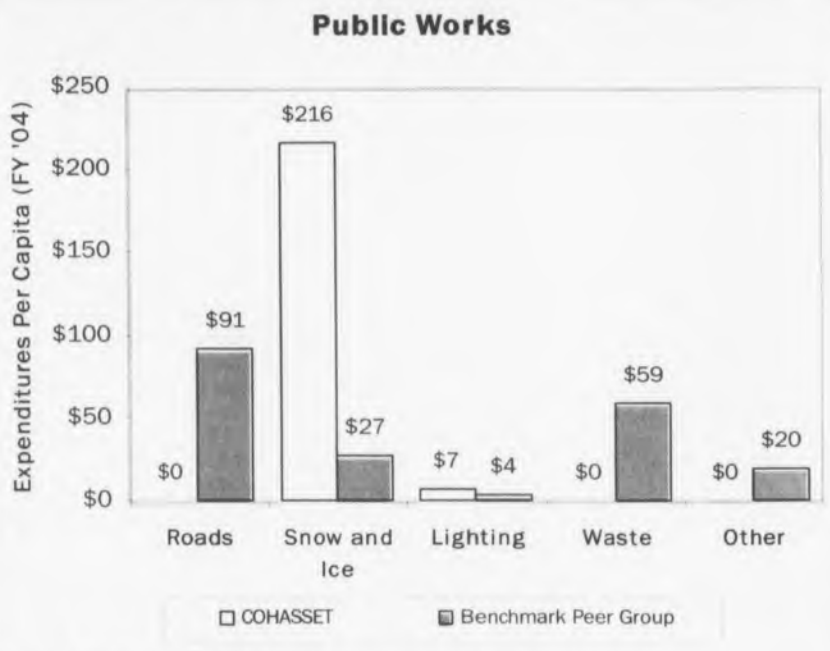
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com).

This chart shows the amount that Cohasset spent per capita in 2004 on public works, including roads, snow and ice removal, lighting, waste collection and disposal. This chart also provides the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. By comparing public works spending per capita against other similar communities, one can gauge how much it costs to provide the basic public works services. All else being equal, communities that have more infrastructure or provide more services will have higher costs.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Author talks about pitfalls of overachieving

The Hingham High School PTO and Buttonwood Books & Toys will host New York Times best-selling author, Alexandra Robbins, on Tuesday, Oct. 3, 7 p.m., at Hingham High School, 17 Union St., Hingham. Robbins will discuss her new book, "The Overachievers: The Secret Lives of Driven Kids," which questions how we prepare the next generation for their role in society

Competition at the top of the ladder is fierce. To excel in sports, to stack the report card with AP classes, to maintain status as a musical prodigy and to be the class valedictorian are lofty achievements individually, yet so many of today's young adults view them collectively as one goal. The reward for all the effort is acceptance at a top college, the perceived requirement for success. The price: eating disorders, sports-induced injuries, cheating, manipulation, and loss of love of learning and educational quality.

Robbins followed several top high students from her alma mater, Walt Whitman High, in Washington, D.C. over an academic year. "The Overachievers" is about what she learned and observed during this time. The need to be perfect is at the core of her characters and Robbins writes about their drive and grueling schedules. The author questions the current process of SAT testing and the college application procedure and reviews the flaws, offering suggestions for changing the process.

Give the Cohasset High football team credit for one thing: they know how to come up with miraculous plays to save games.

Just six days after beating Archbishop Williams on a halfback option in the last minute, there were the Skippers last Friday against Cardinal Spellman, down 6-0, facing a fourth-and-17 at their own 47 with 1:56 left in the game.

Most coaches – including the ones in the stands scouting the game – would have punted, with the hopes of forcing a three-and-out and getting the ball back for one last drive.

Not Pete Afanasiw, however, who decided to go for it. After a timeout, senior quarterback Anthony DiPaulo dropped back and heaved one downfield in the direction of senior wideout Fletcher Smalzel. Cardinals cornerback Michael Milero appeared to be in perfect position to break up the pass and lock up victory for the visitors.

Until, that is, Smalzel came back to the ball, went over the top of Milero and came down with a spectacular leaping catch. First down, Cohasset, at the Cardinals' 19.

After a couple good runs by DiPaulo and junior tailback Brian Hill, Spellman shored up its defense and forced the Skippers into a fourth-and-goal at the 4. And this time, it was DiPaulo's turn for glory, going left on a bootleg and sprinting untouched past the pylon and into the end zone for the touchdown with just 18 seconds left on the clock.

With their fans going wild, all the Skippers needed for its second straight comeback win was the extra point. Unfortunately, the attempt was missed, and the boys in white had to settle for a 6-6 tie.

As Cohasset's offense showed little life until the fourth quarter, it was up to the defense to keep the Skippers in the game. Aside from Spellman's 14-play, 87-yard scoring drive in the second quarter, it did just that.

On the defensive line, senior Nick Cambi and junior Jake Cuneo were both solid in stuffing Spellman's power running

CHS boys get on winning track

It took six games, but the Cohasset High boys soccer team is in the win column.

Goals from senior Hunter Sease, junior Evan Deutsch and sophomore Ivan Sceery – all in the first half – paced Cohasset to a comfortable 3-1 home win against Hull on Tuesday.

Now comes today's (Sept. 29, 4 p.m.) match against archrival Norwell, a side that will surely be out for revenge. Cohasset beat the Clippers three times last year, including a hotly contested 1-0 decision in the Div. 3 South quarterfinals.

After watching his team get off to a slow start this season, Skippers head coach Rob Leary is seeing improvement in his team's performance and intensity. He will certainly be hoping to see that continue against Norwell.

"I want to see us come out and play as hard as we can," Leary said Wednesday. "Norwell has revenge on their mind. It's a big-time rivalry, so our kids are excited already. I just want them to play as hard as they did against Harwich."

In that 1-1 tie against the Rough Riders last Wednesday, Cohasset conceded a goal in the fourth minute, but played well the rest of the way. Junior Sam Roth notched the equalizer in the second half, and the Skippers really applied the pressure in the last 15 minutes, but hit the crossbar twice in that span.

A key to the tie against a good Harwich team (the Rough Riders handed Norwell its first league loss on Tuesday) was the solid play of Cohasset's new-look defense. Sophomore Owen Landon has stepped in to the sweeper position, flanked by fullbacks Luke Genello and Matt Burgess. Senior stopper Adam Smith shut down Harwich's top scorer, Connor Burnham.

Landon is one of three JV call-ups that have been playing well for the varsity side in recent games. Junior Emma Oronte and sophomore Ryan Daley have both provided a strong presence up front for the Skippers.

Daley assisted Sceery's goal against Hull with a good cross from the left wing, a tally that broke a 1-1 deadlock in the 33rd minute. Just before the break, Sceery assisted Deutsch to Travis Roy speaks to players from the Yankee Conference youth hockey league at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham on Saturday.

Travis Roy is still scoring goals

Did not let hockey injury stop him

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

HINGHAM - Travis Roy may not have been a familiar figure to the Mites, Squirts and Pee Wees — who were too young to remember the BU player at the Pilgrim Skating Arena on Saturday — but soon he became someone they would never forget.

"Sometimes challenges chase us. But I believe we all have an inner spirit that is capable of doing things we never imagined."
— Travis Roy

Roy, now 30, talked about the 11 seconds that occurred 11 years ago — from face-off to hitting the boards — during which he accomplished a goal that would also forever change his life. But he also focused on the journey that led him to be able to don a Boston University uniform and where his goals have taken him since the accident.

Saturday's event that was co-sponsored by the Pilgrim Skating Arena and Yankee Conference, a youth hockey league based at the Hingham rink, raised money for the Travis Roy Foundation.

Today Roy, who as a youth hockey player dreamt about playing the sport in college and even the pros, is an author, hockey sports analyst, and motivational speaker with a foundation that supports research and one-on-one assistance to those with spinal cord injuries.

"I woke up that morning and it was the best day of my life," Roy recalled about Oct. 20, 1995. "I sat in the locker room that had just been redone and the walls were covered with pictures of past BU players who had moved on to the NHL."

"I thought someday my picture might be on that wall."

Roy said he pulled his #24 jersey over his head and filed out onto the ice. He remembers standing on the blue line for the National Anthem. "Never in my life had I ever before felt so proud," he said.

Roy said as a boy hockey was always on his mind and as he entered high school, he wrote his goals down including the number of points he would tally his freshman year. Along with that, was a dream goal of playing Division I college hockey. "My second dream goal was may be playing professional hockey," he said.

"I showed those goals to my Mom and Dad," he recalled. "But my Dad said you have to have good grades to get into college."

Roy said he thought about that and then wrote, "maintain a B average" as his next goal. He also wanted to break 1,000 on his SATs. "I folded up that list and put it into my desk drawer," he said about the course he charted.

During his senior year at Tabor Academy, Roy broke 1,000 on his SATs (after taking them five times, he said) and

Field hockey looking for consistency

Skippers see some good, some bad in recent stretch of games

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

In the unpredictable world of high school sports, the team with the most skill doesn't always end up with the best overall record.

For this reason, it's anyone's guess how the Cohasset High field hockey team will finish off the season.

Take Cohasset's showdown against Mashpee on Tuesday the 19th as the first case in point. While the Skippers' skill level matched that of the Falcons', it wasn't Cohasset's nifty stick handling that earned them this 3-1 South Shore League victory.

From the opening minute to the final whistle, the Skippers showed intensity, good spacing, and composure. By maintaining these three essential yet commonly overlooked fundamental tactics, Cohasset set the stage for plenty of offensive production.

In the first half, junior Corinna Durham fired off an unassisted goal that established the tempo for the rest of the game.

Unfortunately, the Skippers' composure met its downfall when they took on the Crusaders.

With a spring in their step at both ends of the field, the Skippers continued their attack in the second half. Junior Olivia Kimla assisted captain Caitlin Hurley, shortly followed by a heads-up goal from senior Virginia Spofford off a rebounding shot.

"The midfield controlled this game," remarked Cohasset head coach Deb Bostwick. "We maintained even spacing and transitioned the ball up the field very well. The girls definitely earned this one."

Unfortunately, the Skippers' composure met its downfall two days later when they took on the Crusaders. As Cohasset moped onto the Carver field last Thursday, the Skippers appeared flat.

"We did not prepare well pregame," admitted Bostwick. "The girls took Carver lightly, came out flat, and paid the price. They definitely learned from this one."

In contrast to the Mashpee game, the Skippers lost control in the midfield. Cohasset started to panic, and played out of position.

The Skippers' loss of composure opened up the door for the Crusaders' offense. Carver powerhouse Kayla Littig tallied a goal and an assist in the first half, followed by two more goals in the second.

Still, the Skippers showed a few positives. Senior captain Laura Campedelli assisted senior captain Sheelah Scott on a textbook offensive corner. A few minutes later, Scott found Spofford for a goal.

Campedelli and sophomore Georgia Murley did their jobs in the middle, and senior Michelle Madge and junior Paige Strecker did well on defense. Goalie Alyssa Mullin also made some impressive saves.

Even so, the Skippers found themselves down 4-2 as the final whistle sounded.

"The first half was terrible," admitted Hurley. "We were putting some passes together and had some solid attacks in the second half, but it was too late."

This tale of two games should definitely give the Skippers a wake up call. As they take on Hull, East Bridgewater, and Norwell this week, Cohasset will need to keep the Carver game in the back of their minds; also they need to think, "Composure! Composure! Composure!"

Sophomore sweeper Sammie Lehr (right) heads the ball away from a Holbrook player. Cohasset's defense has allowed just four goals through its first seven games.

The Cohasset High girls soccer team's impressive goal-scoring form has continued with 17 goals in its last two games, road wins over Harwich and Hull.

Those wins improved the Skippers' record to 6-1, and it will take that mark into its match today (Sept. 29, 4 p.m.) in Norwell against the South Shore League-leading Clippers.

Norwell comes in with a 5-0-2 record (the ties coming against Abington and Pembroke), and in its most recent match, beat Harwich 6-1, the same Rough Riders side that Cohasset topped 8-0 last week.

The Clippers have been a difficult matchup for Cohasset in recent years, but Skippers head coach Deb Beal says she and her players are prepared to make things different this time.

"That will be a really good game. I believe we are ready and confident," said the coach.

The trip to Harwich can be a dicey one, with the extended bus ride down and then limited warm-up time before the game. Suffice it to say there were few problems this time around.

"The trip to Harwich was successful for both the JV and varsity teams," said Beal. "The trip is long and anything can happen when you get off the bus. The girls did an outstanding job of getting it together quickly and preparing themselves to play."

The Skippers' last two lopsided wins have allowed to give her bench players more time on the pitch, which in turn has given Cohasset's stars to recover from various nicks, bruises, sprains and pulls.

"Never have I had a team that has the chemistry this one does. From day one they worked hard and they have met challenges face on."

Skippers head coach Deb Beal

Sophomore striker Torey Hart is still nursing a sprained ankle, but continues to improve. In Tuesday's 9-0 victory in Hull, she served up four corners and the Skippers scored on all four. Junior forward Meg Anderson was on the receiving end of two of those corners.

Sophomore center-midfielder Maggie McGoldrick is recovering from a bruised rib that she sustained in the Sept. 18 match against Carver. Beal says she appears to be ready to jump back into the action. It doesn't end there, as junior fullback Anna Haggerty is caring for a sore ankle and toe, and senior captain Emily Coggins has a slight quad pull.

"Thankfully, these injuries occurred in a portion of the season that allows for some rest time. We don't seem too overwhelmed trying to fit games in and playing more than twice a week," Beal said. "But now, I believe the toughest part of our schedule is just about here."

A cursory glance at the upcoming schedule backs up that assertion. After the showdown with Norwell, the girls go to Mashpee on Wednesday. The Falcons play on a notoriously small field, and can give opponents fits with what Beal described as their "kick and run style of soccer."

Next is a trip next Friday to East Bridgewater, a side the Skippers beat 5-0 at Alumni Field on Sept. 12. The Vikings threw an interesting twist into the league standings by beating Abington on Tuesday, handing the Green Wave their first league loss of the season. Should Cohasset top Norwell today, the Clippers and Green Wave would both have a loss and tie to their league record, put the Skippers at the top of the table with just one loss (to Abington).

After EB, Cohasset plays Abington and Carver the following week. And, lest anyone forget, all these matches are on the road.

"I think we need to fasten our seatbelts and go," said Beal. "We have worked hard and now, after seven games, we have solidified our confidence in one another and we continue to improve everyday.

"Never have I had a team that has the chemistry this one does. From day one they worked hard and they have met challenges face on. These kids just play. The bus rides are hysterical and they genuinely enjoy one another's company."

attack for most of the game. When a Cardinals runner did manage to get through the trenches, senior co-captain Colin Conway was there to clean up from his linebacker position.

Junior defensive back David Snowdale had two big sacks in the second half, including one on the first play of the fourth quarter that forced Spellman to punt after it had advanced into Cohasset territory.

Another clutch play came from junior Schyuler Wakefield, who recovered a fumble of a bad Spellman handoff with 5:29 left in the game to set up the Skippers' final drive.

The result makes Cohasset's record 2-0-1 as they have prepared this week for a showdown with rival Scituate tomorrow (Sept. 30). Kickoff at Scituate High School is scheduled for 2 p.m. account for the match's final goal.

Deutsch has been spending his time in the midfield after the starting the year at his usual sweeper position. Cohasset has been playing without its talented junior center-mid, Mike Grimm, and Deutsch has joined senior Chris Donze and Roth to help fill in at that important position.

"Evan is a good player with good ball control skills to play that spot," said Leary. "He has the skill to move forward, and he wants to do it."

After the Norwell match, Cohasset returns to Alumni Field to host Mashpee on Wednesday and East Bridgewater next Friday.

COASTAL STARS

Squirt B1

"Hey honey, where's my winter coat and wool socks?" "Why, are we finally going on that second honeymoon cruise to Alaska?" "Noooo, it's hockey season!" That's right, and the Coastal Stars squirt B1 squad started off the season by cruising over Braintree 4-1.

The first period was "trial and error" time as the players found their groove as a team. The offensive line of Matt Scullion, Bryan Bowman and Mats Nelson demonstrated they were gelling by keeping constant pressure on the Braintree squad. Then, with 4:15 left in the period, defenseman Matt Doyle deked the Braintree D-man and fired a cannon over the goalie's right shoulder to put the Stars up by one.

The second period was dominated by the Stars. Rarely did the puck leave their offensive zone. Nevin Connors, Will Cole and Chris Bertone circled the net like coyotes on a lamb, but the goalie held his ground. Braintree did manage one scoring opportunity with a breakout score off a rebound, which tied the score at one a piece. A mere ten seconds later that tie was broken by Joey Redfearn. He streaked up the middle, flanked by his wings Tucker Ambrose and Paul Parker. The goalie didn't have a chance to stop Redfearn's wrist shot over the right shoulder. Then, with 5:56 left in the second period, Will Cole tucked the puck under the goalie's pads off a Kal Maier rebounded shot.

Now up by two goals, the defense took over and shut the Braintree team down. The remainder of the second period and all of the third was a display of phenomenal defense led by goalie Hugh Healey who denied Braintree's desperate attempts with his "white walls". While the Stars were short-handed, Jack Evitts broke up a three on two rush with his seemingly ten foot long stick. Robert Reidy used perfect body positioning to stop a two on one rush. Kal Maier and Matt Doyle were twin brick walls, letting nothing escape the offensive zone.

Finally, with the game clock about to expire, Tucker Ambrose blasted a wrist shot through the goalie's pads to end the game Stars 4 and Braintree 1.

Last Saturday, the Coastal Stars Squirt B-1 team continued their winning ways traveling to Bridgewater for a 6 a.m. sunriser versus the Pythons of Pembroke. The theme of the game was offense, "early and often" as the Pythons were outmatched by Coach Redfearn's B-1 Bombers.

Just one minute into the game, Big Bryan Bowman, affectionately known as "Triple B", streaked down the left side for his first goal, tucking one past the Python goalie into the right hand corner. Robert Reidy answered three minutes later, deking the D-man and going in alone for the goal. Up 2-0 and with 7:12 left in the period, Kal Maier was led to the Sin Bin on a tripping infraction. The Special Forces line of Tucker Ambrose, Paul Parker, Matt Doyle and Jo Jo Carbone successfully killed off the penalty to keep Pembroke from mustering any momentum. Strong skating and good stick work by Chris Bertone, Nevin Connors, and Matthew Scullion contained Pembroke and prevented them from breaking out of their own end.

Joey "Juneau" Redfearn resumed the scoring with a left fake at the blue line and a drive to the center, unleashing a cannon of a wrist shot that found its mark at 3:32 of the first. Moments later, defenseman Mats Nelson outnumbered on a Pembroke attack, foiled the rush with a nifty poke check.

The second period was much like the first as the B-1 Bombers scored at will. Tucker Ambrose started off the scoring with a neat little "shake and bake" move followed by a wrister into the top left corner. A couple minutes later, it was Joey Redfearn with his second goal of the game on a "coast to coast" rush finding top shelf over the goalie's shoulder. At 4:11 in the period, Jack Evitts made it 6-0 tucking a shot under the pads of the outstretched Pembroke netminder.

The onslaught continued into the 3rd period, with Bryan Bowman scoring his second off an assist from Evitts. Then Kal Maier set-up Matt Doyle who scored on a second attempt off his own rebound. Seconds later, Will Cole became the seventh Star to make it into the scorer's column burying a wrist shot into the top left corner.

And then if that wasn't enough, Bryan Bowman scored the hat trick and sealed player of the game honors off a give and go. Coastal Stars goalie Hugh Healey stood tall and cemented the shut-out with a 10-0 win over Pembroke.

CBBC Basketball Coaches needed

Anyone interested in coaching girls and boys travel basketball teams, grades 5-8, for the upcoming season should contact Joe Campbell for boys programs at 383-0655, or via email, campcoh@comcast.net. For girls programs you should contact Chris Haggerty at 383-9930.

The season begins in late October and ends in mid-March. You will be asked to forward a letter of interest to the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club and to provide information for a CORI check.

Coaching selections will be made before tryouts begin on Oct. 30. Assistant coaches and scorekeepers will be recruited after the teams are selected.

Instructional and Learn To Skate

Instructional Hockey for Coastal Stars Youth Hockey program is now open for online registration. The fee for the season is $500, which includes practice ice, skills session and weekend games. Full equipment is required. Skating skills are required.

If you have any questions, please visit the website. The season begins Oct. 2 with Skills at Hobomock Arena, 5 p.m.

Coastal Stars Learn to Skate begins Saturday, Oct. 28 at 5 p.m. at Hobomock Arena. Helmets, gloves, and neck guards required. Please visit the website for further information and online registration.

Winter rec hoops

The Recreation department will be taking walk-in registrations for Winter recreation basketball for all kids in grades 1-8 until Friday, Sept. 29.

Registration and coaches sign-up sheets are available in the Recreation office at the town hall. See Jack Whorley in the recreation office for details or email ellenmaher63@comcast.net for more information.

Boot Camp fitness training

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a bi-weekly Boot Camp Fitness Training Program to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, Sept. 19 through Thursday, Nov. 23 on Cohasset Common, in front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset. You may register by calling the recreation department at (781)383-4109.

The session concludes Thursday, Nov. 23 (Thanksgiving Day) with a race in Hingham.

Ms. Callanan will run an interval callisthenic and running fitness program for both men and women of all ability levels. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardiovascular training format, included will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit-ups, etc. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardiovascular endurance and strength.

Please dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope, and wear running shoes. Success in this class is based upon your individual personal best, not as a competition with others.

One of Travis Roy's messages to the crowd in Hingham on Saturday was the importance of having goals in both athletics and academics.

was contacted by every Division I college hockey program in the country.

Roy, who chose Boston University, made two more goals: to maintain academic eligibility and to be in the lineup for the first game of the year.

"BU were the defending national champions and I wanted to be on the ice when the championship banner was raised," he recalled.

While sitting on the bench that October day, he recalled feeling the tap on his shoulder meaning it was time for him to play. "I'd been waiting for that pat my whole life," he said. So he hopped over the boards and skated into the offensive zone.

Roy said having a positive attitude, core values, and respect for others are the keys to success.

Seconds later Roy, who was skating as hard as he could, lost his balance while checking a North Dakota defenseman and hit the boards.

The scene, which has been replayed 1,000s of times on TV, did not put Roy on the sidelines of life, although he said recovery and learning to cope as a quadriplegic was not easy.

"I knew I was in trouble and asked a teammate to find my Dad in the stands," he recalled. "But in that 11 seconds I lived out a dream – I lived my goal.

"I told my Dad, 'I made it,' but at the same time I knew it was over."

What came next was 2-1/2 months in intensive care, followed by eight weeks at the Shepherd Center in Atlanta. He then went home to begin life as a quadriplegic.

"As I look at my life sitting here in this wheelchair today – I feel very fortunate," Roy said. "I can't do physical things, but I can still laugh, still cry, still love people and they me, and still set goals."

Roy has established the Travis Roy Foundation and written an inspirational book "Eleven Seconds, a Story of Tragedy, Courage and Triumph."

Roy said having a positive attitude, core values, and respect for others are the keys to success.

"Sometimes challenges chase us," he said. "But I believe we all have an inner spirit that is capable of doing things we never imagined."

Bob Badmington, head of the Yankee Conference youth hockey league, said he was awestruck by Roy's talk. And he wasn't the only one. "You could see that not one child flinched," he said about the players in the audience. "They grasped every word."

Stephen Quigley, who attended the event with his sons, Brennan, 7, and Christian, 9, said his boys picked up every word Roy said. "A lot of people would have given up," Quigley said. "But he has turned this into a positive."

Sean McCarthy, 11, of Duxbury, who is a Pee Wee, said the message he will walk way with is " you can always succeed even if you have a disability."

Michael McHugh of Weymouth, who was in the audience with his son, Michael, 9, said Roy's talk brought a tear to his eye. "He has got a positive attitude that should be an inspiration to everybody," he said.

The $1,000 raised from Saturday's raffle will be donated to the Travis Roy Foundation. The arena also gave an additional $500.

Diane Mariani, director of the pro shop at the arena, said when she called people for raffle items and they heard Roy's name "doors flew open for me," she said.

Donors for the Travis Roy event included: Coca Cola (four luxury box tickets to a Bruins game); Nike/Bauer; Reebok/CCM; Mission/Itech; Easton Hockey Sports; Sherwood Hockey; Ned Bunyon NE Sports Products Assoc.; Murray Sandler Sports; Smart Hockey; The Bruins Foundation; US Foods; Connie Keough "Balloons for All Reasons"; A.D. Handy Sound System, Joe Trudeau; Kennedy's Country Gardens (autumn display of mums, kale, cornstalks, pumpkins, grasses, and scarecrows. 20 percent of the sale of any display item went to Travis Roy Foundation).

Elderly find novel book program opens new chapter

Murphy works with Adult Services Librarian Gayle Walsh to coordinate the Homebound Delivery program, in which volunteers from the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library deliver books to residents. Walsh has been working in Cohasset for the past 14 months, but the program has been in the works for the last five years. "In the last two years, it has really taken off to the program we have now," said Murphy.

Murphy said Walsh pulls together various titles based on the requests of seniors and it is an invaluable resource. Sometimes seniors will find they like a particular kind of writing style or genre, and Walsh does her best to come up with books she thinks they will enjoy, using the library's database.

Walsh said the library is doing its best to support the needs of seniors in the community. She said they have books with large print in stock as well as audio books on CD. "Those have been very successful," she said. However, some residents have trouble using CD players, which is why the library also keeps audio books on cassette tapes on hand as well.

Walsh added the library also fairly recently came into a new kind of audio book called a "Playaway" which is a book on tape, played through a small, lightweight device that is hung on a lanyard around the neck with the play button on the back. It has earphones and can be worn like a Walkman, which makes it easy to take around the house.

"It also bookmarks where you left off" if you choose to temporarily stop the story, Murphy said. For residents who are more technologically savvy, audio books can also be downloaded onto the computer.

To become involved in the program, Walsh said all a resident needs to do is have a library card. She said once a resident is signed up, they are given a Paul Pratt Memorial Library canvas book bag, which Murphy will take their books to and from the library in. "We can also help them make their selections, whether it be magazines, print materials or audio books," Walsh said. "We will work with any resident to get library materials in any format."

Murphy said she has been working with the Council on Elder Affairs to reach out to seniors and let them know the Homebound Delivery program exists. "We know there are many individuals in their homes and we love to keep them connected with us," she said. While they may not be able to venture out on their own too much, due to various reasons including disabilities, "Their minds are so alert and they want to absorb everything," said Murphy, adding not only does she enjoy hearing about the books the seniors have read, she loves sharing about the books she is reading as well.

Murphy said she receives requests for "light reads" very often. In fact, she said she will sometimes pick a book and read it aloud during her visits to Cohasset Knoll. She said there is one book, "32 Third Graders and One Class Bunny," which tells many life lessons about a lifetime of teaching. Murphy said there are many short stories throughout the book, one of which has the teacher getting his tie stuck in the laminating machine and the custodian cutting him out, which leaves the seniors in hysterics. "We have two retired teachers in our group and they can really relate to it," Murphy said.

For those seniors who live in their own homes, Murphy will pay a visit any time they need new books. Fees are waived for those who participate in the program, to ensure they have all the time they need to read their books. When they are done, all they must do is either call Murphy or Walsh, and new books will be delivered.

Murphy said through her participation in the program, she has found she is doing more than just delivering books, she has made a whole new group of friends. "I never realized it was going to be so rewarding," she said. "You make their day, and they make yours."

To take part in the Homebound Delivery program, please call Gayle Walsh, Adult Services Librarian at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at (781) 383-1348. There is no charge to participate in the program.

Mix and mingle with these Masters of Mystery.

Saturday, October 14, 2006

How do suspense writers work? Where do they get their ideas? Listen to three celebrity authors as they read from their books, share personal insights about their art and answer your questions. And the setting? The living rooms of our three Custom Gallery concept homes.

Choose from two sessions:

11:30AM - 4:30PM

including a lunch buffet

SUSAN ORLEAN - The Orchid Thief

Best-seller about the dangerous, costly obsession with all things orchid. Orlean's most prominent work went on to become a major motion picture.

WILLIAM MARTIN - Harvard Yard

Martin crafts a massive New England mystery that ranges from the Pilgrims to the Boston Tea Party to the Civil War and beyond.

ANDRE DUBUS III - House of Sand and Fog

Dubus, Massachusetts' own suspense master, spins a literary thriller that combines vibrant contemporary characters with a chilling dose of film noir.

SESSION 2

5:30PM - 10:30PM

including a light dinner buffet

DENNIS LEHANE - Coronado

Traditional myths about class, gender, freedom and violence are explored in this remarkable assortment of stories by the Mystic River author.

JOYCE MAYNARD - Internal Combustion

Maynard delves into an unbelievably personal and deeply psychological true story of murder, brimming with Americana in the motor city of Detroit.

JOSEPH FINDER - Killer Instinct

Finder has created a rollicking thriller about climbing the corporate ladder while exploiting cutthroat tactics and the skills of an ex-special forces comrade.

$100 per guest per session. Each session is a separate admission.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Sixth-graders at Camp Bournedale

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

This week the sixth grade is at Camp Bournedale. That doesn't mean that CHS is any less active, however. As usual, the student body scrambles to finish their breakfast sandwiches at break and head into their next class. The brevity of this week's news is misleading, everyone is extremely busy.

• Congratulations to newly elected Student council President and Vice President Lacey Richardson and Mercedes Barnes-Jackson!

• Debate team held their first meeting Thursday after school.

• Mr. Magnussen's Marine Science class went on a field trip to Nahant and boarded Northeastern's RV Mysis. They collected different creatures like rays, flounder, crabs and lobsters and measured them in a somewhat slimy hands-on environment.

• Yearbook held their first meeting Wednesday at lunch.

• Auditions for this year's musical Guys and Dolls took place this week. If you missed out and are interested, see Mr. Marks ASAP.

That wraps up the news. Next week is a four-day week, and students couldn't be happier. Finally we get a chance to relax from schoolwork. Or go look at colleges. Either way, another week has gone come and gone. Sit back and enjoy the weekend for at least a little while, Cohasset. You've earned it.

Field hockey at middle school

Cohasset Middle School girls in grades 6 through 8 can now participate in one of the oldest of competitive pastimes. Field Hockey, which dates back well before the Ancient Olympic Games, is being offered every Monday and Wednesday from 4 - 5:30 p.m. at the Deer Hill School field. Sponsored by the Cohasset Field Hockey Boosters Club, the program has expanded to field one team from each of the Middle School grades. Coaches Mike Condon, Gigi Meehan, Beth Marsden and Abbey Coakley stressed that no experience is necessary and sixth-grade girls are especially needed to round out a team for that age group. Girls must have shin guards and mouth guards. Sticks are available for loan. Practice will be held this Monday, Oct. 2 at 4 p.m.

Coaches Gigi Meehan, Beth Marsden, Mike Condon and Abbey Coakley prepare for another great season of field hockey.

For more information or to download the registration form contact Mike Condon, Cohasset Field Hockey Club at 781-383-6895 or e-mail him at Seawitchskipper@aol.com.

Ryan Ingram named National Merit finalist

National Merit Corporation has published the names of the semifinalists in the 52nd annual National Merit Scholarship Program. Cohasset High School has announced that Ryan Ingram has been named a finalist in the 2007 Merit Scholarship Competition. Ingram entered the competition by taking the 2005 Preliminary SAT/NMSQT, which served as an initial screening of program entrants. The nationwide semifinalists named in the 2007 pool of semifinalists, which represents less than 1 percent of United States. high school seniors, includes the highest scoring entrants in each state.

To become a finalist, each student must have an outstanding academic record throughout high school, be endorsed and recommended by the school principal and earn SAT scores that confirm the student's earlier qualifying test performance. Ingram and school officials must submit a detailed scholarship application, which includes a self-descriptive essay and information about participation and leadership in school and community activities.

In a second announcement received Sept. 22, it was reported that Kevin Barber, Reed Dickinson, Caren Garber, Colleen Richardson and Amanda Thompson have been named Commended Students in the 2007 National Merit Scholarship Program. A Letter of Commendation from Cohasset High School and the National Merit Scholarship Corporation has been presented by the principal to these scholastically talented seniors. Commended Students placed among the top 5 percent or more of 1.4 million students who entered the 2007 competition by taking the Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

Legion Golf Tournament

The George H. Mealy Post 118 is hosting an American Legion Golf Tournament on Tuesday, Oct. 10, at the Hatherly Country Club. Shot gun Start is at 1 p.m. Entry fee is $150, and includes prizes, drawing and dinner.

Applications may be submitted as a team foursome, or individuals may submit an application and be placed on a team.

Those choosing not to play golf and those who are playing are encouraged to sponsor a hole for $50. Sponsor's name will be placed on the hole.

Applications must be returned to the legion post by Saturday, Oct. 7, along with entry fees and hole sponsorships.

Qi Gong offered

Qi Gong is a new offering at the Hingham Community Center. Qi means breath, or energy. Gong means practice. Together, Qi Gong is a gentle and relaxed holistic exercise system that helps revitalize the body, lower blood pressure, and lessen stress by relaxing the mind. The new class runs for eight weeks on Fridays, from 9 to 10 a.m. starting Oct. 6. Call 781-749-9786 for information.

Unclaimed bike day

Cohasset police are hosting an "unclaimed bicycle day" from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday (Oct. 7) at police headquarters on Elm Street.

The department has about 30 unclaimed bicycles that were lost or stolen.

If residents think the police may have recovered a lost or stolen bicycle that belongs to them, they should plan to attend, Dispatch Supervisor Thomas Wigmore said.

Bicycles not picked up that day could be declared surplus, he said.

Tickets available for animal shelter benefit

Tickets are now available for the Scituate Animal Shelter's Bark 'n Howl Ball, Saturday, Oct. 28, at the River Club in Scituate, from 7 p.m. to midnight. The evening will include a buffet dinner, cash bar and dancing to the music of local band Section 8. There will also be silent and live auctions.

Tickets are $125 each, $100 is tax deductible, and all proceeds benefit the 3A Farm Fund. Volunteers still need to raise $150,000 for a new 2,500 square foot animal shelter at Route 3A and Mann Lot Road, Scituate, to replace the facility currently on the Driftway. Since 1993, the no-kill shelter has served the towns of Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull, accommodating stray, homeless, injured and surrendered companion animals.

Tickets to the Bark 'n Howl Ball are limited and are available at the Shelter on the Driftway in Scituate and Sylvia's by the Sea in Scituate Harbor. Reserved tables and sponsorships are available.

For more information, call the shelter at 781-545-8703. Shelter hours are Monday through Friday, from 4 to 6 p.m., and Saturday 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information and to follow the progress of the relocation, visit town.scituate.ma.us/animal-shelter or 3afarmfund.com.

5-year reunion

Calling all class members of CHS Class of 2001! The CHS Class of 2001 reunion will be held on Friday, Nov. 24th (day after Thanksgiving), 7:30-11:30 pm at the American Legion in downtown Cohasset. For more information. Please email Kelly Devine at classof2001chs@hotmail.com, or call 781-640-1542.

HSO to kick off season with Bellevue Cadillac

On Saturday, Sept. 30, from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. at the Cushing Center in Norwell, Hingham Symphony Orchestra will team up with the jazz swing blues sounds of big band Bellevue Cadillac to celebrate its 10th season as a professional symphony orchestra. The evening will feature a live and silent auction, small plates catered by 53 South, and a wine and martini bar courtesy of Marsh's Liquors and PRP Wines. The party is sponsored in part by the South Shore office of Merrill Lynch. The Bravo performance celebrates the unquenchable appeal of music. Several HSO musicians will sit in with the band to perform jazz and swing standards. Bellevue Cadillac bassist Andy Bergsten of Scituate used to play string bass with Hingham Civic Orchestra, and now serves on the board of the HSO. Tickets at $75 per person, benefit the HSO. Call 781-740-5694 to reserve a ticket.

Order spring bulbs

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is currently taking orders for a selection of spring flowering bulbs that will fill gardens with color from April to June. The assortment includes a violet-rose peony, flowering tulip, double narcissi with huge creamy yellow flowers, parrot tulips, deer- and rodent-resistant alliums, as well as petite muscari and scilla. Bulbs ordered now will become available at the end of September, and each order will be accompanied with directions for planting. Dutch organic bulb food is also available and recommended to enhance a garden's performance.

To order now for the best selection, call 781-383-0838. The bulbs will also be sold at the Cohasset Farmer's Market on Cohasset Common on Thursdays from 2:30 to 5 p.m. All purchases help fund club programs and community services.

Autumn Boutique

Enjoy a glass of wine while shopping for gifts, clothing and accessories on Thursday, Oct. 5, from 6 to 9 p.m., at the Lighthouse Keeper's Residence, Bancroft Hall, 15 Lighthouse Lane, Cohasset. Admission is complimentary and open to all.

The event is sponsored by Anna William Handbags, Dear Olive, Elizabeth and Kate, Emily Kuvin Jewelry, Frosted Brownie, Jodi's Jems, Little Black Dress Wines, Magpie Rings, The Pink Poppy and Triveah Clothing.

Newcomers gatherings

All new and prospective members, as well as current members, are invited to New Member Gatherings for the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club to get to know some new faces in the community and to learn more about the club. Friends and children are welcome to attend. SCNC will host a wine and cheese event and a couple of coffees in October, all of which are currently scheduled for the following dates:

Oct. 7, wine and cheese event at 4 p.m. Register with Kelly at k-dlee@hotmail.com or call 545-0866.

Oct. 13, coffee at 10 a.m. Register with Kelly.

For more information, including location for the Oct. 7 and Oct. 13 events, contact Kelly. Also, check out the Web site at scnewcomers.com. Many activities are scheduled during the year.

Jazz Upfront

The South Shore Conservatory Concert Series opens its 2006-2007 season on Friday, Sept. 29, at 7:30 p.m., with Jazz Upfront, a concert of old favorites and new compositions featuring John Kramer, piano, John Vanderpool, saxophone, Chris Rathbun, bass, and Ed Sorrentino, percussion. A reception precedes the concert at 6:45 p.m., and offers an opportunity to enjoy the current exhibition in the Bengtz and Cutler Galleries.

The Conservatory Concert Series offers two series of six concerts in Duxbury or Hingham from September through May, and includes solo performances, chamber music, jazz, and opera. A reception often precedes the concert and provides a local evening of camaraderie and music with convenient parking.

Jazz Upfront tickets are $20 and $15, and may be ordered singly or as part of a subscription at the Web site at southshoreconservatory.org/concertseries or by calling 781-934-2731, ext. 10 or 781-749-7565, ext. 10.

Concert series features British organist

Scriven has toured Europe, Canada, and the United States, and in 1995, won the Royal College of Organists Performer of the year competition.

As part of its Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church is presenting organist Philip Scriven of Lichfield Cathedral, England in recital on Thursday evening, Oct. 19, at 7:30 p.m. Receiving his early training as a chorister at Westminster Abbey, Philip Scriven is now organist and director of music at Litchfield Cathedral. He founded the Vienna Orpheus Choir and Orchestra and is well known as a conductor of opera. Scriven has toured Europe, Canada, and the United States, and in 1995, won the Royal College of Organists Performer of the Year competition.

The program will include Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in D Major," Duruflé's "Suite for Organ," and "Rubrics" by Dan Locklair. The program will be performed on the historic 58-rank Aeolian-Skinner instrument at St. Stephen's, known for its tonal diversity and unique placement.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave., and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781.383.1083.

Philip Scriven of Lichfield Cathedral, England

'Two cultures, two journeys' at Abbey

After the tragedy of 9/11, two women made that difficult journey and transformed their lives and those of others.

Glastonbury Abbey's Inter-Religious Lecture Series, "Listening to Other Voices: The Fears That Bind Us," convenes on Thursday, Oct. 12, 7:15 p.m., in the Glastonbury Conference Center, 16 Hull St., Hingham, with "Beyond the 11th: Two Women, Two cultures, Two Journeys."

How does one get from terror, fear, grief and despair to hope and healing? After the tragedy of 9/11, two women made that difficult journey and transformed their lives and those of others. Susan Retik, expecting her third child, lost her husband in a hijacked airplane that crashed into a World Trade Center tower on 9/11. Debbie Almontaser, an American Muslim woman and Brooklyn, N.Y. teacher, required an escort for her personal safety after 9/11. Their stories are inspiring.

Lectures are free of charge; donations will be accepted. Reservations recommended. Call 781-749-2155.

Roma makes sure music is letter perfect in 'Spelling Bee'

Cohasset conductor leads band for Boston run of hit musical

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

As a pianist and music director for national touring companies like "Cats," "The King and I," and "Mamma Mia!" Janet Roma estimates she has seen almost every corner of the United States at least twice in the last 20 years. So the Cohasset resident was delighted when she was chosen as music director for the extended engagement of "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee," the Tony Award-winning Broadway musical that opened this week at Boston's Wilbur Theatre.

"I've done so much traveling over the years that to get to do a sit-down run like this is just a wonderful opportunity," said Roma last week by telephone from her home. "I'm thrilled to be doing 'Spelling Bee' locally. The Boston cast is made up of New York actors who are coming here after a highly successful six-month run in San Francisco. It is a terrific company which I am very pleased to be joining here."

Unlike many of her prior pit band experiences, Roma and her piano will be on-stage in Boston along with the four other instrumentalists.

"When you are music directing, you're connecting with the performers. Working in a pit is really a disconnect. It makes for a much better experience for us as musicians when we're included and on-stage for the show."

In one particular scene, Roma even becomes part of the show.

"In 'I Speak Six Languages,' the young Asian character joins me on the piano bench and ends up pushing me off of it. It is a very funny moment as long as I remember how to fall properly."

On-stage and off, Roma isn't the only Massachusetts connection for "Spelling Bee," which won 2005 Tony Awards for Best Book of a Musical and Best Featured Actor - composer and lyricist William Finn ("Falset-tos") is a graduate of Natick High School and the show itself made its 2004 debut at the Barrington Stage Company. From its beginnings in the Berkshires, the musical moved to off-Broadway and then to Broadway where it has proven a perfect fit for its home at the intimate Circle in the Square Theater.

Janet Roma

Conceived by Rebecca Feldman from a series of improvisational sketches, with a book by Rachel Sheinkin, and directed by Tony and Pulitzer Prize winner James Lapine, "Spelling Bee" chronicles the experience of six youngsters vying for a spelling championship. The off-beat band of middle-school outcasts find that a spelling bee is the one place that they can stand out and fit in at the same time.

"This show is just great, because the writing is so funny. I watched it three times in New York when I knew I was going to be doing it in Boston and it was different every time thanks to the added bonus of guest spellers selected from the audience before each show," explains Roma, whose early credits include a two-year stint as pianist with The Ice Capades. "The music is just wonderful, too, because it is not only quirky, but it also has great heart. The characters are nerdy, for sure, but they're also very smart. The story is all about belonging which is something we can all relate to."

The six young contestants of the Tony Award-winning musical comedy, and Broadway smash hit The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee, opening September 26 at The Wilbur Theatre Boston.

While Roma settles into what she hopes will be a long run at the Wilbur, she also looks ahead to a springtime assignment in Asia which will professionally reunite her with husband Gene Roma, a drummer and percussionist, with whom she has shared many an orchestra pit.

"In 2005, my husband and I did 'The Sound of Music' in Hong Kong and mainland China. Next spring, there is a good chance we will be returning to China on a three-month-tour of 'The King and I' that a company called Broadway Asia is producing. The Chinese people love American musicals so they make great audiences. They're quieter and they listen intently, but they will also sing along with some of the songs. It was thrilling to be a part of the first American musical to play mainland China and we're very much looking forward to going back next year. We're set to play Tokyo, Singapore, Shanghai and Beijing. We couldn't speak to anyone the first time around, because of the language barrier. We're working on our Mandarin Chinese with a special computer program called 'Rosetta Stone' so we'll be better prepared next year."

The language barrier aside, Roma says she couldn't have felt more welcome in China despite the challenges posed by the country's burgeoning development.

"China is a very interesting place. It is very hard there now. The pollution is just awful and the conditions are often terrible. You can hear jackhammers 24 hours a day, because of all the new construction. The people, however, are very warm, wonderful and welcoming. It is an amazing experience to be among them."

Roma is drawn to China, but the Northeast still has its own strong allure.

"I was born in the old Chelsea Navy Hospital, but when I was just two weeks old my family moved to Charlotte, N.C., where I lived most of my life." That is, until a 1984 rehearsal for the musical "Jerry's Girls" in the lobby of Boston's Colonial Theatre brought the then-Janet Glazener into contact with a certain local percussionist assigned to her pit band.

"I met Gene Roma in the lobby of the Colonial when I was running a rehearsal for 'Jerry's Girls' with Carol Channing. I knew immediately that he was a wonderful musician, but he had an East Coast vibe that I wasn't used to. He asked me out every day from that first rehearsal until the end of the three-week run. I resisted and resisted until I finally said yes. By the end of 1985, Gene had moved to New York to join me for 'Jerry's Girls' on Broadway. We were married in 1987 and moved to Cohasset two years later. We toured together quite a bit from that time until about 2000 when we decided to come off the road and spend more time at home. We haven't toured nationally together since "Sunset Blvd.," with Petula Clark. Gene isn't with me in 'Spelling Bee.' His job was cast before I was hired, but I love having Gene with me which is one of the reasons we jumped at Asia."

When that gig ends, however, Roma expects that she and her husband will be ready to head home.

"We've been in Cohasset now for 17 years and we love it. We never want to leave."

Movie review

No-nonsense Senior Chief Ben Randall (Kevin Costner) gives the once-over to his new batch of rescue trainees.

Coast Guard tale needs rescuing

"The Guardian" (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

An acceptable "An Officer and Gentleman" knockoff with high-octane CGI effects, "The Guardian" puts Kevin Costner in the Lou Gossett Jr. role and Ashton Kutcher in the role that helped make Richard Gere a 1980s star.

A star is not reborn.

Transplanted from the Navy's flight school to the perilous world of Coast Guard rescue swimmers, "The Guardian" presents Costner's Ben Randall, who holds all the records at the team's training academy, as an aging action hero put into mothballs after a horrific accident wipes out his team.

These high-seas, heavy-metal opening scenes in which his longtime wife (the talented Sela Ward, making the most of a thankless role) also leaves him after years of estrangement, are undeniably engaging, exciting and well staged by director Andrew Davis ("The Fugitive").

The film pits Randall against hotdog recruit Jake Fischer (Kutcher), whom Randall oddly dubs "Goldfish." Fischer is a high school swim team champion bent on breaking all of Randall's records (Stop me if you know exactly where this is headed).

Off base, Fischer meets a pretty local school teacher who tells him she'll date him, but their relationship must be casual. Can we also expect a new cover of Joe Cocker and Jennifer Warnes' classic duet "Up Where We Belong"?

The rest of the film is so familiar, I sat there checking off the plot points. Randall begins teaching at the academy school, where he invents superhuman exercises designed apparently to weed out all the recruits. He apparently believes no one to be worthy.

But since this is his first time teaching, how does Randall know the exercises aren't impossible or even deadly? Plus, I know he's stationed in Kodiak, Alaska, in opening scenes. But how is the weather at sea is so awful, yet it's not even raining on base? Movies like "The Guardian" don't ask such questions and don't expect their audiences to ask them, either.

Among the recruits are the obligatory women, one of whom, a Meg Ryan look-alike, mysteriously vanishes without comment, and a sad-eyed male runt trying to pass muster for the third time.

We even get a retake of the famous scene in which an adamant Gere refuses to quit while Gossett hoses him down with water. Is this a tribute? Or does Davis assume no one has seen Taylor Hackford's modern classic and movie-romance paradigm?

Check out Bonnie Bramlett of Delaney and Bonnie, who is quite good in the film's old-broad role, a singer and bar owner Randall goes to for a shoulder to cry on and some advice.

Costner is fine, the rest of the cast at least is amiable, and the rescue scenes genuinely gripping. But "The Guardian," with a screenplay by Ron L. Brinkerhoff ("D-Tox"), is derivative and predictable, and the longer the film goes on, the wetter and more over the top it gets.

("The Guardian" contains violence and profanity.)

Amanda Green

Lyricist Amanda Green hadn't started writing musicals when she first read the best-selling novel "High Fidelity" by Nick Hornby in 1995. But when her friend, composer Tom Kitt, read the book and liked it, too, he suggested the pair collaborate on a stage version of the story of a record store owner who knows everything there is to know about pop music and nothing at all about romance. Now, five years after they first began work on the project, Green and Kitt's musical adaptation is finally making it to the altar in Boston where the pre-Broadway run of "High Fidelity" has set up house at the Colonial Theatre.

"I've been on this project since 2001," Green recalled recently by telephone from New York. "It was the wit, humor and humanity of Nick Hornby's characters and story that gave us the idea to do this show. It was Tom's and my brainchild to write a great musical comedy using pop music that would be both funny and meaningful. Nick's story - which was also made into a 2000 feature film starring John Cusack and Jack Black - just very naturally lends itself to a musical treatment. It is a socially acute contemporary love story about people who are obsessed with, and define themselves by, pop music and culture. The hero's life is a soundtrack and the big moments are songs."

As the daughter of the late lyricist Adolph Green - half of a legendary team, with Betty Comden, who made their name with feature films like "Singin' in the Rain" and Broadway musicals like "On The Town" - Green has been around more than a few of her father's big moments and is now ready for some of her own.

"My father was a genius as is Betty Comden. It is very gratifying that so many people have such warm feelings for my father and Betty and also my mother, Phyllis Newman. I love my father's voice as a lyricist, of course, but I also have one of my own. What has made my work on 'High Fidelity' especially gratifying, however, is that it had nothing to do with my father. That said, he was also very supportive and very proud of me. He was a very sweet and loving parent."

For the younger Green, "High Fidelity" has been a collaboration not only with Kitt, but with others who joined the project in progress.

"Artistically, the first two songs Tom and I wrote are still in the show. Other than that, a great deal has changed since we started. David Lindsay-Abaire joined us to write the book. He is an amazing writer, but it took us a while to get our groove as a team. When Walter Bobbie ("Chicago") came on board as director he was able to really focus us in a good way."

Throughout the past five years, Green says she has never lost faith in the show.

"I do believe this is a great musical comedy. It is very true to the spirit of the book, which we hope will be pleasing to Nick Hornby whose work we greatly admire. After all this time, it feels a lot like my child. I just want it to succeed. I love the theater and I want to be in this business for a long time."

The pre-Broadway engagement of "High Fidelity" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through Oct. 22. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit http://www.broadwayacrossamerica.com

Heritage Days Bake Sale Proceeds Go To South Shore Hospice.

The Jack Conway Co. Scituate office recently raised $500 for Hospice of the South Shore during a bake sale at Scituate Heritage Days. The donation was made in memory of the late Conway Co. Vice President John Reardon and his wife Mary, of Scituate.

Hospice nurse Mary Beth Barry accepted the check during a recent ceremony at the Conway Scituate office telling the agents that hospice care is not only about the dying, but also about the living. "We offer solid advice on the preparation of the home for the arrival of the patient, establish medicine schedules, and provide care for the home and the patient while life continues," explained Barry.

South Shore Hospice was started in 1980, has a paid and volunteer staff of 60, and provides care for 300 to 500 people a year.

To contact Hospice of the South Shore call 781-843-0947 or visit 100 Bay State Drive in Braintree.

Cleaning up the town's books

Warrant articles could help financial picture

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset has been able to maintain a AA+ bond rating for the past 5 years. However, while the town continues to enjoy that rating, in August, Standard and Poor's — one of the two leading bond rating agencies — put Cohasset on a watch list, due to its financial situation.

To help ensure the town does not lose its bond rating the next time it is evaluated, Town Manager Bill Griffin has placed four articles on the draft Town Meeting Warrant which will help clean up the books and keep Cohasset at its current status. Griffin worked with Director of Finance Michael Buckley to draft the articles, which he presented to the Board of Selectmen Monday.

When Standard and Poor's issues a bond rating, it looks at the amount of money the town has borrowed as well as any that has been authorized and unissued, or unspent. Over the years, Town Meeting has authorized the town to borrow for various reasons, and in some cases the town has either not needed to borrow the full amount authorized or did not use the funds at all. Without a vote to rescind the approval for unspent money, or approve the actual amount borrowed, the books do not accurately show the town's debt and potential debt.

Article 11 on the draft Warrant would ask voters to take action on six different past authorizations. The first deals with an authorization approved in March 1999. Town Meeting approved borrowing $200,000 to essentially allow the town to take over maintenance of private septic systems. In an interview after the meeting, Buckley explained the initiative never went forward and the town decided against maintaining private systems, which means the money was never borrowed. Without a Town Meeting vote to rescind the first vote of approval, the town's record shows it is authorized to borrow that money, and Standard and Poor's looks at that approval as potential debt. If it doesn't come off the books, "They're going to think someday we're going to borrow it," said Buckley, which can have a negative impact on the town's rating.

Free tuition at state schools

Seniors awarded Adams Scholarship

Twenty-nine members of the Cohasset High School Class of 2007 were honored this week with a luncheon, to celebrate their qualifying for the John and Abigail Adams Scholarship.

The Scholarship, which is awarded by the Massachusetts Department of Education, provides free tuition for four years at any Massachusetts public college or university. To take advantage of the scholarship, students must enroll at the state school of their choice the fall after graduation.

Students, who attained scores in the proficient and advanced levels on the spring 2005 grade 10 MCAS mathematics and English language arts test and who are in the top 25 percent of their class based on MCAS scores, are eligible to take advantage of the scholarship.

"I am very pleased that so many of our students here in Cohasset earned this recognition. It is a testament to the hard work of our students' and our teachers' commitment and dedication to academic success," said Cohasset High School Principal Joel Antolini.

This year, nearly 16,000 students across the state were awarded with the scholarship, which is up from the 14,000 awarded last year. Cohasset has remained constant with 29 students earning the award both this year and last year.

In order for students to claim their scholarship, they must meet residency requirements, graduate from a Massachusetts public high school, apply and be accepted to a state college or university and enroll in the fall of 2007. They must also submit a Free Application for Federal Student Aid form, and inform the college of the scholarship. The scholarship covers tuition, but not room and board, books, or any other additional costs.

Adam Smith looks over the fine print of the scholarship he was awarded Tuesday afternoon in the high school library.

John and Abigail Adams Scholarship recipients include: Kevin James Barber, Mercedees Nancie Barnes-Jackson, Austin Jake Breslow, Laura Marie Campedelli, Emily Grace Coggins, Brent Thomas Daly, Donald Reed Dickinson, Molly Kate Gallagher, Caren Emily Garber, Haley Alexandra Haracz, Kyle Lee Dattola-Harris, Caitlin Hurley, Ryan Elizabeth Ingram, Ryan Henry Lawrence Kucinski, Benjamin Phillip Masotta, Robert Meiklejohn, Charles Blair Morin, Lara Alexis Novak, Mary Annette Previte, Colleen Reid Richardson, Adam Earle Smith, Virginia Ann Spofford, Lauren Christene Strazzulla, Alida Rose Tangherlini, Amanda Crystal Thompson, Timothy Brennan Toomey, Caitlyn Rose Treese, Kara Elizabeth Wilcox, and Ellen Elizabeth Wise.

Wind power

Turbines translate into savings

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the Alternative Energy Committee paid a visit to the School Committee Wednesday, to discuss the various energy-saving improvements it is looking into for the schools. Having been before all the other boards in town, the committee felt it was time to share its knowledge with the School Committee and hopefully get it on board with its initiative.

The three schools are a large consumer of electrical power in town, with the middle-high school using more electricity than any other building. To help cut back on costs and be more "green," the Energy Committee has begun looking into harnessing the power of the wind through turbines. Its thought is that one large turbine could be erected at the Recycle Transfer Facility, and a second smaller turbine could be erected at the high school, both of which could save the town a lot of money. In these difficult fiscal times, saving money where possible would be a plus.

A town's bond rating is important because it lets potential bond buyers know the risk they are taking in terms of the town being able to pay back the borrowed money

Energy Committee member Jim Shipsky has gathered information about the town's kilowatt usage, and found the three schools cost roughly $249,000 last year. If a wind turbine was erected at the Recycling Transfer Facility, it could generate power, which the town could sell back to National Grid, its energy provider, which would help cut down on costs. If a second smaller turbine was erected at the middle-high school, which

No board meetings on Election Day

Election Day will be Tuesday, Nov. 7, and in Cohasset, the polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Town Hall. Last week, Town Clerk Marion Douglas sent a memo to all boards and committees, asking them not to schedule any meetings during polling hours, "as it puts voters in a potential conflict situation between voting and attending public meetings," she stated.

Douglas said Massachusetts General Laws prohibit public hearings of the Zoning Board of Appeals on any applications for special permits or variances on Election Day. This also applies to any board that might be having a hearing related to those types of applications. The Elections Division also strongly discourages any board or committee from meeting during polling hours. "I would appreciate it if you would take this into consideration when scheduling your meetings in November," she wrote.

Real-looking gun turns out to be an air pistol

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At about 6:16 p.m. last Saturday (Sept. 30) police responded to a 9-1-1 call from a restaurant manager on Hull Street that said his parking lot attendant saw a man, described as in his mid-20s and wearing a Manny Ramirez shirt, with a firearm tucked in his rear waistband.

Police went to the restaurant where the manager pointed out the individual, Chief James Hussey said. "They moved quickly and removed the individuals to the parking lot," Hussey said. The man with the gun – that turned out to be an air pistol — was at the establishment with another individual.

"The air pistol looked very real, like a 9 millimeter handgun," Hussey explained. Air pistols shoot pellets much like a BB gun, he explained.

One of the men was taken into protective custody and the other, a 32-year-old Scituate man, was charged with being a disorderly person. Hussey said the 42-year-old had been waving the air pistol around in the parking lot and acting in a disorderly manner before police got the call.

Protective custody

A 43-year-old Weymouth man was taken into protective custody when he was found stumbling along the railroad tracks near Sohier Street. Police said he smelled of alcohol. Chief James Hussey said the officer who went to the scene determined the man could be a danger to himself because of his inebriated state, so he was taken into custody.

Police were alerted that a man could be under the influence of alcohol after dispatch received a call at about 10:30 p.m. Monday (Sept. 25) that a man was stumbling around the middle of N. Main Street near Rocky Lane. The caller said the individual smashed a large bottle in the road. The man was later observed running toward the tracks.

The officer took the cruiser up to Sohier Street where sure enough the man – who was wearing the same clothing described by the caller – came walking up the tracks.

Shoplifter arrested

Police were able to apprehend a man who allegedly shoplifted merchandize from Shaw's last Monday (Sept. 25) at about 11:55 a.m. Chief James Hussey said the store was able to provide a description of the car and plate number.

The man headed toward Scituate where he was stopped and then turned over to Cohasset police, who also reviewed the surveillance tape at the supermarket to confirm the alleged theft.

Police charged a 52-year-old Hanover man with shoplifting items valued at more than $100. Hussey said the man had the items in his car when he was stopped.

MV crashes

There were two accidents last Tuesday (Sept. 26). The first occurred at 2:50 p.m. on King Street near Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza and involved a motor vehicle and a man on a bicycle.

Chief James Hussey said a 1996 Toyota 4-runner, which was traveling southbound, was trying to make a left when it struck the bicyclist who was traveling northbound. The man on the bike was transported to South Shore Hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said. The driver of the Forerunner was cited for failure to use care in turning.

Hussey said motorists, especially in congested areas, are not always on the lookout for pedestrians, motorcycles or bicycles, because they are so busy looking out for other cars. Everyone needs to use more care, he said.

The second accident that day occurred at 9:14 p.m. A 2005 Toyota Camry ran the stop sign at Forest/N. Main and Lower King, striking a 1994 Chrysler LeBaron, police said. The Toyota was traveling on N. Main coming from the village. The Chrysler that was traveling along Lower King stopped and then proceeded through the intersection when it was struck. No injuries were reported. The driver of the Toyota was cited for failure to stop at a stop sign.

Minor arrested

Last Wednesday (Sept. 27) at just past 2 p.m., police observed a Dodge Durango speeding along Spring Street near the railroad construction site. It was estimated the car was traveling 40 m.p.h., which is over the speed limit and too fast for the conditions due to the work going on.

After making the stop, the officer observed a 30 pack of beer in the car. The beer was still in its cardboard box, which was open and one bottle was missing.

The 17-year-old youth, who is a Cohasset resident, was placed under arrest.

"When it comes to young people in cars with alcohol, we are going to make the arrest," Chief James Hussey said. He said there was no evidence the teen was driving under the influence.

Teen party

Police Chief Hussey praised a father for calling police when upwards of two dozen unwanted guests turned up at his son's party at about 8:45 p.m., last Friday (Sept. 29).

"The parent did the right thing here," Hussey said. "The party was just getting under way when the word got out there was a party at that location and uninvited teens started to arrive."

Many of the juveniles left prior to the officer's arrival, according to the police log.

Police found no evidence of alcohol at the scene and peace was restored.

"We encourage parents to be involved," Hussey said. "And we do not condone any parents providing or allowing underage drinking.

"If they do, they are doing a real disservice to the community."

Contractor uncertified

Chief James Hussey warned residents should always check references of contractors who do work on their property. They should also get several estimates.

Last Wednesday (Sept. 27) a resident reported flooring work that was apparently done by an uncertified worker. The contractor provided an estimate and the resident made a deposit and those checks were cashed. When the resident became dissatisfied with the work, she found out he was not certified. Police made inquiries with Building Regulations and Standards, but at this time, it is considered a civil matter, Hussey said.

Dog dispute

Last week a police officer talked to a neighbor about keeping dogs under control, in the yard or on a leash at all times. The woman, who owned the dogs, told police a neighbor had threatened to harm her dogs and that her invisible fence was also cut.

Chief James Hussey said the officer who responded to the call was able to diffuse the situation. He was unable to determine if the invisible fence had been cut. Hussey explained the threats made to the animals were likely made in jest.

Dogs bug cat

Police were able to locate the owner of one dog that along with another dog was tormenting a cat that had taken refuge underneath a car last Tuesday (Sept. 26) at just past 5 p.m. A caller reported dogs circling the parked car. Dispatch was able to contact one of the dog owners and the situation was resolved. Chief James Hussey said, however, dog owners must remember that under the town's leash law, their dog must be on a leash or under their control at all times.

Bylaw change to help track stolen goods

By Samantha Brown
SBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Police Department would like to keep a closer eye on second-hand jewelry sales in town. To that end, the Board of Selectmen has included an article on the first draft of the Town Meeting Warrant on behalf of Chief James Hussey. The new bylaw would keep the department constantly apprised of all transactions being made at second-hand stores.

Hussey came before the Board of Selectmen Monday in support of the article. Currently, there are 27 articles, or items of business to be discussed, on the draft Town Meeting Warrant, or agenda. Town Meeting will be held Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium at the high school and as it approaches, articles could be taken off or added to the Warrant.

While Hussey noted there has been no problem with second-hand sales to date, being preemptive is never a bad idea. He said by voting the bylaw into effect, the police department would have weekly contact with businesses that buy and sell second-hand items to ensure items they have purchased have not been stolen. The bylaw would also put a 14-day freeze on the sale of second-hand items to enable those whose property may have been stolen ample time to file a police report and for the items to be tracked down.

Hussey explained it used to be very common for thieves to bring stolen goods to pawnshops to sell them quickly and take the cash. However, pawnshops have become more restricted in recent times, which has led criminals to look to "secondary markets" when selling their loot, such as jewelry or antique shops.

"To help clamp down on things changing hands, or pieces being melted down, this bylaw will make them wait 14 days before they can take action," said Hussey of stores which sell second-hand items. He added the bylaw would require shopkeepers keep a book including all transactions of second-hand articles, including a description of the article, the name, age, and residence of the person from whom they bought the article, and the day and hour when the article was acquired. The chief of police or his designee may at any time enter upon any premises used by a licensed dealer to examine articles taken in trade. Hussey said the items in question are typically jewelry, car stereos, CDs, and other small items. "We're looking to slow down the process," he said.

Hussey said while businesses would be required to contact the police department on a weekly basis to provide an update, it might be an option for stores to send the information via e-mail. "We want to make this as easy as possible," he said.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil asked if the wording for the bylaw was drafted for Cohasset or based on another town's model. Hussey said the bylaw was adopted from the town of Norwood and adapted by Cohasset Town Counsel. The board approved the article unanimously.

Town looks to boost its budget with grants

Village, harbor, meadows would benefit

The town has applied to the Transit-Oriented Development grant program, for sidewalks along King Street and Route 3A.

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With limited means, the town is helping boost its revenue by applying for grants whenever possible.

Town Manager Bill Griffin told Selectmen this week there are currently seven grants, which have either been submitted or will be submitted in the very near future, which could bring in roughly $2,472,500 for seven different projects.

The town has applied to the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction for an additional $310,000 in funding to complete the Village Revitalization Project. The funds would allow the town to complete the Brook and Elm streets surface restoration, which would include new paved roads, new curbs and new sidewalk. While those streets were included in the original plan for the downtown streetscape, the town ran out of money and had to reduce the scope of the project.

The town has submitted two pre-applications to the Hazard Mitigation Grant Program, under the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The program provides grants to states and local governments, to allow them to implement long-term hazard mitigation measures either before or after a major disaster has been declared. The grant money for Cohasset is intended to help avoid natural disasters from taking place in the future.

The first grant application is in the amount of $365,000. The money would be used for "Jacob's Meadow Outlet Channel Replacement." The portion of James Brook near the American Legion, which flows under Border Street, has a wall, which is ready to fall down. This grant would allow that wall to be rebuilt.

The second pre-application is in the amount of $725,000 and would be used for a "Wiggle Detention project." The Wiggle is an area behind the Little League fields, located on North Main Street. James Brook runs parallel to North Main and the thought is to dig out an area of the Wiggle to serve as a kind of reservoir, so during high rain events, the water will have someplace to go before inundating the Village, which is prone to flooding.

The town has applied for two grants through the Office of Coastal Zone Management's Coastal Pollutant Remediation Grant Program. The first is for a "Jacob's Meadow Environmental Assessment" project, in the amount of $120,000. This would help ensure the Meadow is brought back to its previous salt marsh state. A good indication the marsh has been restored will be the lack of phragmites, a kind of plant that prefers to grow in a mix of salt and fresh water. The second grant would provide similar consideration to Stuart Brook, which runs from Spring Street past St. Anthony's and into Jacob's Meadow. The grant is for $27,000.

The town has applied to the Transit-Oriented Development grant program, for sidewalks along King Street and Route 3A. The MBTA did not include sidewalks to and from the Greenbush station in its design, which means the town has had to secure funding to ensure the station will be pedestrian accessible.

The Board of Selectmen authorized Griffin to apply for a Municipal Seawall Repair Grant Monday, which if approved would allow the town to make repairs to three sections of the Cohasset Harbor seawall. The grant would be for $600,000, and if accepted would expand the scope of the project for the town. If not, the project would go on as planned.

The seawall and walkway that run along the harbor from the Atlantica parking lot to the Mill River Marine Boatyard site need to be refurbished. Pedestrians heavily traverse the walkway along the top of the stone seawall, which has begun to fall apart. Temporary repairs were made to the seawall in the 1990s but more needs to be done. Past Town Meetings appropriated a total of $40,000 for studies and preliminary engineering and design; last fall's Dec. 6 special Town Meeting appropriated $600,000 for final engineering, design and repair. The additional $600,000 grant would expand the scope of the project. If the grant is not awarded, the project will proceed as currently planned.

Griffin has or will apply for the grants, thanks to help he has received from a number of people in town. He said Engineer Dan Coughlin of Coughlin Engineering Services has helped with applications, as have members of the Board of Health, Greenbush Liaisons, Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber, and Christine Player of Vine Associates, which is working on the seawall project.

Purchasing streetlights on the table

With the failure of the override last spring, town officials have been urged to look into ways to save money while improving the quality of services. Town Manager Bill Griffin told Selectmen this week, he has been exploring the idea of purchasing the public streetlights in Cohasset from National Grid. "This is something that a number of communities have implemented across the state," he said.

Griffin said when he worked in the town of Bourne the entire Cape Cod community bought the public streetlights. "For years you couldn't do it," he said, but that is no longer the case.

Griffin said he spoke with a representative from National Grid, who informed him the lump sum price to purchase the 509 public streetlights is roughly $57,000.

"A preliminary estimate by a consultant who specializes in streetlight purchase, is that the town would have payback on that investment in less than three years," Griffin said. "However, I believe it important that this concept be studied very carefully. In addition, an RFP would have to be developed for the maintenance of the streetlight system."

As a result, Griffin said he would like to include an article on the Warrant seeking the sum of $8,000 at the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting for the scope of services suggested by George Woodbury of LightSmart Energy Consulting.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer asked Griffin how much the town currently pays National Grid annually to maintain its lights. Griffin said between $80,000 and $85,000 and roughly $60,000 of that is the fee to "rent" the lights.

Griffin, Buckley look to clean up the town's books

The town will also be asked to vote to reduce two appropriations for school-related projects. At the December 1999 Special Town Meeting, the town authorized borrowing $390,000 for the purpose of developing construction drawings and bid documents for the improvements at the middle-high school and Deer Hill. The town received funding from the state and therefore only needed to borrow $156,000. The town will be asked to vote to approve the $156,000 that was borrowed, which will allow Buckley to take the $234,000 that was not used, off the books.

Voters at the March 2000 Town Meeting authorized the town to borrow $41.8 million for renovations and reconstruction of the middle-high school and Deer Hill School. The town also received state reimbursement for this project and therefore borrowed $16.72 million. Voters will be asked to take back the original Town Meeting vote and authorize the actual amount, taking roughly $25 million in potential debt off the books.

At the November 2001 Special Town Meeting the town authorized borrowing $3.9 million to design, construct, convert and equip the Paul Pratt Library. However, through a combination of grants and gifts to the library, the town only needed to borrow $650,000. "The Trustees of the library don't give themselves enough credit for the fund-raising they did," said Buckley. Through its efforts, Cohasset will be able to take roughly $3.25 million in debt off the books.

The town was also given authorization at the November 2002 Town Meeting to borrow $800,000 to construct an infrastructure and make streetscape improvements to the downtown area. However, the override associated with the project did not pass, and the vote to authorize should be rescinded to take the potential debt off the books.

Lastly, the November 2002 Town Meeting approved borrowing roughly $1 million to purchase a parcel of land at the end of Heather Drive known as the "Barnes Property." Through state funding and money from the Community Preservation Committee, the property was purchased and the appropriation was not necessary. Therefore Town Meeting must rescind its vote to approve the appropriation and take it off the books.

Stabilization funds

Griffin would also like to see the town increase its reserves, which rating agencies also look at. To do this, he has suggested the formation of two new stabilization funds, and a transfer of money into the existing stabilization fund.

The stabilization fund is an actual trust fund that has money in it and earns its own interest, rather than just a budgeted item. This means funds in the stabilization fund are available from year to year. Town Meeting authorization is required to transfer money from the stabilization fund for any lawful purpose. Usually funds spent from the reserve fund are for one-time expenses. Other than interest being earned, the only way the stabilization fund increases is if Town Meeting votes to put money into it.

The town sold the train right-of-way for $1.6 million, and that money was at one time in the stabilization fund. In addition, the town borrowed the full sum of money necessary for the school building projects, which made $500,000 in interest. Together, both sums of money left the town with $2.1 million, all of which was earmarked to help pay off the bonds for the school construction project.

However, Buckley said the reimbursement from the state for the projects was awarded earlier than anticipated and the $2.1 million was not needed to cover those costs. Instead, it has been used to "patch holes" in the budget, including covering costs associated with special education out-of-district tuitions, police overtime costs and legal bills.

Buckley explained while the $2.1 million was originally in the stabilization fund, at one point in time the Legislature was thinking of tying in a town's local aid to the amount it had in its stabilization fund. "They were going to penalize you," for having more in reserves, he said. To be safe, the town put the money in a line item in the budget, appropriated to pay for debt service. The plan never panned out with the Legislature, and now the town would like to put the money back into the stabilization fund where it belongs.

For the past few years, Buckley said towns in Massachusetts have been able to set up special stabilization funds, which hold money for specific purposes. Griffin and Buckley have proposed starting a sewer betterment stabilization fund which will hold all betterments in one account to be used specifically for making annual principal and interest payments on sewer-related debt service.

Buckley explained when the North Cohasset, Straits Pond and Central Sewer projects began, the town issued betterments for half the cost of the project, which was payable over 20 years. The town took out bonds to pay for the other half of the project. Many people paid the entire amount up front, as it is typically customary to pay off the whole betterment when selling your house. Buckley said therefore, more money came in than anticipated, and the surplus was set aside for when it would be needed in later years when a constant stream of money was not coming in due to those which had already paid. That money would now be set aside in its own account, and would need a two-thirds vote of Town Meeting to be spent.

The town will also be asked to form a new pension reserve stabilization fund. Buckley said in the late 1970s and early 1980s, former Town Accountant Bill Signorelli realized the town was not putting enough money aside for its annual payments to the Norfolk County Retirement Board. "He had the foresight to ask Town Meeting to put money aside to pay the bill when it came due," and currently, the town has $538,548 in its pension account. Griffin and Buckley would like to see a stabilization account set up for the funds.

The Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School. The Warrant is still in draft form and will be finalized over the next few weeks. Warrant articles will be discussed at the Selectmen's next meeting, scheduled for Oct. 16.

What is a bond?

A municipal bond is essentially a certificate of debt. In other words, it is a promise made by a town to pay back borrowed money. When towns need money, they cannot go to the bank and take out a loan; they instead issue bonds. That means a town issues an official statement to the bond market, which can be anyone interested in purchasing a bond, which lets people know the town wants to borrow a certain amount of money. Lenders then bid on the bond, letting the town know what they would charge the town in interest should the town choose to borrow their money. Once the town accepts the bid and sells the bond, the interest rates for payments are locked in.

A town's bond rating is important because it lets potential bond buyers know the risk they are taking in terms of the town's being able to pay back the borrowed money. Director of Finance Michael Buckley has said virtually every time the town has issued a bond, it has first contacted either Standard and Poor's or Moody's, the two leading bond rating agencies, to be rated. With Cohasset's AA+ rating, it is more likely to receive more bids and better interest rates — which can save the town money — than towns with lower ratings.

Having money in reserves would indicate to a rating agency the town will be able to pay back money borrowed, which helps its bond rating. Passing operating budget overrides also helps a town's bond rating as it indicates a willingness and ability of the community to pay borrowed money back.

Energy Committee and schools support the winds of change could generate power specifically for the building to use, the utility cost for the school budget could be greatly reduced.

Energy Committee member Mike Bliss explained the smaller second turbine, a vertical access wind turbine, also referred to as an "egg beater," could be built at the school because less land is required for one to be erected. It is much different from the larger turbine, which would only generate electricity for the purpose of selling it back to National Grid and making money.

"There's only one operating in the whole country and it's in Wisconsin, but it is an option we have," said Bliss of the smaller turbine, adding it will be another year before the committee has enough information to determine whether the smaller turbine is feasible. The town is currently in the process of monitoring the wind at the RTF to determine whether the larger turbine would work well in that area.

A second smaller turbine at the middle-high school could generate power specifically for the building to use.

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz said he would like to see wind initiatives integrated into the classroom. If turbines are erected, he would like to see students become involved in some way and learn about the importance of conserving energy and how the turbine works.

Bliss said currently, the committee has senior Blain Morin working as an intern, and they have encouraged him to pursue a couple of different projects. They would like to have him collect the data to determine how much energy the schools use on an hourly basis, as well as have him write up and design a sign which could be hung near the turbine as an informa-

Register to vote by Oct. 18

Wednesday, Oct. 18 will be the last day to register to vote and change party enrollment for the state election on Nov. 7.

Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on Wednesday, Oct. 18 from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. COLUMBUS DAY

Hello Cohasset. Happy Columbus Day weekend to all! The weather looks like it will be nice and fall-like and I hope that everyone has a super weekend enjoying it. I for one am in shock that it is already this time of the year, everything goes by so fast!! Make sure to enjoy all those small but memorable moments with family and friends as they vanish so fast. Also, make sure to send in any and all news and personal event information to me here at aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com whether it is about your children, friends, school etc. Have a super weekend!

INLY ARTS FEST

Step way back in time and explore ancient civilizations at this year's Inly Arts Festival on Sunday, Oct. 15 from 12 to 5 pm. Live performances include the thundering Samurai Taiko Drummers and Greek myth storytellers "Chariot of the Sun." Plus an ongoing Artisan Market; family workshops in dancing Isadora Duncan dance, and Taiko drumming; and interactive art activities such as cave drawing, mud cloth painting, mummy wrapping, and more. Be transformed by professional face painters and then "Walk Like an Egyptian" in the green-screen special effects station for a virtual trip through ancient lands. Inly School is located on Watch Hill Dr. (off Rte. 123) in Scituate. For info on admission and more details, visit www.inlyschool.org.

BABY GIRL

Thank Heavens for little girls... That is the song that is being sung at Mark and Michelle Loughlin's home in Cohasset. They, along with son, and new big brother William welcomed Sarah Adelaide Loughlin on Wednesday, Sept. 27. Sarah tipped the scales at 6 lbs., 12 oz. and measured 20 ins. Everyone including William is delighted with her birth and arrival. Best of wishes to your family as you settle in and enjoy life with two adorable children.

GIRL SCOUTS

Here's some news about Girl Scouts here in Cohasset. Any girls interested in joining girl scouts grades kindergarten through high school, please contact Amy Brash at 781-925-1956 or through email at amy.brash@putnam.com. The scouts are also looking for more adults to be troop leaders! It is a wonderful and rewarding experience; please contact Amy if you are interested. A town-wide Girl Scout leaders meeting for all active Girl Scout leaders is being held on Oct. 5th at the Paul Pratt Library from 7 to 8 p.m. Anyone interested in learning about being a troop leader is welcome to come. Working with the girls is a wonderful experience and the memories that are formed now as Scouts will continue in their minds forever.

PUMPKINS! PUMPKINS!

Well, the pumpkins are here and a fantastic time will be had by all when you go and purchase your pumpkins at Wheelwright Park on North Main Street from tomorrow, Oct. 7th through Halloween from 10 a.m.–7 p.m. The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project is running this sale and all proceeds will go towards the annual ASP trip. The bride is a 1999 graduate of Cohasset High School. She received a bachelor's degree from the University of Maine in international affairs and foreign language. She is employed at the South Shore Music Circus.

The groom is a 1999 graduate of Scituate High School and a Marine Corps veteran. He has recently been hired by the Norwell Police Department.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Green Harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Johnson

Montgomery-Figueiredo

James and Judith Figueiredo of Cohasset announce the marriage of their daughter, Jenny Marie, to Tyler John Montgomery, son of Timothy and Donna Montgomery, of Cohasset, on Aug. 5, 2006, at Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. The Rev. Gary Ritts officiated at the ceremony. A reception followed at The River Club in Scituate.

The bride's attendants included Amanda Herzog, sister of the groom; Katy Whitehouse, friend of the bride; Samantha Lenahan, cousin of the bride; and Maria Butler, friend of the bride.

Groomsmen were James Figueiredo and John Figueiredo, brothers of the bride; Keith Herzog, brother-in-law of the groom; Dylan Kreis, James Beresford and David Cox, friends of the groom.

The bride attended Cohasset High School and Bay State College. She currently works for the Cohasset Public School's Occupational Therapy Department.

The groom attended the Putney School in Putney, Vt., and Boston University. He is currently employed at Jerome Press Publishing.

After a honeymoon on Nantucket, the couple reside in Quincy.

No need to wonder what that heirloom is worth

'Roadshow' appraisers come to Cohasset

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Search the attic and the basement because that forgotten relic previously owned by Grandma could be worth some cash.

On Saturday, Nov. 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset residents will have the opportunity to find out the value of that heirloom, when the Council on Elder Affairs hosts "Antique Appraisal Day" at St. Anthony's Parish Center.

James Callahan and Stuart Whitehurst, two well-known appraisers from Skinner Auctioneers and Appraisers who are often seen on the PBS hit show "Antiques Roadshow," will be on hand to evaluate items brought in and give their opinion as to what they might sell for. The cost is $10 to have one item appraised, $20 for two and $25 for three. Proceeds will help benefit the CEA, and there will be refreshments served.

The event is being held as a fund-raiser, sponsored by the newly established Friends of the CEA. The Friends is a non-profit organization, charged with raising funds for the CEA. CEA Director Linda Elworthy explained in these difficult fiscal times, "any time we can raise money to help supplement the funds we receive from the town, it's wonderful." She added the funds raised by the CEA accomplish many things, including assisting seniors who do not have money for medication and paying for food.

Hosting a fun fundraiser that the entire Cohasset community can become involved with has been in the works for more than one year. Elworthy said behind the scenes, Volunteer Coordinator Martha Horsefield has been working diligently to ensure the dream of hosting the event would come to fruition.

"It has been a labor of love," said Horsefield, adding last year, she began asking local dealers if they would be interested in doing some appraisals, and at first was turned down due to their busy schedules.

"It will be a fun day. I envision it will be very similar to what we see on the Antiques Roadshow."
— Martha Horsefield, CEA volunteer coordinator

However, her next thought was to call Skinner, which operates out of Bolton, Mass., which was delighted to come.

"It will be a fun day. I envision it will be very similar to what we see on the Antiques Roadshow," Horsefield said.

While Skinner has experts in every area of appraisal, Callahan and Whitehurst, who will visit Cohasset, are "generalists," which Horsefield explained means they have experience in many different areas of appraisal. For that reason, residents should not bring certain items to be appraised such as coins, stamps, jewelry and musical instruments, as they require an appraiser which specializes in that specific item. However, all other items are fair game, even large pieces.

Interim President of the Friends of the CEA John Campbell said if any residents have large items, which are too large to transport, a photograph of the item would also work. In fact, he has offered to take pictures of any items which residents would like to get appraised, but who may not have a camera to take the picture. He said the more items brought in, the more money raised for the CEA. "We appreciate your support, and it'll be fun to boot!" he said. Items many people have around the house that might be worth something and are small enough to transport are antique dolls, paintings, clocks, silverware, china, lamps, baskets and pottery.

During the appraisal, Elworthy said there will be treats for those who attend, including donuts donated by French Memories, cider, and "walking potatoes" donated by the Angel Food Pantry. For those who are not familiar with walking potatoes, Elworthy described them as a baked potato with close to 40 possible toppings.

But at the heart of the day will be raising funds for the CEA. "Everyone knows the budget is tight. Just like everyone else, we have to get by with tight funding," said Campbell. However, he noted the fee for appraisals is tax-deductible. He said if residents would prefer to give a donation of time, the Friends are looking for more members, who are willing to help coordinate events for the CEA or occasionally lend a helping hand.

The Antique Appraisal Day will be held Saturday, Nov. 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at St. Anthony's Parish Center on South Main Street. The charge is $10 for one item, $20 for two, and $25 for three. Items from all collecting areas will accepted except coins, stamps, jewelry and musical instruments. For services of china or silver, please bring one example of each piece in a set and a list of the total pieces in the set. For items that are too fragile or too large to be transported, a good quality photo will suffice.

For more information or to register, or to become a member of the Friends of the CEA, please contact the CEA at (781) 383-9112. To have John Campbell come by and take a photograph of your item, please contact him directly at (781) 383-0021 or on his cell phone at (617) 909-5687.

Callable at 100

The CD may be called at the bank's option on the first year anniversary date or semi-annually thereafter until maturity.
* The Annual Percentage Yield (APY) represents the interest earned through each eligible call date based on simple interest calculations, an investment price of 100 and is accurate as of Sept. 20, 2006. The minimum balance required to open a CD and obtain the A.P.Y. is $1,000. Funds may not be withdrawn until the maturity date or redemption date. However, the CD is redeemable at par upon death of holder.
In the event interest rates decline during the life of the CD, the CD will likely be called and investors may lose the opportunity to lock in higher rates.
If interest rates rise, this would negatively affect the principal value, and if these CDs are sold in the secondary market prior to maturity or call date, they may be worth less than their original cost. Pvt. Gonsalves killed in Muse-Argonne Offensive

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Eighty-eight years ago this week, a Cohasset soldier stood on the battlefield, in combat during World War I. In the thick of the Muse-Argonne Offensive, Allied forces were fighting against 20 German line and reserve divisions, when Pvt. Joseph Gonsalves was killed in action.

Gonsalves was the youngest son of his parents, Anthony and Clara. The family lived at 63 Church Street. After turning 18 he joined the army and became a member of the 26th Infantry Division, also known as the "Yankee Division."

The Yankee Division was activated in July of 1917 and consisted of soldiers from Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. The Division traveled overseas in October 1917. Its major operations were the second battle of the Marne, the third battle of the Aisne, the battle of the Saint Mihiel, and the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

There were a total of 12,077 members of the 26th Infantry wounded in action during its World War I tour, and 1,587 were killed. Gonsalves was one of those men, who paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom at just 20 years old. He was killed Oct. 6, 1918, eight days before Cohasset resident Herman Daley, who was struck in the neck with a piece of shrapnel and died in Fauburg Pave, France at just 23 years of age.

In total, five Cohasset men were killed during World War I.

Pvt. Joseph Gonsalves

The summer of 1918 saw the deaths of Sgt. George H. Mealy on July 17, 1918, and Cpl. Lawrence B. Williams, just two days later. Pvt. John W. Sidney, was killed Aug. 17, 1918, exactly one month after Mealy. October saw the deaths of Gonsalves and Daley.

The people of Cohasset will never forget Gonsalves' sacrifice, as a memorial square was named in his honor at the intersection of Beechwood Street and Doane Street at Beechwood Corner, close to his boyhood home.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on Joseph Gonsalves or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Squares named after fallen servicemen

Pvt. Joseph A. Gonsalves is one of many veterans who have been honored for their military service by the town of Cohasset. The town lost four other men during World War I, who have all been memorialized with squares in town including:

- Pvt. Herman E. Daley: corner of Jerusalem Road and North Main Street.
- Pvt. John W. Sidney: the park at the intersection of Elm Street and Margin Street at the Cove.
- Sgt. George H. Mealy: intersection of South Main Street and Elm Street.
- Cpl. Lawrence B. Williams: South Main Street and Summer Street.
- The mothers of the five servicemen that gave their lives during World War I are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery.

Roughly 250 men and women from Cohasset served during "The Great War" from 1914 until the war was declared over on November 11, 1918. Cohasset has memorialized all of its service men and women who fought during World War I by listing all of their names at Veterans Park at Cohasset Harbor.

Items sought for those in Armed Forces

The following items are being collected at the American Legion Post on Summer Street for deployed servicemen and women:

Batteries – AA and AAA, razors, mouthwash, Chapstick, nuts, shaving cream Ziploc bags of all sizes, hand warmers, baby wipes, pens and notepaper, Pringles, toothbrushes, toothpaste and floss.

Also, sports magazines, local newspapers, socks, T-shirts, candy (no chocolate), phone cards, peanut butter and crackers, dry tuna in a bag, deodorant, winter hats and gloves, gum, mints, Lifesavers, Q-Tips, sunscreen, soap and body wash, dry soup, beef jerky, Tylenol, Advil, Excedrin and cameras.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Soldier talk" is not what many may think it is.

Most combat veterans do not discuss their war experiences, preferring to keep that part of their lives private.

But what servicemen and women — as well as those who support the troops — do like to talk about is what they can do for the community.

The latest effort, launched by Tom Wigmore, who is commander of the local chapter of the Sons of the American Legion, is to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2007 observances.

The effort, which Selectmen have unanimously endorsed, would result in upwards of 200 American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

If there is enough participation, plans would also include installing flags in the island at Elm and Summer streets, across from the Cohasset Harbor Inn.

Tom explains enough lead-time is critical in order for the effort to be successful. He would like to have the flags ordered by the end of December. "This is something the whole community can be involved in," says Tom, who is a former national chairman of the Sons, a group made up of men whose fathers, stepfathers, or grandfathers are veterans.

The flags would sell for $20 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces.

Each flag would be topped with a gold ball and the Legion Women's Auxiliary headed by Tom's wife, Deirdre Wigmore, will make the bows. Those who purchase flags may take them home after the field is taken down the Wednesday after Memorial Day, Tom explains.

The Healing Field is one in a long line of community efforts supported by the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 on Summer Street, the Sons, and the Women's Auxiliary. Tom's father, Steve Wigmore, is the long-time commander of the Post.

"This is something the whole community can be involved in."
— Tom Wigmore, Sons of the American Legion

The Legion works hand-in-hand annually with the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146, headed by Ralph Perroncello, to organize the most visible effort: Cohasset's annual Memorial Day Parade and observances.

Behind the scenes, the Legion and Sons have donated $10,000 to the war memorial project at Veterans Memorial Park. The Legion also supports Legion baseball, and the Sons support Boys and Girls State – a program sending talented students away for a week to learn about government. The organizations, including the Women's Auxiliary, also help homeless veterans and other groups.

The Legion's annual clambake helps raise $20,000 annually for the Christine Burke Memorial Scholarship Fund which awards scholarships to graduating seniors who are children or grandchildren of veterans.

The list goes on. The junior Women's Auxiliary raised money for Spinoza Bears that include healing tapes for children cancer, Dierdre says.

"We could sit here all day long and list the things we do," says Tom.

Healing Field flags are $20. Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Volunteer Medical Reserve Corps

The Cohasset Board of Health is working with other local towns to mobilize volunteers for a Medical Reserve Corps that would assist in the event of a health emergency.

Disasters such as Hurricane Katrina, tsunamis and the Sept.11 terrorist attacks have made communities all the more aware of the need for an organized group of qualified volunteers who are prepared to help. Future needs may include flu pandemic or bioterrorism. With this in mind, the Cohasset Board of Health would like to identify, credential and train as many volunteers as possible. Nurses, physicians, pharmacists and those with experience in public health, mental health and allied health professionals are urged to volunteer.

An information session for nurses will be held in Cohasset on Tuesday, Oct. 17 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Volunteers may choose to attend a session in their town or another town. For directions and to RSVP, please contact Alison Minkoff at (617) 665-3871 or:

aminkoff@challiance.org.

Recognizing that many professionals have limited time to volunteer, the Cohasset Board of Health encourages Medical Reserve Corps members to choose their level of participation. Volunteers may elect to serve their community both during emergencies and for more routine public health needs such as immunization clinics, screenings and health education, or strictly during emergencies. Because Cohasset is working in cooperation with 27 area communities to share resources, volunteers may also choose to serve only in their town or as part of the regional Medical Reserve Corps.

The other towns are all part of Massachusetts Public Health Region 4b*, which encompasses 27 cities and towns and 981,000 residents. The Region 4b Medical Reserve Corps will be a cadre of trained volunteers from communities in the region who will work with medical, public health and other local emergency responders to guarantee a timely and harmonized volunteer response for local and regional public health emergencies.

Medical Reserve Corps, a component of USA Freedom Corps, was created in 2002 to promote and organize volunteerism and service in the United States. While the Office of the U.S. Surgeon General oversees the national network of MRC volunteers, there are more then 200 MRC units throughout the nation. Each unit is organized locally to ensure that individual community needs are addressed.

More specific examples of practicing and retired professionals who are encouraged to volunteer include: physicians, nurses, dentists, veterinarians, pharmacists, respiratory therapists, epidemiologists, health educators, psychologists, social workers, chaplains, language interpreters, lawyers, funeral directors and administrators. Medical, public health, and other allied health professionals are also encouraged to apply. United States citizenship is not required to be a Medical Reserve Corps volunteer.

For more information, contact Judith Fitzsimmons, RN, Cohasset Board of Health Public Health Nurse, at (781) 383-2210 or Alison Minkoff, MRC Coordinator for Region 4B, at (617) 665-3871.

Communities in Region 4b are: Arlington, Belmont, Braintree, Brookline, Cambridge, Canton, Chelsea, Cohasset, Everett, Dedham, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Needham, Newton, Norwell, Norwood, Quincy, Revere, Scituate, Somerville, Watertown, Wellesley, Westwood, Weymouth and Winthrop.*

School enrollment takes a dip

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Enrollment figures have been compiled for the Cohasset public schools. While the numbers are never really solid, as students may move in or out of the district at any time, as far as the Department of Education is concerned, as of Oct. 1Cohasset's numbers became firm.

At the School Committee's Wednesday meeting, Walsh presented the enrollment figures as of Oct. 1. She explained these figures will help dictate what the school's foundation budget will be, or the minimum budget the DOE feels will adequately meet the needs of the district's students, as well as Chapter 70 money, or state aid.

This year, enrollment is down by 19 students. "A number of students have moved in and out, and also some have elected to go to private schools," said Walsh.

As of this Oct. 1, there were 1474 students enrolled in the district, which is 19 less than were enrolled as of Oct. 1 last year. The most dramatic change in the amount of students in a single grade was a loss of 30 students from last year's eighth-grade class who were incoming freshmen this year. School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said that makes perfect sense, as students typically transfer out to private schools for their first year of high school.

"A number of students have moved in and out, and also some have elected to go to private schools."

— Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh

Walsh said Cohasset High School Principal Joel Antolini held exit interviews with many students who had decided not to return to the school this fall. "He reported many students chose to leave because of the uncertainty of the budget," as some parents and students do not feel it can be assured that the programs they want will still be offered in the coming years.

Antolini, who attended the meeting, expanded on Walsh's comments and said he had spoken to many students who were leaving the eighth grade and would not return to the middle-high school as freshmen. He said while some had chosen to leave because their older siblings had also gone off to attend a different school, some cited the lack of diversity at the school as a reason and others said class size was their main issue. However, the largest reason by far is the uncertainty with funding. "They want to know what they're getting into will be there four years down the road," he said.

When asked if the number of students exiting now is typical for Cohasset, Walsh said she would track down that historical data. She also added private school competition is not solely for high school students, as many private schools are adding grades and expanding their offerings. Schools which were previously kindergarten through grade five are adding grade six, and some schools which were grades nine through 12 have added grade eight and sometimes even grade seven.

Slanetz noted in a recent Wall Street Journal article, he read some public schools are getting to educational levels where students who left to attend private schools are coming back to their hometowns for a free, yet comparable education. Walsh said with elite public schools, the programs are so good they experience the same college acceptance rates as their private counterparts. Slanetz said that is what Cohasset should be aiming for.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Change can be good

No, you are not seeing things. Nor do you need to adjust your glasses.

Yes, we are still the Cohasset Mariner – the same paper that has faithfully served your community since 1978 when Jimmy Carter was President of the United States.

Samantha Brown is still the staff reporter, Mark Goodman is sports editor, and Mary Ford is the editor. Our staff photographers like Robin Chan and Elsa Allen are hard as work, as are our regular freelance photographers Laura Sinclair and Craig Goedecke, who both live next door in Hingham.

Jim Hamilton's cartoon is still on the editorial page; Jen Piepenbrink is still writing Around Town; and our other monthly and weekly columnists, and regular freelancers are still all on board.

However, you will notice this week that our front page looks different. Our flag (nameplate) is still there and so is our icon depicting Minot Ledge Light and its 1-4-3 lighting sequence.

But we have made some changes. The most noticeable is the "rail" down the left-hand side of the front page. "Rail" is newspaper lingo for that design element which is a common feature on many broadsheet newspapers today.

The purpose of the rail is to help you, our readers, "navigate" your hometown paper more easily by drawing your attention to some elements that we are featuring on the inside pages. "Navigate" is a newspaper term for finding what you are looking for more easily.

While the addition of the rail may mean that on some weeks there could be one less story on the front page, we think it is an exciting design element that should pull our readers into the paper.

We have been running an index each week on Page 3. That has disappeared because the Quick Index now appears on Page 1.

Our regional calendar is now called "Town Commons" but continues to contain arts and entertainment news from across the South Shore.

Often readers, who supply us with "happenings" and other news items, request their item be placed in the first (or front section) of the Cohasset Mariner. The second section is often described as the "sports section." In reality sports (and we are very proud of our sports coverage) only starts the second section. If you keep going you will find obituaries, worship news, happenings, school notebook, photo spreads, police/fire log, regional calendar, and much more.

If is frankly impossible to fit all the news into the "front section." But what we strive for here at the Mariner is some placement consistency. That means you can usually rely that whatever news (school notebook items for example) you are looking for will be in the same general location of the paper each week.

For example, Around Town is always on page 6 or 8, and is always on a left-hand page. Making Tracks and Henshaw always appear in the same location on the op-ed page.

We hope the new "rail" element on the front page might encourage readers, who are not already doing so, to look through their entire Cohasset Mariner.

In reading research about newspaper "rails," we learned about a woman who discovered a newspaper feature she had not read before and a man who started reading more than the op-ed page. Both liked the "rail" for directing them to what was inside.

We respect the sense of ownership our readers feel over their paper and welcome feedback.

We hope you will embrace our new look and give it a chance. We think — if you don't like it right away — you will in a week or two.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Support of fellow police officers appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

Several weeks ago, on Saturday Sept. 9th, Quincy Police Officer James "Jamie" Cochrane was involved in a terrible motorcycle accident. He was taken to Boston Medical Center where family, friends, and co-workers maintained a vigil outside his hospital room.

During this very difficult time Jamie's family requested the presence of the Rev. John Maheras, pastor of The Nativity Greek Orthodox Church in Cohasset. Due to the fact that the Rev. Maheras was conducting services, we were unsuccessful in our attempts to contact him. A call was placed to the Cohasset Police requesting their assistance in contacting the Reverend, as there was an immediate need for his services.

In response to this request, Sergeant Conte of the Cohasset Police Department took the necessary steps not only contacting him but transporting him as well. As a result of Sergeant Conte's persevering efforts, Rev. Maheras arrived at the hospital and was able to comfort Jamie's immediate and extended family, co-workers, and friends who were maintaining vigil outside of Jamie's room. Despite the best efforts of the doctors and nurses at Boston Medical Center, as well as the prayers of Rev. Maheras and those gathered with him, Jamie passed away at 1:30 pm that Sunday afternoon.

On behalf of the Quincy Police Department, we would like to take this opportunity to thank the members and command staff of the Cohasset Police Department, especially Chief James Hussey, for assisting us during this very difficult time. In addition, a special thanks to Sergeant William Quigley and Officer Ed Bagley of the Special Operations Unit for providing countless support services.

In closing, your presence at our brother officer's funeral meant a great deal to Officer Cochrane's family and the Quincy Police Department. Your expression of sympathy over Jamie's death was truly appreciated.

Lt. Charles E. Santoro, QPD
Special Officer Greg Hartnett, CPD

SPED legislation needed

TO THE EDITOR:

For years I have asked our local State Representative to introduce legislation to cure the unfair Special Education Costs (SPED) that our cities and towns face annually. These are state mandated programs that place a huge cost burden on a city or town.

The answer is not complex, although the state uses a complex formula that is totally unfair. Cohasset is paying somewhere around $9,000 per student per year to educate our children. (No one seems to be able to get real numbers out of the School Committee or the administration.) In last week's Mariner, page 5, a chart reflects our SPED for 24 students amounting to approximately $51,900 per student.

Why hasn't our Representative challenged this process and brought relief? Why isn't our School Committee lobbying to relieve the Town of this burden? Why isn't our Superintendent addressing this and lobbying and mandating a resolution from the State? WHY! WHY!

Our School Committee would rather have student fees raised for all sorts of services that used to be provided for instead of addressing what is unfair. Our School Committee also has approved of budgets for Administration that again are unfair because they include unnecessary positions. They have not admonished the Superintendent for creating jobs that are not necessary.

When will we get representation on the State side and the School Committee side that really considers what is happening to our education process and its impact on the taxpayers of this Town?

HEALTH NOTES

Dizziness is all in your head

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Feeling dizzy? Benign Paroximal Positional Vertigo BPPV is a common cause of dizziness. According to Dr. T.C.Hain of Northwestern University, about 20 percent of all dizziness is due to BPPV. The older you are, the more likely it is that your dizziness is BPPV, as about 50 percent of all dizziness in older people is due to BPPV. In a recent study, 9 percent of a group of urban dwelling elders were found to have undiagnosed BPPV.

The symptoms of BPPV include dizziness or vertigo, lightheadedness, imbalance, and nausea. Activities, which bring on symptoms will vary, but symptoms are almost always precipitated by a change of position of the head with respect to gravity. Getting out of bed or rolling over in bed are common "problem" motions. Because people with BPPV often feel dizzy and unsteady when they tip their heads back to look up, sometimes BPPV is called "top shelf vertigo." Women with BPPV may find that the use of shampoo bowls in beauty parlors brings on symptoms. An intermittent pattern is common. BPPV may be present for a few weeks, then stop, then come back again.

A physician can make the diagnosis based on your history, findings on physical examination, and the results of vestibular and auditory tests. Often, the diagnosis can be made with history and physical examination. Most other dizziness gets worse on standing rather than lying down.

Things you might want to try — To cope with your dizziness, use two or more pillows at night. In the morning, get up slowly and sit on the edge of the bed for a minute. Avoid bending down to pick up things, and extending the head, such as to get something out of a cabinet. Be careful when at the dentist's office, the beauty parlor when lying back

Rocky Lane Bridge opens to traffic

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Rocky Lane Bridge – By now most of you have probably seen that the Rocky Lane Bridge is open for traffic and the "old" entrance to Rocky Lane is closed. Late last week CBB was very anxious to open the bridge so they could prepare to place rails across the old street. Before this could happen, we convened a meeting on the bridge with the Chief of Police and his Safety Officer to review the site for safety. They requested that CBB shouldn't open the bridge until they added better protection for pedestrians along the severe drop off on the west side of the bridge. To show how anxious they were to get the bridge opened, they had a fence contractor there in 30 minutes to install a temporary protective fence. We really appreciate their responsiveness, but wish we could have this level of responsiveness on other issues.

The Rocky Lane residents, in general, are pretty upset that the MBTA is not providing a proper sidewalk along the bridge. (We agree strongly with their assessment.) The MBTA's position is that there was not a sidewalk there before so they are not obliged to provide one. We view the lack of a sidewalk as a safety issue, particularly for the kids. Before, Rocky Lane had a Cape Cod berm and relatively flat land to either side. Kids and others could easily move off of the roadway onto the grass when needed, even with bikes. Now, with a granite curb separating the road from the adjacent walking area, it becomes much more difficult. And, it is more natural for children to ride their bikes in the street rather than in the uneven grass along side of the road. This, we really view as a safety issue and are presenting it to the MBTA as such. We continue to voice our concerns on this subject with the project and Town officials. More to come on this subject.

Some Rocky Lane residents have told us that project personnel have told them that they offered to build a sidewalk for the Town, but we turned it down. Well, that's about half of the real story. In fact, the MBTA did offer to build a sidewalk at a cost to the Town of $40,000, which would be subtracted from our James Brook mitigation fund. First, $40,000 is an extremely high cost for something we could build for significantly less. Second, every dollar we subtract from the James Brook mitigation fund cuts out other items already earmarked to be paid from that fund. We think that our faithful readers would agree that "robbing Peter to pay Paul" is not in the Town's best interest in this instance.

This is the new Rocky Lane Bridge looking toward N. Main Street.

The Rocky Lane residents, in general, are pretty upset that the MBTA is not providing a proper sidewalk along the bridge.

Rail Pulling – Over the next several weeks, intermittent shut downs will be required at all crossings in Town as rail is moved from Scituate to the north. Our largest concern is to assure the Town's safety forces that they will always know, in real times, which crossings are open and which are closed so that they can respond to emergencies with an absolute minimum delay. We know these periodic closures will be frustrating, but there is no other way to move the rail to where it is needed. We expect that this rail pulling will cease once the entire rail is laid. But, there will still be equipment traveling the rails to and from various work sites along the track. Please keep your eyes open and drive cautiously.

Other Crossings — Some of the crossings are in the process of receiving some of the ancillary equipment necessary for an operating railroad. These equipments include, signal bungalows, and crossing gates, both street and pedestrian. The signal bungalows contain the electrical equipment to operate the gates and sense the train as it passes through an area. The gates, of course, are designed to come down before the train arrives and will rise after the train has passed through. The pedestrian gates perform the same function, but on the sidewalk. There will be a pedestrian gate at any crossing with a sidewalk, or where a sidewalk is about to be constructed. For example, since a sidewalk will be constructed on Beechwood Street shortly, a pedestrian gate will be installed there.

One thing that you may not know is that the controls for the gates are very sophisticated. The MBTA has installed fiber optic cables all along the right of way to provide high-speed communications between all crossing equipment and the central dispatch in Boston. Also, since our train system is designed to be a "hornless system" special controls must be used. For example, in a regular train system, the gates come down when the train is a fixed distance away from the crossing. Thus, depending on whether a train is traveling fast or slow, the gates may come down earlier or later with regard to the time the train actually arrives at the crossing. In a hornless system, the gates must come down a fixed time before the train arrives. Thus, the controls must be able to measure the actual speed of the train and calculate when to lower the gates. As you can see, this is a much more sophisticated control scheme.

Red Sox naming rights

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Our Olde Towne Team, in its never-ending search for ways to make more money, are thinking of selling the naming rights to their 2007 baseball season to the highest bidder.

"It is a growth area," said Charles Steinberg, a spokesman for the Red Sox. "It's a good way to augment your revenue without affecting ticket prices or threatening the ambience of Fenway Park."

This move has limitless possibilities.

"Good afternoon, baseball fans and welcome to the opening game of the Mohegan Sun baseball season. It looks like a grand day for baseball, doesn't it, Jerry?'

"It sure does, Joe, but you neglected to mention that the starting pitcher for the Red Sox will be Curt Schilling, sponsored by Ernie Boch's Dodge on the Automile "C'mon down!"

"Thanks, Jerry. The first batter for the Red Sox is Kevin Youklis, the J.C. Penney first baseman. He hits the first pitch, a fastball sponsored by Brooks Pharmacy, into Kmart left field. It's off the Comcast wall for a double. That's strange. No sponsor. Have all the doubles been sold for this year, Jerry?

"Just a minute. Let me check my scorecard. No, there's still couple available. All the homers are gone, though."

"Thanks. The next batter is Mark Loretta, sponsored by Building #19 "Suffer a little; save a lot." He takes a Stop & Shop ball, One and oh the count. He hits a Chase Mastercard pop fly. The Kansas City second baseman takes it for the out. No sponsor? Tell me, Jerry, these Royals players don't sell very well, do they."

"Once they sold home plate to the stockyards there weren't many buyers left, Joe."

"That brings up David Ortiz, sponsored by the Bank of America. I understand there was some spirited bidding for Papi, Jerry. Bank of America barely beat out John Hancock."

"That's right, Joe. But John Hancock gets his home runs and Filene's Basement, "Where Bargains Were Born," gets to sponsor his singles."

"That's really a bargain, isn't it, Jerry?"

"A bigger bargain than Harvard Pilgrim Health Care's Manny Ramirez, that's for sure."

"Ortiz swings at the first pitch and misses, a Dunkin' Donuts strike one. The pitcher winds up and . . . Ortiz steps out of the batters box and calls time. He is changing his bat. What's that all about, Jerry."

"Apparently, David was using his Staples bat when he is under contract to use his Office Max bat for second pitches. He caught himself just in time or he might have faced a stiff fine."

"Ortiz goes after the next pitch and hits it off the TD BankNorth wall in right, scoring Youklis with the America On Line first run of the game."

"Joe, you forgot to say he crossed the Home Depot plate. Better watch that."

"Right. That brings up Trot Nixon, sponsored by Citizens Bank . . . "

"Wait a minute, he's sponsored by Sovereign Bank."

"But my scorecard says Citizens Bank."

"Didn't anyone tell you? They were delinquent in their weekly payment. Their sponsorship was transferred to Sovereign Bank." You don't think the Red Sox are going to let a freebie like that go by, do you?

Staving off the inevitable phase-out

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

It's no wonder men have a difficult time understanding and defining our place in society nowadays: never before have we been so close to being evicted from the gene pool. The perpetuation of the species will depend on women for another century or more — even a clone needs a womb — but men are literally a decade of stem cell research away from biological obsolescence. This is why men are so leery of stem cell research, if only on a subconscious level. "Sure it might open the floodgates to new cures and treatments for disease," men think, "but there's something about a 'master cell' that can be turned into any other kind of cell that's raising a little red flag way down in my cerebral.... Hey, is that leftover fried chicken?"

To stave off the inevitable phase-out we men need to remind women how vital we are to their happiness. And if not so much to their happiness, to their health. And if not exactly to their health, then to other very important things. There are many, many tasks we perform that women are unwilling or unable to do. Fewer every year, certainly, but there's still a handful left. So on the behalf of my fellow men I offer the following list as a final plea to our future female overlords:

We are willing to dispose of all decapitated rabbits the cat leaves on the roof.

So on the behalf of my fellow men I offer the following list as a final plea to our future female overlords...

Our cat Muffin likes to carry mice, moles and still-flapping birds up onto the flat roof outside my children's bedroom window and leave them there for all to admire. God only knows how he managed to get a rabbit onto a second-story roof, but last week he did, and when I looked out the window it was like a scene from The Godfather For Kids out there.

However, once I got over the initial horror I saw an opportunity. I knew there was no way my wife was going to deal with that. So I made sure to call her attention to the problem, then heroically tackled it by holding my breath, pinching up my face and carefully tossing both bunny parts off into oblivion. When I remembered that below this roof was the storage area where the kids stow their bikes, I scampered downstairs and searched through the day lilies. The larger part was easy to spot, but the smaller, much more critically important part to find, was missing and presumed terrifying. With visions of my six-year-old, who finds everything, reacting to such a discovery I tore up the plants and threw them onto the lawn, only to notice several frantic minutes later that Little Peter had been in the grass all along.

The WNBA will never catch on.

I could be wrong about that, but even if it does, the WNFL and WNHL will never catch on. Although more and more girls seem to be playing hockey and Pop Warner these days.... Let me start over. Without men, the entire sport of bikini mud wrestling would cease to exist. Is that what you want? Hang on, I'm starting again...

We don't mind mining so much.

Zinc mining is a huge pain in the rear; you don't wanna go there. And believe me you need the zinc. I mean, you look great. Don't get me wrong. But a breakfast isn't complete without zinc.

We can fix most cars built before 1990.

The carbureted engine, the manual transmission, distributors, rotors — we can almost understand these technologies. If your early-model car breaks down, please give us a shot at it. Our motto is, "We just might save you some money!"

You like men, remember?

Think back before you were married. Before you were engaged. Before you knew a whole heck of a lot about us. You liked us. I swear you did. I know we've abused our power in the past, but we're cuddling better all the time. Wait! We're funny! And who else can sing bass?! We can take you down with us! No stem cell research! Stop!

Raising a toast to Governor King

COMMENTARY

MARTHA A.R. BEWICK

The Commonwealth recently said farewell to Governor Edward J. King at formal wreath-laying ceremonies at the State House in Boston. In conversations with members of his family, I told them I would write about the Governor and the action he took some 30 years ago that changed our lives on the South Shore.

In the early 1970s, staff and members at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce were working with several South Shore towns, including Hingham, Scituate and Cohasset, to pull together a study about the viability of ferries from Hingham to Boston. Boston professionals and commuters, including Don White of Hingham, Ed McHugh of Scituate, and Jack Gilbert of Scituate, were among those contributing financial analyses, naval architecture analyses, and legal briefs to advance the cause.

In July of 1975, the Chamber presented the study and the analyses to the Joint Regional Transportation Committee in Boston, including Transportation Secretary Alan Altshuler, and urged the Sargent Administration to commit to a new transit project — ferries from the South Shore to Boston. There was a lack of interest, since there were other transportation priorities at the time.

Having reviewed the analyses, a Boston-based ferry operator, Dick Nakashian of Bay State Cruises, said that it looked like there might be a good market for a ferry, and pledged his vessels for the operation if there could be partners found to provide dock space, parking, and marketing in Hingham.

At that time, Ed King was Executive Director of the Massachusetts Port Authority. His bailiwick included the seaport and airport of Boston, and he was immersed in expansion. And so we invited him down to take a look at the Hingham Shipyard, and to consider Massport's participating in the ferry project in some way. Could Massport run the ferry? Contribute to building a terminal and parking? Would he even be interested?

When King toured the Hingham Shipyard property, and saw its relationship to Boston Harbor, and the proximity of the location to downtown Boston by water, he exclaimed that it was an outstanding piece of property, and sounded like a good project. He instructed his staff to work with Eric Swider and the South Shore Chamber staff, with Colonial Coastal Corporation, and with Bay State Cruises to make it happen. With the management skills of Paul May of Massport, and legal staff, a collaborative agreement was shaped. Ed King said "let's do it," and so they did. Later, as Governor, he would adopt the slogan "Make It in Massachusetts," with a thumbs-up logo. It was as positive as he was.

And so Massport rebuilt one of the deteriorated World War II piers in short order, so that Dick Nakashian's Hingham ferry could begin service on the Easterly side in October 1975. (The "Arctic Fox" was sunk on the Westerly side, and that is another story.)

Over the years, millions of commuters, tourists, visitors, school children, seniors, and South Shore folks have enjoyed and come to depend on the ferries to Boston. As the 30th anniversary of the startup of the Hingham Commuter Boat approached last Fall, I reminded the Governor King of his critical role in getting the ferry system started. We were talking about a party, and he was looking forward to the celebration. But it didn't happen. The last time I spoke with him, he reminded me about the celebration year.

So, I'd like to suggest that all those who have taken the ferries from the South Shore to Boston over these 30 years raise a glass on high — a toast to a wonderful man who changed our lives when he stepped up to make a difference, and became the father of the Hingham Commuter Boats.

On the back page of the program at Governor King's funeral Mass, it says: "He Made It in Massachusetts." He certainly made it happen for millions of commuters and South Shore residents over the years. So, thanks Governor King. Here's to you!

Martha Bewick was staff manager for the Hingham commuter boat project while working at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce 30 years ago.

3A Farm plans featured

Our Town, hosted by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo, is featuring Susan Phippen and David Cerruti who are talking about the efforts to build a new Scituate Animal Shelter at the 3A Farm at the corner of Mann Lot Road and Route 3A.

Volunteers still need to raise $150,000 for a new 2,500 square foot animal shelter to replace the facility currently on the Driftway.

Since 1993, the no-kill shelter has served the towns of Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull, accommodating stray, homeless, injured and surrendered companion animals.

For more information and to follow the progress of the relocation, visit town.scituate.ma.us/animalshelter or 3afarmfund.com.

OUR TOWN is happy to announce that it will also be offering viewers two new specials over the next several weeks. First, the Cohasset High School Class of 2006 Graduation Ceremony is airing on Fridays at 7:30p.m., followed on Saturdays and Sundays at 3:30p.m.

A very special two-hour presentation on the correlation of mercury based vaccines for children and autism which is airing this Saturday and Sunday at 8p.m., followed on Mondays at 7p.m., all on Comcast channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed.

Requiem for Hingham Civic Orchestra: 1946-1996

COMMENTARY

ERIC ODDLEIFSON

Amateur means doing something for the love of it. That spirit overcame the occasional wrong note and out of tune passage in the HCO.

South Shore Magazine carried a recent article on the transformation of the Hingham Civic Orchestra (HCO) from an amateur to a fully professional group. The Hingham Symphony Orchestra does indeed bring a level of performance to the South Shore that was unavailable heretofore — but not without its costs.

We have lost a valuable community resource. A decade ago the HCO consisted of 40 amateur players — now there are none. Back then we did indeed face a dilemma. The decline in the availability of amateur string players, the backbone of any orchestra, made it difficult to continue. We were in the habit of bringing in "ringers" to round out the sections for our performances. Even though small, our audiences were enthusiastic family members, friends and neighbors.

Our strategy in hiring Jin Kim was to increase the level of our own competence in order to attract the better players to the group. It was not our intention to promote a full professional orchestra, but rather to attract those who play only for the love of it, and not for money, by improving the level of our own play.

Nevertheless, because of his undoubted competence Jin set the bar so high that the amateurs, even the good ones, eventually could not meet the standards, and became uncomfortable in both rehearsal and concert under the pressure of expected perfection. Some of us were embarrassed into quitting, or were told we could come to rehearsals, but could not play in the concerts.

When Virgil Thomson, considered to be the finest music critic of the 20th century and a noted composer in his own right, came to Hingham for the premier of his piece we had commissioned for Hingham's 350th Anniversary celebration, he turned to John Corley, our conductor at the time and said, "You conduct for the orchestra, and not for yourself."

The Hingham Symphony Orchestra, while serving the community in a professional capacity, also exists for itself — as a platform for young conservatory students as well as the conductor to help establish themselves in the highly competitive world of the professional musician. There is nothing inherently wrong in that, and there is no doubt in my mind that Jin Kim deserves a place with a major symphony orchestra. However, many amateur musicians on the South Shore no longer have a place to play.

One might well ask why we didn't object as the direction of the orchestra became clear. I think we all wanted to get better, but perhaps were fooling ourselves that we could play up to professional standards, without the hours of practice every day that entails. We became victims of our own ambitions.

The story of the demise of the Hingham Civic Orchestra might be viewed in the larger context of the continuing lack of attention to the arts in our public schools. Arts education has been pushed aside by a focus on reading and math. A liberal (or liberating) education is no longer valued, but one which focuses rather on technical training in preparation for the job market.

The failure to support a strong music curriculum, including string programs in many of our schools (particularly in the inner cities, where it would do the most good) is only one small reflection of the misguided belief that only by closer attention to math and science training will we maintain our competitive edge in the world.

Those of us who are fans of the sea stories of Patrick O'Brian remember the central theme of music performance that runs throughout all his novels, the many occasions when Captain Jack Aubrey and his pal Dr. Stephen Maturin played string music together both at sea and on shore, and the sailors themselves who were proficient on the fiddle. Those were the days when one had to make his own music, rather than putting on a CD or sitting and listening to it being played by professionals. It fostered a sense of community, now sadly lost in our highly advanced technical age.

Amateur means doing something for the love of it. That spirit overcame the occasional wrong note and out of tune passage in the HCO. When Patti McCarty, assistant principal violist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra came to play with us, she wrote a note afterwards commenting that she would rather be playing with us than sitting in rehearsals with the BSO.

Amateur play was encouraged by Paul Hindemith when he wrote "geheimsmusic", or music to be played in the home. This is what the HCO was all about, and those of us who spent many years with the group regret the loss of an important community resource. I encourage the Hingham Symphony Orchestra to change its name, as it proposes, as no connection between the old and the new remains.

Fortunately, some of us have found other groups with which to play. For me, it is the Rusty Skippers Band in Cohasset, which reflects, under the capable and forgiving leadership of Steve Biagini, that wonderful feeling of community, which is the essence of an amateur effort.

Mr. Oddleifson, Hingham Civic Orchestra past president and principal clarinet, lives in Cohasset, and is active in re-establishing arts education in our inner city public schools. In his 30-year career with the Hingham Civic Orchestra he was the soloist in the Mozart Clarinet Concerto (for which he received an artistic award of merit from the Orchestra's Board), The Weber Concertino, Carl Stamitz's Third Concerto, and Max Bruch's Double Concerto for Viola, Clarinet and Orchestra.

Hedlund, Lynch tackle the issues

Debate on WATD

By Kathryn Koch
KKOCH@CNC.COM

The failure of the state's affordable housing law, the legalization of marijuana and college tuition for illegal aliens were three of the hot-button topics that set off the debate between state Senate candidates.

In a live debate on WATD radio Monday night, state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, faced off against Democratic challenger and Marshfield resident Stephen A. Lynch.

The candidates agree that Chapter 40B affordable housing law has failed the people of Massachusetts. That's especially true for those who live in rural areas like the towns in southeastern Massachusetts, Hedlund said.

"In this particular area, that's where 40B is being recognized as a failure," he said.

Lynch said the only way to fix the problems with Chapter 40B is to get rid of it and start over. To produce more affordable housing in towns, which developers are trying to urbanize, Lynch said he proposes easing the rules on building single-family homes so that large-scale developments that tax school systems, police and fire departments aren't approved. He said local contractors should be allowed to do the work.

"We are not providing the affordable housing that is the American dream," he said.

Hedlund said he has been fighting to change Chapter 40B for six years, but laid the blame for lack of progress in recent months on the Democratic leadership he said has stifled reform initiatives.

Both candidates challenged the other's support for their respective choices for the next governor of Massachusetts. Hedlund called Lynch out for supporting Democrat Deval Patrick because Patrick supports granting illegal aliens the same rights to a college education as people who are residents.

"They shouldn't get a discount," Hedlund said.

Lynch said the parents of college-age children chose to live in Massachusetts, not the children, so they shouldn't have to pay the price.

"I'm not going to vote against children," he said.

Although Hedlund and Lynch disagree on who should be the next governor and why, and which political party is to blame for the state's ills, both say they are independent thinkers who won't be swayed by special interests.

Lynch described himself as a small-business owner, father and grandfather, an average citizen who will step in and have the guts to take a stand on even the most unpopular issues.

"I am one of you," he said. "I am not a tax and spend Beacon Hill insider."

While it may not be a popular position to take, Lynch said he supports what he calls the decriminalization of marijuana possession. He said law enforcement agencies are wasting their time and wasting taxpayer money going after people for drug possession and ignoring the need for serious rehabilitation programs.

Hedlund said the federal government governs what drugs are illegal and the role of law enforcement in the so-called war on drugs. He said he wouldn't support a bill legalizing marijuana, although he said he has heard that marijuana may have some medicinal value for people suffering from serious illnesses.

Lynch said the decision comes down to which political party the voters want to support. He described Democrats as supportive of working people, and Hedlund as another Republican who hasn't been the voice of the people he should be.

"My Republican opponent is part of a war against your average, working-class person," he said.

Hedlund said he has been a small-business owner, too, and like Lynch is against the status quo. He denied that he has taken on the "Beacon Hill mentality," and in fact has stood up to special interests. If he could produce his own television commercial, independent would be the best word to describe him, he said.

"Everything I've done, I've done on my own," he said.

Hedlund listed as his biggest accomplishment the work he put into the passage of Melanie's Law, a new law establishing stricter regulations for repeat drunk drivers. The law was named after Melanie Powell of Marshfield, who was killed by a repeat drunk driver in the summer of 2003. He said the Democratic leadership he called out for attempting to stall the bill had to be shamed into supporting the law.

Lynch congratulated Hedlund for his part in getting the law passed, but asked about prevention. He said bartenders should be legally responsible for letting people get drunk and then drive.

"We need real laws to prevent people from drinking and driving," he said.

When asked in lighting-round questioning if Hedlund has done a good job representing the people in his district, Lynch answered simply, "No." Asked if he thinks Lynch would do a good job representing the people in the district, Hedlund said the jury is out.

The voters will decide who will best serve them at the polls Tuesday, Nov. 7.

HEALTH NOTES

Dizziness is all in your head

FROM HEALTH, PAGE 12

having your hair washed, when participating in sports activities and when you are lying flat on your back.

How is BPPV treated? — BPPV has often been described as "self-limiting" because symptoms often subside or disappear within six months of onset. Various types of physical maneuvers and exercises have proved effective. One treatment, which involves exercise that you might want to try, may prove beneficial.

Office treatment of BPPV: The Epley Maneuver — This treatment is usually performed in the doctor's office and reports approximately an 80 percent cure rate, according to a recent study. If your doctor is unfamiliar with these treatments, you can find a list of knowledgeable doctors from the Vestibular Disorders Association (VEDA).

The older you are, the more likely it is that your dizziness is BPPV, as about 50 percent of all dizziness in older people is due to BPPV

The Mayo Clinic sometimes recommends the modified Epley maneuver, involving sequential movement of the head into four positions, staying in each position for roughly 30 seconds.

The maneuver, named after its inventor, is intended to move crystaline debris, which sometimes forms in the inner ear out of the sensitive part of the ear (posterior canal) to a less sensitive location. It takes about 15 minutes to complete.

- Step 1: Find a place to get into a reclining position. Head is extended over the end of a flat surface at a 45-degree angle.
- Step 2: Turn your head to the other side.
- Step 3: Roll over onto your side. Head is slightly angled while looking down at the floor.
- Step 4: Return carefully to a sitting position.
- Step 5: Tilt your chin down.

One report says the recurrence rate for BPPV after this maneuver is about 30 percent at one year, and in some instances a second treatment may be necessary. After the maneuver, some doctors recommend activities, which may reduce the chance that debris might fall back into the sensitive part of the ear. For example, use two pillows when you sleep. Don't turn your head far up or far down. Be careful to avoid head-extended positions, in which you are lying on your back, especially with your head turned towards the affected side. Try to stay as upright as possible.

You might then try putting yourself in the position that usually makes you dizzy and see how you feel. If these maneuvers don't help; you'll have to bite the bullet and consult a doctor.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

School Committee leadership surfaces

TO THE EDITOR:

About two weeks ago, in response to my commentary in the previous Mariner, I received a letter from a gentleman with a point of view I'm hearing more and more. He said, "The good will of this community has been betrayed. I speak as one who worked actively for the override. 'Trust' is hard won and easily lost." He went on to say, "Cohasset voters are owed an apology and a change of school administration." My response to him started "While I am not yet prepared to use betrayal in describing the actions of our school managers, there is no doubt that they are not adept in communicating with the voters."

In last week's Mariner (Sept 29) I see that communication between the School Committee and the Superintendent isn't all that great either. The Mariner quotes four of the five School Committee members as having some problems with what information is shared with them by the Superintendent and how quickly. Their concerns taken as a whole is that information critical to their decision making appears to have been slow or misleading in coming from the Superintendent. I suspect they are beginning to feel like the letter writer quoted above. This is not a good feeling.

My response to my letter writer contained this thought: "It may be that a strong superintendent and a weak school committee has worked here in the past but I tend to believe that the School Committee may be incapable of dealing with a strong educator who believes the Committee has abdicated its responsibility to lead. I surmise that this Superintendent has filled the vacuum left by the actions of the School Committee."

Whether or not my thought was accurate, I can say that the recent statements and actions taken by School Committee members Slanetz, Flynn, Fusco and Williams make me feel more optimistic and confident in their leadership abilities. The "transparency" of communication Mr. Flynn actively encouraged in a recent meeting is exactly what will communicate best with the town.

This is still all about "trust" and what I see now is heartening. Keep it up.

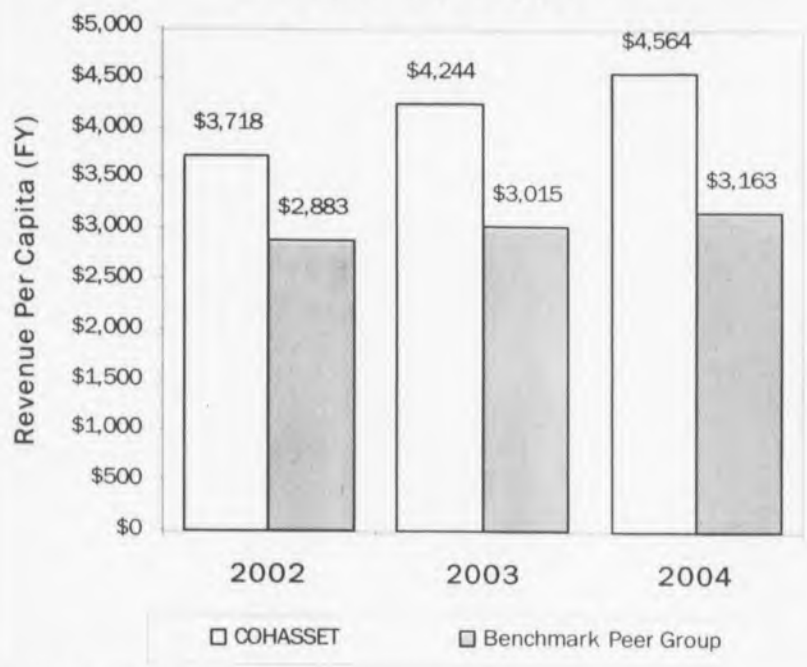
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com).

This chart looks at Cohasset's revenue per capita for fiscal years 2002, 2003 and 2004. By looking at aggregate revenues on a per capita basis, one can get a sense for what resources Cohasset has had to serve each resident. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Beechwood Ballpark rebuild needs donations

The Beechwood Ballpark Field Committee is pleased to announce that construction will soon begin on the Beechwood Multi-Purpose Field and Park.

Because of the generosity of the Cohasset Preservation Committee's $300,000 grant the essential field work will soon begin.

Beechwood Park is a multi-purpose recreational area consisting of a ball field, basketball and multi-purpose court and "Tot Lot" containing a variety of playground apparatus.

The CPC grant will allow redesign and orientation of the ball field which may also be used as a field for other team sports. Within this initial funding there will be enough money for cutting down the hill in the present center field and moving the present home plate from the corner of Beechwood and Doane streets south, to Doane and Bates Lane.

Not provided for within the CPC grant amount will be the necessary revenue for proper drainage, new fencing for the whole project, and the Tot Lot equipment and basketball court and lights.

Therefore, only through contributions can the entire project be completed. It will be necessary to raise more than $100,000 in order to fully complete this project.

About $100,000 is needed to complete the Beechwood Ball Park project.

To donate for this community facility, please make checks out to the Town of Cohasset (Beechwood Ballpark) and send to the Town Treasurer, Town of Cohasset, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA. 02025.

The Beechwood Ballpark Committee would like to thank you in advance for your donation.

Lady Clippers nip Skippers

CHS girls hang tough in 3-2 loss to Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In recent seasons, the Norwell-Cohasset girls soccer rivalry has been a one-sided affair in favor of the Clippers.

Last fall, Norwell won both games by a 7-1 score. Last Friday's match at NHS was a much different story.

A Cohasset goal by senior defender Haley Haracz with 15 minutes left brought the Skippers to within one at 3-2, and both teams had chances to score again in the closing minutes.

Skippers head coach Deb Beal said she saw her team leave everything it had on the field.

"I saw a lot of heart and a definite desire to beat them," said Beal. "We played very well and extremely hard; they came off the field gassed."

For the home team, it was what is turning out to be a typical victory this season. For the most part, the Clippers are not blowing teams away as they have in years past. But with a good defense and enough timely scoring, Norwell is what it is: an undefeated team (6-0-2 going into yesterday's match in Hull).

In Pembroke, Hanover, Abington, Cohasset and East Bridgewater, Norwell has played the toughest competition it will face all season. While his side will see all of those teams again before the season is over, Norwell head coach Bruce Emerson is as confident as he has been all year.

"I think we have a pretty good team and can match up with anybody," Emerson said. "Somebody could beat us, but I think we'd have to have a bad day and [the opponent] would have to have a really good day."

Beal said it took her team a little while to get going on Friday, and Norwell took advantage with two first half goals. The first came from junior Jill Cammett, who struck a well-placed volley off a cross from junior Jenna Gray to put Norwell on the board first.

It was 2-0 after another good cross into the Cohasset penalty area, this one from senior Liz

Tough second half does in gridders

22 straight points propel Scituate to victory

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

SCITUATE - Unlike last year's meeting, this year's Scituate-Cohasset gridiron battle had its share of points.

Just like last year, though, it was Scituate who had more points at the end, scoring 22 of them in the second half to earn a spirited 28-14 victory over their neighboring rivals.

Cohasset looked clearly the stronger of the two teams in the first half, and used a pair of big touchdown plays – a 40-yard run by junior Brian Hill and a 37-yard pass from senior Anthony DiPaolo to junior Pat Doonan – to take a 14-6 lead into the half.

In the second half, however, it was the Sailors' turn for the big plays. A 19-yard touchdown pass from senior Gary Crowley to classmate and fellow captain

CHS boys still waiting for goals

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The name of the game is scoring goals.

Much to the chagrin of an injury-riddled Cohasset High boys soccer team, that has been a struggle this season.

The Skippers (1-5-2 overall, 1-4-2 South Shore League) have scored just eight goals in eight matches, and have been shut out in their last two, a 3-0 loss in Norwell last Friday and a 2-0 loss to Mashpee at Alumni Field on Wednesday.

After the Falcons took control of Wednesday's match with two first half goals, the Skippers began to show some ideas in the second frame.

Junior center midfielders Mike Grimm and Evan Deutsch both created quality opportunities early in the half. In the 50th minute, a nicely played ball into the Mashpee penalty area from the left wing by Deutsch found fellow junior Emma Oronte, whose shot just sailed over the crossbar.

Unfortunately for the Skippers, injuries reared their ugly head

Ups and downs continue for CHS field hockey

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

At this point in the season, even the most in-tuned Skippers fans are left scratching their heads.

After splitting a win and a loss the week before, the Cohasset High field hockey squad has posted yet another stretch of mixed results.

So why focus on this inconsistency? Teetering on the .500 record mark with the second half of the season nearing, the Skippers need to find a level playing field in order to secure an invite to the state tournament.

The Skippers started off the week with a bang: a decisive 5-0 victory over Hull. With their disappointing loss to Carver in mind, Cohasset took no prisoners when the Pirates stepped on to Alumni Field on Sept. 26.

From the opening whistle, the Skippers put their game in full throttle. Junior Olivia Kimla kicked things off just over a minute into the game with a goal from the right side. Eleven minutes later, senior captain Caitlin Hurley and junior Sally Meehan joined forces for the second goal.

Teetering on the .500 record mark with the second half of the season nearing, the Skippers need to find a level playing field in order to secure an invite to the state tournament.

At 16:38, juniors Corinna Durham and Katina Martone worked some passing magic and connected with May McCarthy who finished the pass. Finally, at 27:15 Durham found Hurley for goal number-4.

Too much offense to keep track of? Just think of how the Pirates must have felt. In the second half, Durham depressed Hull

Ropi, who found junior Kylie Smith for the score. Emerson said his team has put a lot more focus this season on wing play in the offensive third this season.

"We've spent a lot more time this year on pushing the ball to the corner and crossing it in, because that's usually how you beat a good goalie," he said. "We've scored on a lot more crosses and corners this year."

After going two goals down, the Skippers responded with some very strong play in the last 25 minutes of the first half, the team's best stretch of the game according to Beal. Sophomore Maggie McGoldrick, still batting a rib injury sustained over two weeks ago against Carver, buried a well-placed shot past Norwell junior keeper Sallie Hardy to put Cohasset on the board.

The Skippers continued to create opportunities, with seniors Caren Garber and Alyssa Hinman, junior Meg Anderson and freshman Mackenzie Hart all contributing to the cause.

Still, it was Norwell who struck next on a goal from junior Jenn Cronin about 15 minutes into the second half, as her shot from 25 yards just sailed over Cohasset sophomore keeper Johanna Brophy. It was about 10 minutes later when Haracz scored her goal on a corner from sophomore Torey Hart, the South Shore League's leading scorer (eight goals, 10 assists) so far this season.

The last 15 minutes were back-and-forth, as Norwell had a goal disallowed on a foul call and Cohasset created some good chances to equalize. Hardy had to make a couple nice stops to preserve the win for the Clippers.

The Clippers got solid performances from seniors Katelyn Stravinsky and Jamie Capaldo. Stravinsky made some critical defensive plays down the stretch from her right back position, and Emerson says she is getting stronger at that spot with every game. Capaldo, meanwhile, distributed the ball exceptionally well from her center forward spot, and it was her header to Gray out on the flank that helped create Norwell's first goal.

For Cohasset (6-2), sophomore sweeper Sammie Lehr anchored a good defensive showing that also included Haracz, senior Colleen Richardson and junior Anna Haggerty. Senior Kara Wilcox came off the bench with about 15 minutes to go and made a notable difference at the center midfield spot.

While Beal and her players came to win, the coach had nothing but good things to say about the Skippers' performance.

"Norwell is tough, quick and athletic, but we were at a level where we could compete with them," Beal said. "We had a ton of opportunities."

After playing Mashpee on Wednesday (Oct. 4), the Skippers travel to East Bridgewater today(Oct. 6) and Abington on Tuesday for two critical league games.

Norwell hosts Mashpee today and goes to Carver on Tuesday.

even further with an unassisted goal to make for her third point of the game.

"We definitely controlled this game," said Cohasset coach Deb Bostwick. "The midfielders kept the ball in our half for a majority of the time."

Bostwick particularly commended captain Laura Campedelli, Hurley, Durham and sophomores Marissa Tangherlini and Georgia Murley for their performance in the midfield.

Offensively, senior Virginia Spofford, Kimla, McCarthy, and Martone demonstrated "fearlessness, shot after shot" according to Bostwick.

Bostwick's list of defensive standouts proved the longest. Senior captain Alida Tangherlini, seniors Michelle Madge and Molly Gallagher, and juniors Paige Strecker, Sondra Hart, and Meehan played flawlessly, allowing only one shot from Hull.

"Our non-stick dodging exercise and give-and-go drill from practice definitely helped a lot this game," said Campedelli of the Skippers' success.

Unfortunately, the good news ends here. The very next day the tables turned on Cohasset as they faced off against East Bridgewater. After ending their first meeting with a 3-3 tie, both teams came out looking for blood. And let's just say the Skippers weren't facing any "excessive exuberance" penalties like the Patriots after this game.

Even with an intense mentality, the Skippers struggled to contain All-American Jess Roberts.

"She switched on her A-game and we strained to contain her," admitted Bostwick with a sigh. Roberts contributed in two of the three Viking goals in the first half.

The second half brought an improvement for Cohasset. While they handcuffed the Viking offense, the Skippers couldn't find the net for themselves. The final result: a 3-0 East Bridgewater win.

The very next day the tables turned on Cohasset as they faced off against East Bridgewater.

Bostwick attributed the scoreless second half to the defense of Madge, Meehan, and Tangherlini, who had her "best performance to date." Sophomore Alyssa Mullin also flaunted her quick reflexes in goal.

Despite the loss, Bostwick mainly focused on the positive aspects of the loss.

"It was a very physical and hard-played game on both sides," she said.

While the Skippers did play hard, they cannot afford to let their essential themes fall by the wayside. In this case, they failed to beat a tougher team at home.

With a grudge match against Harwich on Thursday (after the Mariner went to press), Cohasset has its chance to restore their winning ways. Bostwick claims that if the Skippers play at their top level for the full game, they have a "good chance" at taking down the infamous Rough Riders.

Jason Roach, along with Crowley's ensuing two-point run, tied the game at 14 going into the fourth.

In the final quarter, a 36-yard run by Crowley and a 40-yard jaunt by senior Jay Milkiewicz accounted for the game's final two touchdowns, giving Scituate the win and bringing its record back up to .500 (2-2).

To use an old sporting cliché, it truly was a tale of two halves.

"At halftime, I raised my voice to a level that I thought my head would explode. Fortunately, they listened," said Scituate head coach Steve Castle. "Cohasset played with tremendous emotion, and then the tide turned. That's what happens when you get a local rivalry like this. I'm just glad it shifted in our favor. But Cohasset came ready to play and played a very good ball game."

For Castle and Skippers head coach Pete Afanasiw, this was the first taste of this rivalry. Unfortunately for Afanasiw, it wasn't quite as pleasant.

"They were able to pick our defense apart in the second half. It's that simple," he said. "Scituate was making all the plays to sustain drives, and we weren't able to counter that. Crowley and Milkiewicz were great; they both executed very well for them."

Cohasset did force Scituate to punt on the Sailors' first possession of the second half, and a bad snap on that punt gave the visitors the ball at Scituate's 39. After a couple runs by Hill (16 rushes, 99 yards) and DiPaolo, Cohasset had a fourth-and-inches at the 30. On the play, the Sailors defense was all over an option play to the right side, forcing a fumble that was recovered by Sailors senior Nick Mullin.

With that, the Sailors offense took over and went to work. A 17-yard completion from Crowley (15-for-26, 208 yards) to Milkiewicz started an eight-play, 71-yard drive that culminated in Roach's touchdown catch on a quick slant pattern.

For the senior fullback, it was the first touchdown of his varsity career.

"I almost got called for taking my helmet off after that," Roach recalled of his post-touchdown delirium.

The Skippers took their next drive into Scituate territory once again, thanks to a 26-yard completion from DiPaolo to his younger brother, Andrew. Anthony had his best game of the season passing-wise, going 9-for-17 for 139 yards.

Alas, this possession ended in another fumble, this one recovered by Roach at the Sailors' 34.

To start the fourth quarter, Scituate faced a third-and-9 at its own 35. Crowley found a wide-open James Doherty in the middle of the field for a key 13-yard gain to keep the drive going. After a 16-yard run from Roach, Crowley took care of the rest on his touchdown run, a quarterback draw out of Scituate's patented five-receiver, shotgun formation.

Cohasset again appeared to be in good shape on its next drive, which started with a 31-yard run by Hill. A rather dubious late hit call against Scituate on the play gave the Skippers a first down at the Sailors' 14.

Scituate's defense was up to the task yet again, forcing a turnover on downs after an incomplete pass and three short runs. Sailors senior Pat Shea made nice play on Hill's second down run, preventing the Cohasset tailback from turning the corner and holding him to no gain.

Taking over at their own 14, holding a seven-point lead with 7:37 to play, Scituate ran a classic fourth quarter drive to win the game. The Sailors, a passing team by nature, ran the ball 10 straight plays, the last of which resulted in Milkiewicz's 40-yard touchdown run on a fake reverse.

Three times earlier in the game – including the play just three snaps before the final touchdown – Milkiewicz indeed handed the ball off on a reverse to junior receiver Alex Cuomo. Those three plays resulted in 34 yards, so the Cohasset defense was certainly on the lookout for such a play again.

On this play, however, it was Milkiewicz who kept the ball and got in for six.

"We'd been working on that play in practice," he said after the game. "It was a great play call by our coaches; we tricked them. I could see the [Cohasset] guy on the corner just freeze because he thought it was another reverse."

The whole drive was one that Castle hopes other teams take as a sign that the Sailors are a team that can mix it up in the trenches as well as throw the ball.

"I hope that silences any critics," Castle said. "If anyone says Scituate can't run the ball, that should dispel it. The best part of my team is the skill players, but the line is coming on and I'm very proud of them. To kill that fourth quarter like we did is very gratifying."

While he wasn't happy with his team's execution, Afanasiw did manage to take a few positives from the game.

"We had good intensity, and I'm proud of the kids for staying poised and not picking up any personal fouls," he said. "This is a hot rivalry, and as a coach, you want your kids to have the composure that ours had today."

Scituate held a 6-0 lead after one on a 35-yard touchdown pass from Crowley to Milkiewicz, but the second quarter belonged to Cohasset. With just over three minutes left in the half, the Skippers converted a third-and-8 when DiPaolo found senior tight end Justin Alexander for 11 yards. Alexander finished the afternoon with three receptions for 44 yards.

Two plays later, Hill took a handoff right up the middle and blew past the Scituate secondary for a 40-yard touchdown. Junior Pat Doonan's extra point gave Cohasset a 7-6 lead at the time.

On the first play of Scituate's next drive, Cohasset senior Fletcher Smalzel picked off a Crowley pass and made a nice 25-yard return to the Scituate 37. It took just one play for the Skippers to get in from there, as DiPaolo found Doonan wide open down the right sideline for a touchdown.

JV Football splits games with Spellman and Scituate

It looked like there might be a David vs. Goliath match up when the JV Skippers arrived at Cardinal Spellman High School to an already warmed up, revved up, and bigger CS team.

And in the first quarter, it appeared as if that might be so. The Skippers could not generate any offense, and turnovers stopped any potential momentum. CS scored early, and it looked like it was going to be a long afternoon in the trenches for the boys in blue.

But then focus, discipline and sure hands took over. The Skippers marched the length of the field. Dave Toomey took a pitch outside and set up Mike Froio for a three-yard touchdown run. With 21 seconds left in the second quarter, quarterback Johnny Maher hit Derek Schwantner for the first of his two receiving touchdowns.

The Skippers were up 12-8 and received the ball at the start of the second half. Schwantner returned the kickoff for a 75-yard touchdown return. Momentum was favoring Cohasset, and the tough Skipper defense caused a fumble by CS on what could have been a CS first down. Maher then hit Schwantner again for a score, and nailed the conversion.

The Skippers were on top 26-8 and remained there. The only sustainable drive by CS happened late in the fourth quarter, and Maher intercepted a long ball to stop the CS drive. Coach Brian Pattison said, " Early turnovers killed us in the first quarter. Our team motto is integrity. The boys persevered and their integrity showed through as they took control of the ball game.

"Again, sophomore leadership and the leadership and passing of Johnny Maher put us on top. The offensive line (Kevin O'Connell, Will Lynner, Nick Lieberman, Matt Wasel, Dan Sullivan) worked hard and really stepped up, allowing us to make plays. We were able to use our depth in the backfield. Freshmen Jake Wheelwright and Dean Driscoll got in on the running game and did a great job late in the fourth quarter."

The following week, the Scituate Sailors traveled to Alumni Field.

The game was closer than the 37-22 score indicated, as Cohasset battled the Sailors with strong efforts, particularly in the second half. Dana Valentine made his debut for the Skippers and ignited the crowd with a 60-yard rush in the first half. Mike "up the middle" Froio put the Skippers on the board with a one-yard touchdown run.

Other highlights include a Valentine touchdown made possible by a great block from Matt Wasel and Johnny Maher hit Nick Savage for an 11-yard scoring pass.

Coach Pattison said, "Our defense needed to tackle more and make plays. We struggle putting together two good halves of football. Dana Valentine gave our running game a boost. Our offensive line provided good, solid blocking. Last year, Scituate gave us a beating. This year, we were in the game."

Coach Craig Davis agreed, saying, "Overall, it was a good game. We need to get all pieces working together in one game. Our d-line played well."

FROM BOYS SOCCER, PAGE 17

three minutes later when Grimm went down with a potentially serious hip injury. Already playing without the likes of junior Sam Roth and senior Adam Smith, Cohasset could ill afford to lose a playmaker and overall talent like Grimm in the middle of the pitch.

Still, a lack of finishing touch was Cohasset's ultimate downfall, and things don't figure to get much easier today (Oct. 6) when the boys host East Bridgewater.

Still, the game goes on, and just a minute later Deutsch made another good attacking pass, this one up the right wing to junior Ryan Crough, whose cross was taken by the Mashpee keeper just in front of a Skippers teammate.

Deutsch and senior Chris Donze both took good shots on goal from distance in the last 20 minutes, but the Falcons keeper was always up to the task.

Defensively, Cohasset was able to shut out a talented Mashpee attack in the second half. Freshman keeper Will Wise, who is turning in a very solid season, made a couple nice stops, and sophomore sweeper Owen Landon made things difficult for Falcons strikers.

Still, a lack of finishing touch was Cohasset's ultimate downfall, and things don't figure to get much easier today (Oct. 6) when the boys host East Bridgewater. The Vikings beat the Skippers 5-1 in the teams' first meeting on Sept. 12.

Next week, Cohasset hosts Abington on Tuesday, Carver Thursday and Cardinal Spellman on Saturday. Kickoff for the midweek matches are scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Saturday's contest is set to start at 3.

CHS golfers on winning track

Two wins this week over East Bridgewater and Carver have improved the Cohasset High golf team's record to 9-3 and leave the Skippers is good position to take second place in the South Shore League.

In Tuesday's 38-16 home win over EB, senior Kevin Barber and junior Charlie Czerkawski both shot an impressive 39, just 3-over par. Both won their individual matches by wide margins.

Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said his team is playing some of its best golf of the year.

The Skippers, in fact, won all six matches in the linup, as senior Zach Murray, sophomore John Wade, freshman Chase Stebbins and sophomore John Sturino were all victorious over their EB opponents.

Cohasset traveled to Souther's Marsh Golf Club in Plymouth on Wednesday and defeated Carver, 34.5-19.5. Czerkawski improved his record on the season to 11-1 by shooting a 5-over 36, and shared medalist honors with Sturino. For Sturino, it was a personal best score.

Wins by Murray and Stebbins improved their records to 9-2-1 and 8-2-1, respectively. Wade remains undefeated in league play, with an overall record of 9-0-2 in the fourth spot of Cohasset's lineup.

Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said his team is playing some of its best golf of the year as it prepares for the upcoming league tournament (Oct. 19 at Souther's Marsh) and the Div. 3 South Shore sectionals (Oct. 23 at Pembroke Country Club).

IT'S HAPPENING

Spring bulbs

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is currently taking orders for a selection of spring flowering bulbs that will fill gardens with color from April to June. The assortment includes a violet-rose peony, flowering tulip, double narcissi with huge creamy yellow flowers, parrot tulips, deer- and rodent-resistant alliums, as well as petite muscari and scilla. Bulbs ordered now will become available at the end of September, and each order will be accompanied with directions for planting. Dutch organic bulb food is also available and recommended to enhance a garden's performance.

To order now for the best selection, call 781-383-0838. All purchases help fund club programs and community services.

Art center meeting

South Shore Art Center announces the annual meeting of the corporation, Tuesday, Oct. 17, at 7 p.m., in the Bancroft Gallery. All members are invited to attend.

The Shirley Neer prize for outstanding children's art instructor will be awarded to Patrice Kelley of Hanover. Volunteer of the Year awards will be given to David Avery of Marshfield and Libby Allard of Cohasset.

Qi Gong offered

Qi Gong is a new offering at the Hingham Community Center. Qi means breath, or energy. Gong means practice. Together, Qi Gong is a gentle and relaxed holistic exercise system that helps revitalize the body, lower blood pressure, and lessen stress by relaxing the mind. The new class runs for eight weeks on Fridays, from 9 to 10 a.m. starting Oct. 6. Call 781-749-9786 for information.

Weir River Farm Fall Festival

The Weir River Farm Fall Festival will be held on Saturday, Oct. 14, from noon to 3pm. Festival goers will have an opportunity to reap and share the joy of harvest on the Farm and meet its family of barnyard animals. Activities will include field games, pony rides, pumpkins, children's crafts, and music. Cost is $5, $3, members. Visit www.thetrustees.org or call 781-740-4796 for more information.

Newcomers gatherings

All new and prospective members, as well as current members, are invited to New Member Gatherings for the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club to get to know some new faces in the community and to learn more about the club. Friends and children are welcome to attend. SCNC will host a wine and cheese event and a couple of coffees in October, all of which are currently scheduled for the following dates:

Oct. 7, wine and cheese event at 4 p.m. Register with Kelly at k-dlee@hotmail.com or call 545-0866.

Oct. 13, coffee at 10 a.m. Register with Kelly.

For more information, including location for the Oct. 7 and Oct. 13 events, contact Kelly. Also, check out the Web site at scnewcomers.com. Many activities are scheduled during the year.

British organist at St. Stephen's

As part of its Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church is presenting organist Philip Scriven of Lichfield Cathedral, England in recital on Thursday evening, Oct. 19, at 7:30 p.m. Receiving his early training as a chorister at Westminster Abbey, Philip Scriven is now organist and director of music at Litchfield Cathedral. He founded the Vienna Orpheus Choir and Orchestra and is well known as a conductor of opera. Scriven has toured Europe, Canada, and the United States, and in 1995, won the Royal College of Organists Performer of the Year competition.

The program will include Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in D Major," Duruflé's "Suite for Organ," and "Rubrics" by Dan Locklair. The program will be performed on the historic 58-rank Aeolian-Skinner instrument at St. Stephen's, known for its tonal diversity and unique placement.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave., and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781.383.1083.

Join the Girl Scouts

Any girls interested in joining Girl Scouts, who are in grades kindergarten through high school, can call Amy Brash at 781-923-1099 or email amybrash@putnam.com for more information.

Adults are also needed to become troop leaders. Anyone interested should contact Brash.

Animal shelter event

Tickets are now available for the Scituate Animal Shelter's Bark 'n Howl Ball, Saturday, Oct. 28, at the River Club in Scituate, from 7 p.m. to midnight. The evening will include a buffet dinner, cash bar and dancing to the music of local band Section 8. There will also be silent and live auctions.

Tickets are $125 each, $100 is tax deductible, and all proceeds benefit the 3A Farm Fund. Volunteers still need to raise $150,000 for a new 2,500 square foot animal shelter at Route 3A and Mann Lot Road, Scituate, to replace the facility currently on the Driftway. Since 1993, the no-kill shelter has served the towns of Scituate, Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull, accommodating stray, homeless, injured and surrendered companion animals.

Tickets to the Bark 'n Howl Ball are limited and are available at the Shelter on the Driftway in Scituate and Sylvia's by the Sea in Scituate Harbor. Reserved tables and sponsorships are available.

For more information, call the shelter at 781-545-8703. Shelter hours are Monday through Friday, from 4 to 6 p.m., and Saturday 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information and to follow the progress of the relocation, visit town.scituate.ma.us/animalshelter or 3afarmfund.com.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Looking forward to long weekend

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

We made it! The long weekend has finally arrived, and right this very second, CHS is empty of its students. The students are enjoying their four-day weekend right this second. Don't worry; the kids will be back in school on Tuesday. We'll be out of your hair (for a while) soon enough. As the leaves begin to change, we find ourselves adjusted to the routine of school. The bell rings. Students get up and move to designated classes. Every day is more or less the same. The prison comparison seems more and more valid with all these new cameras. Fear not, parents. It's not as bad as we make it seem. We're teenagers; exaggeration comes with the territory. Back to the facts, here is the news for this week.

• Congratulations to the recipients of the John and Abigail Adams Scholarship! The students who received this prestigious award were treated to a lunch in the school library on Tuesday. PrincipalMr. Antolini and Superintendent Denise Walsh congratulated the following seniors:

Kevin Barber, Mercedees Barnes-Jackson, Austin Breslow, Laura Campedelli, Emily Coggins, Brent Daly, Kyle Dattola-Harris, Reed Dickinson, Molly Gallagher, Caren Garber, Haley Haracz, Ryan Ingram, Ryan Kucinski, Ben Masotta, Bobby Meikleham, Blain Morin, Lara Novak, Mary Previte, Colleen Richardson, Adam Smith, Virginia Spofford, Lauren Strazzulla, Alida Tangherlini, Amanda Thompson, Cate Treese, Kara Wilcox, and Ellen Wise.

• Boys Soccer takes on East Bridgewater today at 3:30 on Alumni Field.

• There was a French Exchange Program meeting Tuesday night

• School Committee met Wednesday night

• Thursday morning a PSO/Principal meeting took place

• Congratulations to the 11th grade, 100 percent passed the MCAS.

• Student Council met Tuesday after school.

• Tuesday Mr. Willis' AP European History class traveled to the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum to view a collection of Renaissance art.

• Seniors, Mary Previte, Lacey Richardson and Callie Barrett, are organizing a Hunger Banquet at the High School. They will be accepting donations to help pay for the food at the Hunger Banquet in addition to collecting canned goods to give to the Cohasset Food Pantry. If you have any canned goods (that have not expired!!) to send in with your students or drop off at the school there will be a box in the front hallway starting next Wednesday. All donations are much appreciated!

There's the news. There's no use hiding the complete state of contentment that this reporter feels due to this long weekend, and the fact that LOST and House are back on the air. When Monday comes, students won't care at all, because of their second consecutive four-day week. Sorry to all the adults that do not have the day off, because most of us will most likely be sleeping in. Cheer up though, the kids will be back in class come Tuesday, and complaining about school again. There's that exaggeration again. It's really not that bad. Enjoy the long weekend everybody.

Caren Garber nominated for National Award Program

Caren Garber, Cohasset Middle-High School senior, has been nominated to compete in the national Principal's Leadership Award scholarship program, sponsored by the National Association of Secondary School Principals. Herff Jones Inc. funds the PLA program.

Joel Antolini, principal, Cohasset Middle-High School, today announced the nomination, which places Garber in the national competition. One hundred national PLA winners will be chosen this spring to receive $1,000 college scholarships.

Garber is an exceptional student and is highly motivated in all aspects of life at Cohasset Middle-High School. She has always demonstrated a desire for a strong and positive high school experience for herself and her peers.

High school principals from across the country were able to nominate one of their student leaders. Nominees were selected based on their leadership skills, participation in service organizations and clubs, achievements in the arts and sciences, employment experience, and academic record. They were also required to write an essay.

Caren Garber, a senior at CHS, has been recognized for her leadership.

"Every year, the nominees for the Principal's Leadership Award are just phenomenal and Caren is no different," said Gerald N. Tirozzi, executive directory, NASSP. "She is an excellent example of what a true student leader embodies."

By recognizing leadership in co-curricular activities as well as academic performance, the PLA scholarship recognizes the importance of a well-rounded education. Co-curricular activities are an essential part of the school curriculum.

While at Cohasset Middle-High School, Garber has been elected Treasurer and Vice-President of her class, is serving as National Honor Society President, Captain of the Soccer team, participant of the Lacrosse team, participant in the Relay for Life, Appalachia Service Project, and Summer Study of leatherback turtles.

All of these things are the makings of a well-rounded student. This fall she plans to apply to Brown, Tufts, Harvard, Dartmouth, and Middlebury for medicine.

NASSP, the preeminent school leadership organization, serves as the national voice for middle level and high school principals, assistant principals, and aspiring school leaders. NASSP promotes the intellectual growth, academic achievement, character development, and leadership services. NASSP administers the National Honor Society, The National Junior Honor Society, and the National Association of Student Councils.

AP Scholars named at Cohasset High

Students took AP Exams in May after completing college-level courses at their high schools

Twenty-two students at Cohasset High School have earned the designation of AP Scholar by the College Board in recognition of their exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement Exams.

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program offers students the opportunity to take college-level courses while still in high school and to receive college credit, advanced placement, or both for successful performances on the AP Exams. About 18 percent of the more than 1.3 million high school students in 16,000 secondary schools worldwide who took AP Exams performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition of AP Scholar.

Students took AP Exams in May after completing college-level courses at their high schools. The College Board recognizes several levels of achievement based on student's performance on AP exams.

At Cohasset High School:

One student qualified for the National AP Scholar Award by earning an average grade of 4 or higher on a 5-point scale on all AP exams taken and grades of 4 or higher on eight or more of these exams. This student is Nils Sceery.

Eight students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.5 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams. These students are: Susan Curry, Jeffrey Kent, Kate McBride, Emily Nash, Christopher Reynolds, Emily Savage, Nils Sceery and Molly Trisler.

Five students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on four or more of these exams. These students are: Kevin Barber, Kelsey Bell, Mark Bouchard, Ryan Ingram and Christopher Ofsthun.

Nine students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Examinations, with grade of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are Emily Coggins, Reed Dickinson, Caren Garber, Michael Martone, Vanessa Plante, Colleen Richardson, Lauren Strazzulla, Timothy Toomey and Katherine Wilcox.

Of this year's award recipients at Cohasset high School, nine are juniors: Kevin Barber, Emily Coggins, Reed Dickinson, Caren Garber, Ryan Ingram, Colleen Richardson, Lauren Strazzulla, Timothy Toomey and Katherine Wilcox. These students have at least one more year in which to complete college-level work and possibly earn another AP Scholar Award.

Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit, advanced placement, or both based on successful performance on the AP exams. More than 1,400 institutions award a full year's credit, sophomore standing, to students presenting a sufficient number of qualifying grades. In 2006 thirty-five AP Exams offered a variety of subject areas, each consisting of multiple-choice and free-response, essay or problem solving questions, except for the Studio Art exam that evaluates students' original artwork.

The College Board is a not-for-profit membership organization whose mission is to connect students to college success and opportunity. Founded in 1900, the association is composed of more than 5,000 schools, colleges, universities and other educational organizations. Each year, the College Board serves 7 million students and their parents, 23,000 high schools and 3,500 colleges through programs and services in college admissions, guidance, assessment, financial aid, enrollment and teaching and learning. Among its best-known programs are SAT, the PSAT/NMSQT and the Advanced Placement Program. The College Board is committed to the principles of excellence and equity, and that commitment is embodied in all of its programs, services, activities and concerns.

For a weeklong trip, Cohasset's sixth graders sure brought a lot of luggage. Students spent last week at Camp Bournedale and it took a small fleet of school buses and a U-Haul truck to bring all the children and their gear back home.

BSCORI BRAIDED RUGS COLUMBUS DAY WEEKEND SALE! In E. Orleans

In Providence, RI there is a small workshop producing classic braided yarn rugs in beautiful designs and color patterns out of premium materials. Last summer, I displayed our rugs at the Wellfleet Flea Market every day, meeting many friendly Cape Codders who loved the rugs and purchased them for their homes. As an older person, I decided to open a store here and show the rugs in a comfortable space for you to look, select, and compare. I have easy chairs for you to rest in.

We make the rugs to your dimensions. My shop has about 70 styles to look at today. There are two material types: Our wool rugs have the highest wool content in the industry (80-90%) in beautiful multi color and primary color patterns. We also make wonderful 100% polypropylene rugs in a tight weave. These styles are soil/stain proof! Imagine a classically beautiful rug that shrugs off the kid and animal efforts at destruction.

Here is the best part- our rugs are not seen full size in any stores. I display each full size so you can estimate how it covers your space. Prices? For a premium durable rug to last for decades, you only pay from $240 to $650 depending on size. Compare that with other makers of rugs that shred and fray.

Clutching this ad in your hand gets you:

20% discount from all orders over $150.

Come and see me. If you bought a rug from me last year, I would like to see you again. Thanks, Bob Abramson

Home fit for a King

Jewelry store owners help Habitat effort

By Ryan Bray
RBRAY@CNC.COM

Vicki and Valerie King know a thing or two about humanity.

Last November, the owners of King Jewelers, located at 812 Chief Justice Highway in Cohasset organized a woman build project for a new Habitat For Humanity house in Brockton. The women, all of whom were customers or employees of King, built the house from the ground up, while inside the store a special habitat bracelet titled "Home Sweet Home" was created and sold to help finance the house.

Now with one house under their belts, the sisters are setting their sights on Scituate, where plans are in the works to bring a Habitat house to the community. The jewelry store will stage a number of fundraisers in the coming months in hopes of raising $120,000 for the house, which is expected to cost about $135,000.

"When we found out they were building a house in Scituate, we really wanted to get involved," Valerie said. "We just want to raise as much money as we can."

Former Selectman Richard Lane, a local carpenter by trade, helped the local project committee for Habitat secure a location for a three-bedroom house on a 40,000-square foot parcel of land along Route 3A adjacent to the Scituate High School through a Town Meeting vote in March. The home would be the first Habitat house to be built in town if completed.

Because Habitat for Humanity receives no government funding, the cost to build the homes is raised through private donations, corporate contributions and the support of faith congregations throughout the South Shore. Jim Comeau, construction manager for Habitat, said the organization will look to raise $50,000 privately for the house. Getting assistance from the Community Preservation Committee would come in very handy for the local Habitat committee, which has been working to come up with fund-raising events to help cover construction costs. An article on November's special Town Meeting warrant will request an additional $50,000 in Community Preservation funds be put toward building the house.

A detailed shot of the bracelet that is being sold at King Jewelers to raise money for the Scituate Habitat house.

The new home will be given to a single-income family from Scituate, CPC chairman John Hallin said. In order to qualify, Hallin said families must be willing to invest 400 to 500 hours of their own time in finishing the house through what is known as "sweat equity." The selected family will be held to a $135,000 mortgage to be paid back to Habitat over a 20-year period.

Comeau said the organization is in the process of securing a building permit for the house. Once the permit is secured, Habitat will begin fielding applications from interested families. Comeau said in order to apply for the house, families must attend one of two upcoming informational sessions with Habitat officials.

"We'll explain to them the process and what's expected of them, because they need to know they will be partners with us," Comeau said. "This isn't a hand out, it's a hand up."

King Jewelers' fundraising efforts will begin on Sunday, Oct. 15, where King will host a Children's Fun Run at Central Field on Branch Street. From 1 to 3 p.m., kids will be able to take part in various mini camps hosted by members of the New England Revolution, while food, games and face painting will also be held as part of the festivities. Admission to the event is $10 per person and $25 per family.

"The team did a similar fundraiser for a different cause last year, and over 700 people showed up," Valerie said. "It should be a good way to kick start our fundraising efforts." Valerie said there has also been talk of the team matching the amount of money raised through the event dollar for dollar up to a certain amount.

Valerie said they are also in the process of organizing additional fundraisers for the Habitat house. On Nov. 7, a charity fashion show will be held at the Barker Tavern, where all clothing will be

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you, your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan℠". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you...you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

ADVERTISEMENT

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST...
YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

The first attendee who submits a disposable, non-returnable, copy of their estate planning documents that do not have any of the problems addressed in this article will receive $1,000! Bring your documents to the workshop for a complimentary 12-15 point written analysis.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING...BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

- Clients of Dennis Sullivan & Associates do not qualify, as many of their trusts address each of these issues.
- Any Attorneys and/or Financial Advisors in attendance will be charged a fee of $1,000.

BUSINESS NOTES

Planning specialist

Craig J. Coffey, JD, a senior financial representative with The Bulfinch Group, has been appointed a charitable planning specialist by Philanthropy International and the March of Dimes. The Bulfinch Group is a General Agency of The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America (Guardian), New York, N.Y.

As the charitable planning specialist for the March of Dimes in New England, Coffey will work with present and potential donors and help them focus their planned giving strategies. Special Charitable Planned Giving Seminars will be initiated in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maine.

Craig J. Coffey, JD

Providing planned giving support and resources to a variety of charities and causes, Philanthropy International is a unique national community foundation that identifies and trains professional advisors in the design and effective use of tax-exempt planning solutions. The organization has developed a nationwide network of volunteer planned giving officers working with national and local charities. By serving as liaison, Philanthropy International is able to ensure comprehensive and consistent communication, often resulting in a gift that allows the donor to preserve their wealth for the benefit of their heirs, while converting tax dollars into a benefit for their favorite charity.

March of Dimes was originally established in 1938 by President Franklin Roosevelt with the goal of saving America's youth from Polio. Roosevelt's premise was that people can solve any problem if they work together. He created a partnership of volunteers and researchers and within 17 years, the Salk vaccine was developed and the threat of Polio was tremendously lessened.

Today the March of Dimes is a national voluntary health agency whose mission is to improve the health of babies by preventing birth defects, premature birth and infant mortality. The March of Dimes funds programs for research, community services, education and advocacy to save babies. In 2003 the organization launched a campaign to address the increasing rate of premature birth.

By partnering with Philanthropy International and insurance and investment institutions such as The Guardian, the March of Dimes can uniquely identify donors who may be interested in learning more about planned giving strategies. Coffey will be one of 50 representatives nationwide who have been chosen to bring this unique message of giving to donors in a simple, comfortable seminar format.

Top lawyer recognized

Joel R. Carpenter, a partner at Sullivan & Worcester LLP's Boston office, was recently named one of "The Best Lawyers in America" for 2007. It is the nation's leading guide to top attorneys and will be published in late fall.

Selection was based on peer performance reviews that included 1.8 million confidential evaluations and thousands of interviews. The annual publication is considered one of the most reliable, unbiased sources of legal referrals in the country.

"Sullivan & Worcester has some of the most impressive legal talent on the East Coast, and we're pleased that Joel Carpenter has been recognized with this prestigious designation," said Dianne C. Hertneky, chief operating officer. "Our partners share a wide range of experience ranging from corporate finance and securities to trusts and labor law – we find our ability to provide this comprehensive expertise enables us to work with our clients in positioning them for future growth and expansion."

Joel R. Carpenter

Carpenter is co-managing partner and co-chairman of the tax department. He is experienced in tax structuring of business arrangements using partnerships, limited liability companies and Subchapter S corporations. He advises on the tax structuring of merger and acquisition transactions, and has been involved with hedge fund offerings and the financing of emerging companies.

Barker Tavern will also be the site of a dinner gala on Jan. 27, where again all benefits will go to support the Scituate Habitat house. Valerie said while she and Vicki are putting in a lot of legwork behind the events, they have received a great deal of support from residents in town.

"The community has really rallied around us," she said. "We just jump into whatever causes move us. It's our way of trying to stay connected to the community."

Movie review

Long live 'The Queen'

"The Queen" (A)

By: James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

If you'd like to see the best performance by an actress so far this year, see "The Queen." She's a pip.

Actually, Helen Mirren, best actress award-winner at the Venice Film Festival, is the pip. Directed by the great English filmmaker Stephen Frears ("Dangerous Liaisons," "High Fidelity") and written by Peter Morgan ("The Last King of Scotland"), "The Queen," is a gripping, fact-based drama about the Royal Family's mishandling of the death of Princess Diana and newly anointed Prime Minister Tony Blair's careful attempt to guide Her Majesty to the path of righteousness.

It begins in 1997 in the weeks prior to the Princess' horrific accident in Paris in a car she shared with a French driver, a bodyguard and her lover Dodi Fayed. Young turk and Labor party member Blair (Michael Sheen of "Underworld: Evolution") has just been elected in a landslide after years of rule by Margaret Thatcher and her gang of Tories.

Queen Elizabeth II, who was crowned in 1953, has been in power almost since girlhood. She is a symbol of Great Britain and although the Queen Mum (veteran Sylvia Syms) is a beloved figure, Elizabeth is the true mother of her country.

Decked out in an oversized, ill-advised pair of plastic eyeglasses and a platinum blonde wig that makes her bear a striking resemblance to Elizabeth and George Washington, Mirren triumphs as the surprisingly athletic monarch in a muddle.

Regal, peremptory, raised on pomp and protocol and used to getting her way, her Elizabeth experienced her annus horribilis in 1992, but things have not gotten better. Prince Charles (a sympathetic, if cringing Alex Jennings) and Princess Diana (seen in interviews and news footage) have divorced. Diana is a loose cannon and no longer an "HRH," as the Queen puts it.

She informs Blair at their meeting that he is her 10th Prime Minister and that her first was — gulp — Winston Churchill. Her husband Prince Philip (a hilariously mean-spirited James Cromwell) declares Diana "more annoying dead than alive" and encourages the Queen's decision to play down her death. He takes Diana's sons, who are barely seen in the film, out stalking a stag at Balmoral in Scotland. Later, he will declare Diana's pallbearers "a chorus line of soap stars and homosexuals."

Meanwhile, hordes of British mourners ring Buckingham Palace, leaving acres of flowers and other mementos, some of them notes damning the House of Windsor for its indifference. Public opinion is turning against the Queen and the monarchy.

What Frears, Mirren and Morgan have done is use real events, and a considerable amount of genuine footage, as a backdrop to the story of the Queen's struggle with her office and herself.

Labor Party icon Blair, someone you would not expect to support the Royal Family, coins the term "the People's Princess" and comes across as a wise and sympathetic ally of the Queen. According to his wife Cheri (a marvelous Helen McCrory), it's because he sees his mother in Elizabeth.

Queen Elizabeth II (Helen Mirren) is lost in thought while trying to keep up with world events.

But this triumph belongs to Mirren, who played Elizabeth I in a 2005 TV production. I confess I have adored her work for years. 2006 is shaping up as quite a year for queens with "Marie Antoinette" also in the line-up.

Here's a suggestion for a future movie weekend: Rent "Elizabeth," "Mrs. Brown" and "The Queen" and watch three of the greatest leading ladies our time — Cate Blanchett, Judi Dench and Mirren — prove that it's good to be the Queen.

Rated PG-13. "The Queen" contains profanity.

HONORING THOSE WHO SERVE

The new Veteran's Park memorial, which will honor those Cohasset residents who served in Korea, Vietnam, the Gulf War, and the Global War on Terrorism, will be recessed into the ground, so as not to block the gorgeous view of the harbor.

New veterans' memorial gears up for dedication

To be completed in time for Nov. 11

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee strives to ensure those who have served our country in the armed forces are always remembered by their hometown. One of its latest endeavors is currently under construction at Veteran's Park, as a new monument is being erected to honor those who have served the country in its most recent wars.

On Veterans Day, Saturday Nov. 11, at 1 p.m., the new monument, which will list the names of those Cohasset residents who have served or are currently serving in the Korean War, Vietnam War, the Gulf War, or the War on Terror, will be formally dedicated by the town.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt has been leading the effort to add the monument to the park. He explained his committee has memorial squares dedicated to those veterans who paid the ultimate price at various intersections all over town, as well as dedicated roads and parks. There is also a monument to the Gold Star Mothers who have lost their sons in battle, and the honor rolls at Veteran's Park for World War I, the Mexican Expedition and World War II. However, there has been nothing built for those residents — almost 500 since World War II —who have fought in the country's most recent conflicts, such as Pratt's son Christopher who returned last week from a tour in Iraq.

To that end, the committee decided expanding Veteran's Park would be a great idea, and the area has now been transformed to feature the centrally located monument. Trees were removed, as were the bushes surrounding the park. The street will be repaved by the end of this week and new sidewalks have been installed for

High school makes MCAS top 10 list

Grade 10 Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System scores are in, and Cohasset's students have done well.

At the Oct. 4 School Committee meeting, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh explained the grade 10 scores were released early and separately from all other testing grades for the first time this year. "Probably one reason is that there were very positive results across the state," she said.

Walsh reported 100 percent of Cohasset's students passed their English language arts and mathematics MCAS tests with 93 percent scoring in the Advanced and Proficient categories.

Walsh said taking a look at Cohasset's ranking in the Boston Globe, it was listed at number 14 out of roughly 280 in grade 10 English language arts with the 92 students tested receiving a score of 92 percent and number 10 in mathematics with the 92 students scoring 93 percent. The schools were ranked by adding the percentage of students who scored either "Advanced" or "Proficient" in English and math with 100 as the highest possible score.

The top 10 schools for grade 10 English, according to the Boston Globe,

Breaking tradition?

Election schedule change is floated

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen would like a little more time before it decides to place an article on the Town Meeting Warrant that could change when the Annual Town Election is held. While the draft article was discussed at its Oct. 2 meeting, the board put off taking a vote until Oct. 16 to allow more time to think about it.

The article was drafted as a result of the spring override election. At one of its meetings shortly after the votes were tallied May 6, Selectman Rob Spofford mentioned to the board some residents — namely those in support of the overrides, neither of which passed — told him they felt having two elections hurt voter turnout.

The candidate election was held the week after Town Meeting on April 8 and the override election was held roughly one month later on May 6. Some 48 percent or 2,432 of the town's 5,099 registered voters went to the polls to make their voices heard during the candidate election. The following month, at 66.2 percent, the turnout was record-breaking for an override election.

Police Beat

Little girl left alone in locked car for upwards of 45 minutes

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At about 11 a.m., last Thursday (Oct. 5), dispatch received a call from a concerned citizen about a child left in a car in a parking lot off Chief Justice Cushing Highway near the medical building. When the officer arrived, the caller pointed out the little girl, who turned out to be 5 years old, sitting inside a locked car, with the windows up.

The witness had waited about 25 minutes before calling police, Chief James Hussey said. The police officer could not talk the little girl into opening the door, so the fire department was called and the paramedics did get the girl to unlock the door, Hussey said. The fire department was needed to be on hand incase a forcible entry was required. But in the meantime, the paramedic talked to the little girl and convinced her it was OK to unlock the door.

Hussey said police eventually did locate the girl's mother inside one of the office buildings. She claimed she had left an older daughter in charge and the girl probably walked away for a few moments. However, the other daughter never turned up. Police estimate the child was left alone in the car for at least 45 minutes.

Hussey said police have filed a report with the Department of Social Services so that agency can evaluate the family situation and make sure that proper child care is being provided. He said the mother of the girl is in her 40s and a Weymouth resident.

"We never want to see a situation when a child is left to fend for itself – it is not a healthy situation," he said.

Border collies

The two border collies the John Dean family was allowed to keep got into trouble last week.

"These collies were puppies months ago when the decision was made to allow the Deans to keep them," Chief James Hussey said.

Police received a report on Oct. 3 about the two border collies barking at and chasing people in Whitney Woods. After that report, Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy and a police sergeant went to the Dean residence and issued a verbal order of dog restraint on the two collies.

John Dean acknowledged the order, according to the police log.

Then on Thursday (Oct. 5), a woman reported she had also been menaced by the dogs that previous Tuesday at Whitney Woods and claimed she had been bitten.

Chief James Hussey said the police are waiting for the hospital reports to see if it was a dog bite and then would move forward with taking further action.

"These two dogs were apparently not on a leash or under the owner's control," Hussey said.

John and Mia Dean had numerous adult border collies and puppies, which have been placed in new homes. The town conducted a dog hearing last spring following complaints from residents who had been threatened and/or bitten by the some of the adult dogs. The Deans were allowed to keep two of the then puppies.

ID theft

A resident reported to police last week she had received a credit card bill for UPS delivery charges she never incurred. Earlier, the resident received a letter from UPS welcoming her to the service and she did not think much about it. Then came a UPS invoice for $996 with a notation not to pay the bill.

A few weeks later the resident received a credit card bill for the charges.

"As it turned out, the credit card had already paid the bill," Chief James Hussey said.

He explained someone likely got a hold of the resident's social security number or other information and set up an account in her name. He said police detectives are investigating.

Hussey stressed people must shred any personal papers, receipts or documents when discarding them so they do not fall into the hands of criminals.

"Unfortunately there are people out there who are smart at trying to defraud us," he said.

Stolen car

Scituate police are investigating a car theft. The vehicle that was stolen from Scituate was driven into a utility pole on North Main Street in Cohasset and abandoned. When Cohasset police arrived at the scene at about 2 a.m., Saturday (Oct. 6), the operator of the vehicle was nowhere to be found. The car was registered to Scituate; Cohasset police contacted the owner of the car; he came to the Cohasset station and reported he had left his keys in the car, which was taken from the driveway of his home.

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Mike Dorion, 15, of Cohasset, checks out one of more than 20 bikes that were on display outside the police station on "unclaimed bike day" Saturday. Police were hoping the bikes' rightful owners would drop by and claim some of the bicycles that had been either lost or stolen over the past two years. Chief James Hussey said a couple of bikes were returned to owners Saturday. Residents who have lost a bicycle may still call the police or stop by and take a look, he said. The police can be reached at 781-383-1055.

MVA at stop

At about noon, Sunday (Oct. 7), several callers reported an accident at the four-way stop at N. Main Street, Forest Avenue and lower King Street.

Police said a 2004 Chevrolet stopped at lower King Street and then entered the intersection when a 1997 Lexus traveling on N. Main Street from the direction of the village struck it.

The Lexus crashed into the passenger side door of the Chevy, police said.

There were no reported injuries. The driver of the Lexus was cited for failure to use caution in an intersection.

Mirror hit

A school bus driver traveling along Pond Street at about 2:15 p.m. Monday (Oct. 2) apparently hit the mirror of a parked car, but did not realize what had occurred.

Chief James Hussey said a witness saw the incident and reported it. The bus driver thought she had hit a branch.

The bus driver was notified and came to the station after dropping the schoolchildren off and filed a report, he said.

Bent guardrail

Police received a complaint about a bent guardrail on King Street that was obstructing the walkway. Chief James Hussey said the information was provided to the DPW that added it to its list of projects.

Ducks killed

Last Friday morning on Smith Place, two dogs got into a duck pen and killed several pet ducks and injured others. The dogs' owner, who had reported the dogs had gotten away, is working with the owner of the ducks to make restitution, police said. Chief Hussey said the dogs were licensed and there had been no prior complaints. However, he reiterated residents must keep their dogs on a leash or under their control at all times.

Math MCAS puts Cohasset on top 10 list were Dover-Sherborn Regional, Wayland Public Schools, Weston Public Schools, Acton-Boxborough Regional, Mystic Valley Regional Charter in Malden, Harvard Public Schools, Hamilton-Wenham Regional, Medfield Public Schools, Concord-Carlisle Regional and Millis Public Schools.

The top 10 schools for grade 10 mathematics were, Boston Collegiate Charter, Dover-Sherborne Regional, Media and Technology Charter in Boston, Wayland Public Schools, Weston Public Schools, Nauset Regional in Orleans, Medfield Public Schools, West Bridgewater Public Schools, Prospect Hill Academy Charter in Somerville and Cohasset.

There were other South Shore towns that also faired well in the Globe's ranking system. Hingham Public Schools were ranked at number 19 for English with its 278 students achieving a score of 92 percent. For math, Hingham was also ranked at number 19 with a score of 90 percent.

In Norwell, its strong suit is math, as it was ranked number 16 with its 148 students receiving a score of 91 percent. Norwell was placed at number 35 for English language arts with a score of 90 percent.

Scituate Public Schools did better on its math scores as well, as it was ranked number 38 with its 238 students receiving a score of 87 percent. Scituate was ranked 46 in English language arts with a score of 88 percent.

Marshfield and Hanover took the 56 and 57 spots respectively, for English language arts. Marshfield's 317 students scored 87 percent and Hanover's 177 students also scored 87 percent. Marshfield came in at number 72 for math with a score of 82 percent and Hanover came in at number 107 with a score of 78 percent.

Overall, Walsh said the district is very happy with its grade 10 scores. "I think we can be very pleased, our students have done a fantastic job," she said.

Supt. Denise Walsh was slated to receive MCAS scores for all other grades Oct. 16. Scores will be presented at an upcoming School Committee meeting.

Bus fees hardship to some families in more ways than one

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Some parents are not happy with the implementation of bus fees at the schools. While many understand the hardship currently facing the schools, there is also a feeling in the community that the system is not fair.

This year, bus fees were imposed for any student in grades kindergarten through six whose residence is two miles or less from the school they attend. Fees were imposed for all children in grades seven through 12. In accordance with the Massachusetts School Transportation Statue, any child in grades kindergarten through six whose residence is greater than two miles from the school has their transportation funded via the school budget.

Beechwood Street residents Caroline and Christopher Wilson came before the School Committee Oct. 4 to discuss the fees. "Not everyone in Cohasset is a millionaire. We both work," said Caroline Wilson, adding she feels because her family lives on the west side of Route 3A, transportation should be provided because her son, who is now deemed a "walker" for living within two miles of the school, would have to cross a state highway to get to Osgood.

Christopher Wilson added he sees the school bus pass his home twice to pick up children who are riding for free a little farther down the street. "It should be everyone gets charged who gets on a bus. I can't believe this even passed," he said.

Christopher Wilson said he feels asking children to cross a state highway to get to school is very unsafe.

However, the School Committee reiterated the state does have transportation mandates, which requires school districts bus students in grades kindergarten through six who live two miles away or more.

Christopher Wilson said he feels asking children to cross a state highway to get to school is very unsafe. He added the lack of sidewalks in town and the arrival of the train will only add to the amount of danger children could face walking to school. He said currently, if his son who is 7 years old walked to school on the sidewalks, he would have to cross the train tracks twice and he would have to walk 2.8 miles. If he took the direct route without sidewalks, he would have to walk along Route 3A. "Either way, it would be at least a 45-minute walk, and that's a lot of time for a 7-year-old to be alone without any supervision," he said. This leaves parents without any other choice but to either drive their children themselves or pay to use the bus.

"A lot of assumptions were made and it's just not right," said Caroline Wilson of the School Committee's implementing the fees. In addition, she said her son participates in after-school programs two days per week, which is encouraged by the school, and she is still paying for her son to ride the bus on those days even though he isn't.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the reason the bus fees were implemented were to help cover transportation costs. She said the fiscal 2007 budget was cut after the failed override and it was impossible to live within the money given, so the district had to implement fees in order to make ends meet.

School Committee member Rick Flynn said when the decision was made, it was a choice between either implementing fees or losing three teachers. "We had to choose the lesser of two evils," he said.

The School Committee said it would look into whether certain families would be exempt from paying the fees due to hazardous walking conditions, including crossing the train tracks or crossing Route 3A.

School goals set the bar high

Results should score with voters, committee says

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee unanimously adopted a set of goals at its Oct. 4 meeting, which will have it reaching for excellence over the next five years.

While proper funding will be required to make this vision a reality, the committee is optimistic the benefits from its new plan will be twofold: having a set course for the future that will allow voters to clearly see the progress being made will help gain the trust necessary to pass overrides, and students will continue to be driven toward achieving their personal best.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz has been a driving force behind setting quantifiable goals for the district. He said he would like to see Cohasset's students ranked within the top 10 in the state and within the top 100 in the nation. "I think the community is really behind it, including the parents of current students and the older people who remember how the school system used to be," he said. Slanetz added if the schools need to ask voters for funding in the future, there will now be a document in place that serves as a plan and can adequately explain where funding is needed and why.

There are four 5-year district goals, which the committee voted to approve. They are: Challenge all students to proficiency and beyond, function as a professional learning community and quantify/report everything, and close achievement gaps where they exist. There is also a category for non-academic goals.

When it comes to student proficiency, the School Committee would like to see students meeting the highest level of standards in math, reading and writing. All students should be challenged to their highest aptitude. In order to function as a professional learning community, teachers should be included in the decision-making process when it comes to making changes that affect their role in the school. In addition, there should be more focus placed on parent and teacher partnerships, treating students more like adults to give them a voice in decisions that impact their lives and a more global emphasis in the schools.

To close achievement gaps the committee would like to see improvement on aptitude tests, an increase in the number of students attending Ivy League colleges, an increase in SAT scores, increases in scholarships and more co-curricular competitions where students excel. Non-academic goals include maintaining a commitment to accountability and open books, proactively communicating through the local media, including the Mariner, combining the town and school accounting software systems and improve financial reporting and forecasting.

School Committee member Jamie Williams said while the district has a Strategic Plan and School Improvement Plans at each of the schools, having a set of goals voted on by the School Committee will help it during budget season.

Member Rick Flynn said clearly the goals will require additional funding, and after the defeat of the override this spring, he wasn't sure voters would be willing to support the goals monetarily. "Should we poll people? Are we setting ourselves up for disappointment in the spring?" he asked.

Flynn also said some of the goals seem like they are a "reach" such as increasing SAT Scores by 100 points over the next five years. "But if we challenge ourselves in a positive way, if we say we have a great system but it can be better, maybe people will get excited," he said. Flynn said perhaps the goals focus too much on raising test scores, but he said challenging the district to achieve more is positive and can help generate community support.

Slanetz said in his opinion, if the district can change its culture to be a more intellectual environment where it has large participation on the debate team and students are encouraged to perform to high standards in a number of disciplines, he believes test scores will follow.

Parent Lucia Flibotte, 27 Summer St., who was on The Committee to Support Cohasset, which campaigned in support of the override, said one goal she feels the School Committee should set for itself is teaching the town what it takes to achieve the goals and why reaching the goals is necessary. During the override campaign, "You didn't do a good job of letting people know," why the money was needed and what it was needed for, she said. "And the Mariner doesn't help. All it does is distort the truth… and there we were jumping through hoops.

"We know why we lost. A lot of families voted no."

Flibotte added many of the families with seniors in the schools voted against the override, as did senior citizens. "I have worked on four overrides, and we have never lost by 800 votes. This town has never said no."

Slanetz said he doesn't feel as if the School Committee had a unified set of goals during the override campaign, which made it very difficult to articulate why funding was needed. He said the board had many different agendas rather than one vision, so there was no united front going forward to advocate for the override. He said with these goals in place, he believes the voters will have a better understanding of where the district's priorities are and be more willing to fund them.

High school senior Ryan Ingram is handed a Certificate of Academic Excellence by Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh at the School Committee's Oct. 3 meeting. School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy and Cohasset Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini congratulated Ryan as well.

Student recognized for academic achievement

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For a senior in high school, Ryan Ingram has more accomplishments under her belt than many of her peers. The Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents has recognized Ryan's achievements and recently awarded her with a Certificate of Academic Excellence. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh presented Ryan with the certificate at the Oct. 3 School Committee meeting, which Ryan's proud parents Stephen and Linda Ingram attended.

The superintendent is the educational leader in every community, and therefore the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents has designed an award for academic excellence, which is presented to a student whom the superintendent has chosen. The award is given to high school seniors who have distinguished themselves in the pursuit of excellence during their high school careers.

Cohasset Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini was on hand during the presentation and spoke to Ryan's achievements to date. "Ryan is quite an accomplished student, so much so that I need notes to make you aware of her many accomplishments that have helped her earn this recognition," quipped Antolini.

"Ryan is a senior and currently is ranked first in her class. She is an AP scholar with distinction, scoring fives on each of the four tests she has taken. She is currently enrolled in three additional AP level courses. Ryan is a John and Abigail Adams Scholar, National Merit Semi-Finalist, Member of the National Honor Society, the recipient of the Harvard Book Award, Massachusetts Foreign Language Association award for French, editor of the Cohasset Arts magazine, an accomplished artist and writer with works published in school magazines and in 'Teen Ink.' She is also a graduate of the National Junior Leaders Conference, is an Ambassador of Peace participant, member of the social awareness organization, a gymnast who placed at the State Gymnastics Championships, French exchange participant, and a delegate of the International Youth Democracy Summit," he said.

In her "spare time" Antolini said Ingram volunteers at a nursing home and tutors other students. She is interested in public policy studies and has applied early decision to Duke University.

'TIS THE SEASON

Hey Cohasset, how is everyone doing? The weather predicted for now and this weekend shows us that Fall is definitely here as it is getting chilly. The leaves are so pretty to look at but I don't want the cold weather to come. Anyone who is looking for some Pumpkins for their home could go to Wheelwright Park on North Main Street, take a hayride and go for a walk with the family through the park to admire the leaves etc. Then, walk through the patch of pumpkins that are there and pick your favorites and help support the Appalachia Service Project (ASP.) For more information, go to www.cohassetasp.org.

RESIDENT HONORED

Here is some wonderful news about Cohasset resident Emily Brown. Boys & Girls Clubs of Boston 's Club in Roxbury has undergone an expansion and renovation, and celebrated its grand reopening as the Yawkey Club of Roxbury on Sept. 16th at an event called "Spirit of Roxbury."

Emily, who is on the Club Advisory Board, was recognized with a presentation at the event and she and her husband John Brown were honored with the naming of the Social Recreation Room for their support of the Roxbury Club's renovation and for their family's friendship to the Club's staff and members. This was great news to receive, thank you for the work and support Emily and John.

'FLAT STANLEY'

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza hosts Scott Nash on Sat. Oct. 21 at 10 a.m.. Nash is the illustrator for the brand-new picture book adaptation of Jeff Brown's classic, "Flat Stanley". Nash will read this delightful book about an ordinary boy with an extraordinary problem. He's four feet tall, about a foot wide . . . oh, and half an inch thick. Flat is fun for a while, but like most novelties, the allure fades and Stanley wants to be a normal boy again. Many schoolchildren know Stanley Lambchop, and while he is a new discovery for early elementary pupils, high school students fondly remember him.

The pictures are vivid, and the story is classic. In addition to reading the story, Scott will do a drawing demonstration, and there will be a "Flat Stanley" activity. Scott Nash has taught illustration and graphic design at the Art Institute of Boston, Northeastern University and Boston University. This is a free event. If you are unable to attend and would like to order a personalized and/or signed copy, please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com

OPEN WEDNESDAYS

Fantastic news for everyone who enjoys time at the library. The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is now open Wednesdays. The new hours are: Monday, Tuesday, Thursday 10.a.m.-8p.m. Wednesday, Friday 10a.m.-5p.m. Saturday 9a.m.-5p.m. Sunday 2 -5p.m. (to Memorial Day Weekend.)

ART CENTER

South Shore Art Center announces the annual meeting of the corporation, Tuesday, Oct. 17, at 7 p.m., in the Bancroft Gallery. All members are invited to attend.

The Shirley Neer prize for outstanding children's art instructor will be awarded to Patrice Kelley of Hanover. Volunteer of the Year awards will be given to David Avery of Marshfield and Libby Allard of Cohasset.

Not much news to report this week. Make sure to send all your news and info in especially as the Fall moves forward and Halloween is coming. Events, photos, recognition and more is welcome. Get it in to me no later than Tuesdays no later than 5:00 pm.

Cohasset Cultural Council seeks funding proposals

A deadline of Oct. 15 has been set for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to Council spokesperson, Diane Kennedy, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset, including exhibits, festivals, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

The Cohasset Council will also entertain funding proposals from schools and youth groups through the PASS Program, a ticket subsidy program for school-aged children.

The Cohasset Council is part of a grass-roots network of 329 local councils that serve every city and town in the state. The program is the largest and most decentralized one of its kind in the United States. The state legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, which then allocates funds to each local council. This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $2,500 in grants.

Contact Diane Kennedy, Cohasset Cultural Council chair at 781-383-1304 or devline@juno.com for specific guidelines and information. Application forms and information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available at www.mass-culture.org/lccpublic.asp.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan℠". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you... you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

The first attendee who submits a disposable, non-returnable, copy of their estate planning documents that do not have any of the problems addressed in this article will receive $1,000! Bring your documents to the workshop for a complimentary 12-15 point written analysis.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING...BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

- Clients of Dennis Sullivan & Associates do not qualify, as many of their trusts address each of these issues.
- Any Attorneys and/or Financial Advisors in attendance will be charged a fee of $1,000.

South Shore to come alive with the 'Sound of Music'

Curtain rises Oct. 20 in Hingham

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Hingham Civic Music Theatre's spirited and moving presentation of "The Sound of Music" is sure to be an audience-pleaser, keeping both children and adults thoroughly entertained throughout the entire show.

"I think our audiences will gladly allow us to whisk them away to the beautiful Austrian Alps for a few hours and entertain them with some of the most talented theater people on the South Shore," said Director William Boyer. "The music has been especially endearing over the past 50 years, and the cast has such fun with it, naturally translating to the audience the bright and upbeat songs that make this musical one of the most loved ever."

"The Sound of Music" had the largest advance sales in the history of Broadway.

"The music is some of the best written by Rodgers & Hammerstein, especially since it shows the many facets of a child's life through the Von Trapp children, particularly the young love between Rolf and Liesl ('Sixteen Going on Seventeen') and the real family togetherness that Maria brings to the Von Trapps," said Boyer. "This is one of Rodgers and Hammerstein's most beloved shows because its story still relates to many issues in our world today."

The talented cast includes Michael Duarte of Taunton as Captain Von Trapp and Ann McCoy of Hingham as Maria.

This is McCoy's second role with HCMT after playing Reno Sweeney in "Anything Goes." A talented soprano, she has appeared in numerous productions at the Company Theater, Turtle Lane Playhouse, and elsewhere. Roles she has played in other shows range from Betty Blake in "Will Rogers Follies" to Eva Perone in "Evita."

McCoy is especially enthusiastic about playing Maria. "I have always wanted to play this role," she said. "This was one of my all-time favorite movies growing up, and I believe it is one of the main reasons I love theater and musicals so much. This is such a classic, special show and this cast is so talented and so much fun that I think it will be a very special production, which I hope people won't miss. The kids are wonderful, especially Gretyl, who I think is as cute as the Gretyl in the movie!"

"I think our audiences will gladly allow us to whisk them away to the beautiful Austrian Alps for a few hours and entertain them with some of the most talented theater people on the South Shore."
— William Boyer, director

This is Duarte's 31st year in musical comedy, oratorio, and opera performance in the Greater Boston area. This is his third time playing the Captain, one of his favorite roles, although it's his first time with HCMT. "It's a role I enjoy because he's not a one-dimensional character," Duarte said. "At the beginning of the story, the Captain is cold and distant, running away from his home and family because of his grief over losing his wife.

"But during the show, as he begins to fall in love with Maria, he changes and becomes more fatherly and loving," Duarte said. "This gives me the opportunity to play both sides of one character."

Duarte has performed with numerous community and professional theater groups and studied voice with the late Ellalou Dimmock and Richard Cassilly.

This seasoned performer has found HCMT to be very warm and welcoming. "The cast and crew have been very friendly and supportive, making me feel like a long-time member of the group," he said. "Quite often in community theater groups a 'new guy,' although accepted, doesn't have the sense that he is a part of the production family. This is not the case with HCMT, and I would welcome the opportunity to perform with the group again if given the chance."

Children from Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, and Weymouth are cast in the roles of the seven Von Trapp children. "They're all stars," Boyer said with a smile.

Mary Kate Leonard, 10, of Hingham plays Marta, and she enjoys listening to the nuns and Maria sing. "I love all the singing and the music," she said. "Everyone has a really great voice."

Leah Harlow, a junior at Hingham High School, recalls visiting the Von Trapp Lodge in Vermont while vacationing with her family as a child. "It's one of those classic movies where everyone knows the music," she said. She is pleased to be playing Liesl because she has always liked the song "Sixteen Going on Seventeen." In fact, that's what she sang when she auditioned for "Clean Sweep," an original play by drama director John Higgins, at the Middle School three years ago. "I thought it would be fun to actually sing it on stage," Leah said.

"'The Sound of Music' is a classic, with some good, strong songs," said Zachary Prescott, 10, of Weymouth, who plays Kurt. "He's very serious and shy, but nice." This is his first time performing in a play. "It was something fun for me to do after school," he said with a grin.

Logan Pratt, who attends Cohasset Middle School, plays another Von Trapp child. "This has always been one of my favorite plays," she said. "I love the characters, songs, and music. It's a play that everyone is familiar with and loves."

Boyer praised Music Director Mark Bono for being "at the top of the music game. The cast respects and loves him beyond words," he said. "Choreographer Liz Tronni makes learning the dances so much fun that it isn't like work at all."

Tronni has found working on this classic musical "a wonderful experience. I have done most of my work with the children and Ann McCoy (Maria), and they are a delight," she said. "This is such a talented cast. They are full of life and energy."

Show dates are Oct. 20, 21, and 22 and Oct. 27, 28, and 29 in Sanborn Auditorium at Town Hall. Friday and Saturday performances are at 7:30 p.m. The Sunday shows are at 2 p.m.

Call the ticket hotline at (781) 837-1499 for tickets. For group sales, call (781) 749-0083. Tickets are $13 for students and seniors and $16 general admission. There is a group rate of $12 per ticket for 10 or more.

"We invite the entire South Shore community and beyond to come see our production of 'The Sound of Music'," Boyer said. "It will chase away all of the day's blues, worries, and concerns and transport the audience to a few hours of upbeat and true family fun."

Tuning Up for "The Sound of Music" is Hingham Civic Music Theatre's Family Von Trapp. The hit Rodgers & Hammerstein musical will play on Oct. 20-22and Oct. 27-29. Maria, played by Hingham's Ann McCoy, and Captain Von Trapp, played by Taunton's Mike Duarte, are surrounded by their children, from left, Scituate's Will McDonald as Friedrich; Hingham's Leigh Harlow as Leisl; Cohasset's Betsy Crawford as Brigitta; Weymouth's ZacPrescott as Kurt; Cohasset's Logan Pratt as Louisa; Hingham's Mary Kate Leonard as Marta; and Cohasset's Madison Pratt as Gretl.

Good family entertainment

"The Sound of Music" is an ideal show to introduce children to musical theater.

The movie version, featuring Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer, debuted in 1965.

Now, Hingham Civic Music Theatre is presenting the musical live on Town Hall's Sanborn Auditorium stage, Oct. 20-22 and Oct. 27-29.

The story line revolves around Maria, a lively young novice who is asked to leave the abbey when the Reverend Mother realizes that a nunnery is not the place for such a spirited young woman.

Maria subsequently takes a job as governess for the seven children of a widowed retired Austrian Naval officer and his seven children. Despite some challenges, the children – and their father — come to love Maria, especially when she brings music into their lives.

Seasoned actor Michael Duarte, who plays Captain Von Trapp in the upcoming HCMT production, points out that most youngsters have a chance to learn songs like "Do-Re-Mi" and "The Lonely Goatherd" while in school music classes.

"My experience is that they become excited about hearing and seeing a song that they know being performed live on stage," Duarte said. "The show is also good family entertainment, which gives us a glimpse of history that most folks under the age of 50 might not be aware of."

The talented cast and production team make for a fine and fun-filled production. "Parents who are looking for family-oriented activities should give this show a try," Duarte said.

At CVS/pharmacy, we put a lot more into the communities we serve than a store. Like achievement, through our continuing work with Special Olympics. Confidence, with our hitting clinics for disabled children, in partnership with the Red Sox. And support, with things like our CVS/pharmacy Charity Classic golf tournament, which has raised millions of dollars for hundreds of family and children's charities. We do all this because every community that we serve is also a community where we live. This is our home. And home is always where your heart is.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2007 observances.

The effort, which Selectmen have unanimously endorsed, would result in upwards of 200 American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags would sell for $20 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces.

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the pos tat 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

New veterans memorial gears up for dedication

easy pedestrian access to the park.

The monument is circular and made of the same stone used to make the World War I and II honor rolls, and is sunken into the ground. "We didn't want to block the view," of the harbor, said Pratt. The circle has a diameter of 28 feet, and is 16 inches tall from the outside and 22 inches tall on the inside. There will be a sloped walkway to bring visitors down into the center of the circle.

On the inside of the circle will be the names of the town's war veterans on beveled granite, with another plaque below the names indicating the war in which the residents served. "We will also have about 10 blank tablets, because unfortunately, it will allow us more space to add names to in the future," he said. Pratt added there will also be a flagpole located in the center of the circle. Outside the monument, there will be grass and a walkway made of bluestone pavers.

Tutela Engineering was hired for the project, and its confirmation the land was appropriate to build on was critical. Pratt explained in 1963, the town built the new police and fire station at is current location on Elm Street, and in 1964 the former fire station — which was built on the land at the current Veteran's Park — was torn down, as it was no longer needed. Pratt said it was very important to ensure there was nothing under the ground, which might be hazardous once dug up.

Pratt said ever since the demolition of the former fire headquarters, the park has been dedicated to veterans. "In 1965, one of the garden clubs put the rock in place on the ground," he said, referring to the large rock, which has a plaque indicating the park's name. In 1969, the Veterans Memorial Committee built up the bluestone terrace, which the rock now sits upon, as well as the memorial wall behind it.

In 2000, some World War II veterans began raising money for the honor roll walls, which currently stand and were completed in 2002. Since then, no work has been done on the site.

The project is being completed by St. John Masonry, and will cost roughly $200,000 to complete, $60,000 of which was given by the Community Preservation Committee. The rest of the funds have come from private donations. "We have some big donors and some construction companies have donated material," said Pratt, adding currently, his committee is roughly $30,000 short, but he is optimistic the funding will come through.

The project has been progressing very quickly, as workers began tearing up the site Sept. 22. Pratt said everything will be complete and ready for the formal dedication on Veterans Day. "We'll get this done and then think of something else to build," he quipped.

Residents interested in contributing financially to the project may send checks made payable to the Veterans Memorial Committee to 42 King Street, Cohasset, attention Glenn Pratt. For more information on the town's veterans, please visit the committee's Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Town Meeting just around the corner

Tax deferral for seniors back on agenda

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It's that time of year again. The town is gearing up for the fall Special Town Meeting, scheduled for Monday, Nov. 13, and a draft Warrant is in the works. For the next few weeks, the Board of Selectmen will be taking up items on the draft Warrant — or Town Meeting agenda — to ensure every topic is discussed prior to the final Warrant being printed.

There are currently 26 articles — or items of business — on the draft Warrant. Selectmen took up some of those items at its Oct. 2 meeting, and will take up some more Oct. 16.

One article up for consideration deals with enacting special legislation, which would change the income limit for residents who wish to defer their taxes. Assistant Assessor Debra Krupczak came before the board to explain the article, and said it was actually passed before, at the fall 2002 Special Town Meeting. "Somehow this article fell through the cracks," she said.

When Town Meeting originally approved the article in 2002, its passage raised the maximum qualifying salary for seniors wishing to defer their taxes, to $50,000. Seniors who opt to defer their taxes must meet age and income requirements. Prior to the vote, the salary requirement had been up to $40,000. Deferred taxes must be paid back, either when the house is sold, or if the resident passes away.

After Town Meeting approved the article, it was required to be sent on to the Legislature, which at that time was working on its own revision to the state requirements. In turn, the state passed a bylaw that did not have the wording Cohasset sought, and Cohasset's bylaw was never passed by the state. Therefore, the town needs Town Meeting approval again to re-file the bill with the state.

This year's Warrant could also ask voters to approve expanding the seawall repair project on the harbor. The area along the seawall is a heavily traversed pedestrian area, and the walkway along the seawall is cracking and is in need of repair for safety reasons. Over the years the seawall itself has also begun falling apart. Repairs were made to the wall in the early 1990s, but the solution was only temporary. Past Town Meetings have appropriated $15,000 to fund preliminary studies of the area; $25,000 to cover preliminary engineering and design costs; and most recently at the 2004 fall Special Town Meeting, $600,000 was appropriated for final engineering, design, and repair costs.

Recently, the state announced a new grant program, which allows towns to apply for funding up to $1.2 million. The town would like to apply for a 50/50 grant in the amount of $600,000, which would extend the scope of the project to encompass the entire harbor. Currently the project is confined to the area on Border Street from Atlantica to the Mill River Marine boatyard.

The Board of Water Commissioners has two articles on the draft Warrant. One deals with Old Road, which is a road that exists only on paper, as it was never constructed. Voters will be asked to approve discontinuing all public rights of passage that may exist over it, so there will be no chance of developing it. Old Road abuts the town's watershed.

The Water Commission's second article would clear up some confusion surrounding an article that was already passed at the 2005 fall Special Town Meeting. However, the article which was passed gave the Water Commission permission to acquire two lots, when the two are actually one lot. The article would only change the wording of the article and would not change the Water Commission's purchase.

The Sewer Commission also has two articles on the draft Town Meeting Warrant. One would ask the town to borrow $1 million to make repairs to the town's sewer system. Currently, there is excessive water coming into the town's sewer system due to infiltration and inflow. In other words, some of the town's sewer pipes have cracks and are allowing water to infiltrate from the inside out, which is putting further stress on the town's wastewater treatment plant.

The money would be used to implement studies, evaluations, investigations, design, permitting and construction of various sewer infrastructure improvements to abate I&I. Funds would be paid back through sewer revenue and/or direct betterment based upon the nature of the improvements.

The Sewer Commission would also like the town to vote favorably to authorize it to acquire temporary and permanent real estate easements within private or common ways for the purpose of laying, constructing, replacing, improving or otherwise operating and maintaining sewer collection pipes, manholes and appurtenant equipment and structures, in connection with the Little Harbor, Atlantic Avenue, Jerusalem Road (Deep Run/Rust Way) Sewer Districts and related sewer expansion projects.

The Board of Selectmen put two articles on the Warrant as well. The first would give the Board of Selectmen the discretion to begin the Annual Town Meeting at a time the board sees fit. Currently, Town Meeting must begin at 10 a.m., and by changing the wording the Board of Selectmen could set the start time at 9:30 a.m. or 11 a.m., or any other time, depending on the circumstances. The second article could potentially ask voters to change the Town Election schedule (see related story).

The Board of Selectmen will take up the rest of the articles on the draft Warrant at its Monday, Oct. 16 meeting. Town Meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

Town Meeting article discussion

The Board of Selectmen will discuss Town Meeting articles at its next meeting, scheduled for Oct. 16. The Special Town Meeting will be held Nov. 13 at 7 p.m.

Articles to be discussed Monday include: Amendments to fiscal 2007 operating budget; union contracts and other salary adjustments; capital improvements budget; Community Preservation Committee; funding for Alternative Energy Committee; Stormwater Management Committee expenses; school department security systems; zoning bylaw amendment (over 55 housing restrictions); zoning bylaw amendment (citizens petition).

Town election calendar may see changes

According to Town Manager Bill Griffin, the town's current bylaw says the Town Election must be within 35 days of the Annual Town Meeting. The bylaw is consistent with the state law that says a town can hold its Town Meeting and Town Election on the same posted Warrant as long as the events take place no more than 35 days apart.

The new bylaw would allow the town to hold its Town Election on any date to be determined by the Board of Selectmen consistent with avoiding multiple elections whenever possible, within the months of March, April or May.

It takes the town roughly five weeks to prepare for an election. Ballots must be printed, and the town must register voters and issue absentee ballots. For those years when an override question is on the table in addition to the candidates, the town must prepare for an election twice. To hold the second election, it costs the town roughly $3,000.

The Warrant for Town Meeting must be posted at least seven days before the Annual Town Meeting. If there is going to be an override question on the ballot, it must also appear on the Warrant. However, the problem with printing the ballots for the override question with the candidate question on it as well, prior to a Town Meeting vote being taken, is that the override can be voted down on the floor of Town Meeting and the ballot question would not be necessary, or the override figure can be changed on the floor of Town Meeting and the ballot question figure would be wrong. By allowing the candidate election to be held at a later date, if an override is on the table, voters will only need to go to the polls once.

"I like the consistency and I almost can't comprehend extending the campaigning."
— Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer

While members of the board seemed to support the idea of looking at changing the town's calendar at the time of the election this spring, some members are no longer as supportive of the idea. Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said in his opinion, things should stay the way they are. "I'm a bit of a traditionalist," he said, adding in the 40 years he's lived in town, the Town Election has always been the week after Town Meeting. "I like the consistency and I almost can't comprehend extending the campaigning," he said, as postponing the candidate election until roughly five weeks after Town Meeting will also prolong the amount of time candidates campaign.

Dormitzer added the town only runs into the scheduling conflict during the years when there is an override vote to be taken. He said while it would save the town money — roughly $3,000 according to Town Clerk Marion Douglas — to have the two elections together, he is not sure the town should change the way it conducts elections.

Selectman Rob Spofford reiterated, when the matter was brought to his attention in the spring, residents said they felt there was a voter turnout issue. "At least that was the perception of the override proponents," he said. Spofford added by having the elections together, it would eliminate the confusion regarding what a person would be voting for, as some people may have been confused about what day they were voting on what issue. He said having the two elections together could potentially draw more voters to the polls as someone who might be interested in voting for the override might vote for a candidate as well, even if they hadn't planned on it and vice versa.

Selectman Fred Koed said he thinks having the candidate's election the week after Town Meeting makes sense. "You have a new budget and new selectmen. This would drag things out. It always seemed to me that the Annual Town Meeting and the election was the same event," he said.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said if the Town Election is pushed back to coincide with an override election, it will set the entire election cycle six weeks out. "We'll all serve six weeks longer," he said. He quipped, "Maybe we should give our salaries back and pay for the second election."

The Board of Selectmen will take the issue up again at its Oct. 16 meeting.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

A sneak peek at fall foliage

On the South Shore, we're just starting to get a taste of what the rest of New England has been privy to for the last couple of weeks – beautiful fall foliage.

While the Berkshires are at peak foliage, especially in northern Berkshire County, the change in color is still coming slowly here in southeastern Massachusetts. According to the latest Fall Foliage Report from the Massachusetts Dept. of Conservation and Recreation, there is a 15-20 percent change overall in the color of leaves. Most of that change is occurring in low-lying wet areas where more than 90 percent of the vegetation is turning colors.

In other words, the foliage is still a work in progress in our neck of the woods. Foliage is expected to reach its peak here next week Oct. 15-21.

What makes the colors of the leaves change? It's really no mystery of act of Mother Nature. There's a scientific explanation for it. The colors are already present in the leaves, but are hidden by green chlorophyll. The warm, sunny days and cool nights of early fall cause the trees to produce a corky substance that blocks the flow of water to the leaves. Without water, the chlorophyll breaks down, revealing the vibrant colors.

Regardless of the scientific explanation, autumn brings visitors from all over to Massachusetts and New England to witness the change of season.

If you're looking for a foliage fix and don't feel like traveling to the Berkshires or further north into Vermont or New Hampshire, there are certainly some options around here as we move into the weekend and into next week. Wompatuck State Park in Hingham and Ames Nowell State Park in Abington have areas turning color. A little further away, Borderland State Park in Easton and Massasoit State Park in East Taunton are also local options.

Beyond the state parks, if you hop in your car, take a trip along Route 24 South and pick up Route 104 to Bridgewater. Continue on Route 104, then Route 106 to Halifax. Route 58 South will take you to North Carver, where you'll see cranberry bogs flooded with pools of crimson berries as the harvest gets underway. From North Carver, continue south on Route 58 to Route 28 East to Route 6 West and the towns of Wareham, Rochester, Marion, and Mattapoisett, where you'll get a good glimpse of nature's color show. Even a car ride on Route 3 North, from Plymouth to Marshfield will yield some spectacular colors, especially in the morning light.

If you're really feeling adventurous and do want to explore what's happening elsewhere across the state or region, here are some tips to consider from foliage experts:

- Make hotel reservations as far in advance as possible; it's a very busy time of year in rural areas and in Boston.
- Try to plan a mid-week trip; you'll find fewer cars on the road.
- Be adventurous and explore the state's back roads. You'll treasure the vistas you find by chance.
- Don't worry about the possibility of missing absolute "peak"; color; you'll find glorious color throughout the fall season. In fact, many visitors enjoy seeing the full spectrum of colors from green to crimson that can be found prior to "peak."
- Plan some time out of your car. There's nothing like a gentle hike, a canoe ride, or a spin on a bicycle to experience the crisp, sunny days. Check out Outdoor Adventures.

But most of all, take some time, especially in the next week, to appreciate the beauty autumn in New England has to offer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Chief Lincoln served with distinction

TO THE EDITOR:

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, and a 1965 graduate of CHS, will retire at the end of October after 37 years of service to our town.

As a young boy, Chief Lincoln developed a keen interest in firefighting and emergency medical services. He even told this writer that against the wishes of his parents, he would sometimes chase fire trucks all over town.

He rose through the ranks as a firefighter, captain and chief for the past 13 years.

While the fire department has had its share of critics over the years, no one has ever challenged the dedication and calm, professional competence of Chief Lincoln even during times when other town departments were in turmoil. His quiet leadership was a welcome balance when other parts of town government were reeling from revelations of alleged misdeeds.

The Cohasset Fire Department personnel have always responded promptly with professionalism and compassion during the many times they have been called to our home. From the very day we moved into Cohasset in July 1985 when there was a serious automobile accident at the end of our driveway to last Thanksgiving day when we had a washing machine fire, Chief Lincoln and his colleagues were absolutely fabulous.

We are very fortunate indeed that Roger Lincoln and his colleagues serve our community with such distinction.

To Roger Lincoln, my wife Molly and I thank you for your service to our town, wish you Godspeed, and wish your retirement to be happy and fulfilling for you and your family.

Wig and Molly Pierson

Health Fair support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Board of Health, I would like to thank all those who made our recent health screening day such a success. Every year we depend on the generosity of community businesses and agencies to provide the services we offer free of charge to all who attend. The Cohasset Rotary Club and Pilgrim Bank's donations supported the cholesterol and glucose screenings that are so popular each year. Our food table was once again full of delicious snacks and coffee from Atlantic Bagel and Deli, Dunkin Donuts and Stop and Shop. Attendees and participants enjoyed taking a break during the day and sitting and visiting with each other while snacking on the complementary "goodies" presented so attractively by our faithful volunteers who help us each year. We couldn't conduct the annual health fair without them!

Many thanks to the following providers for their services:

- Dr. Gerri Goodman of the Nielsen Eye Center for Cataract and Glaucoma Screening
- Health Watch, Inc. for the Cholesterol and Glucose Monitoring
- The Norwell VNA for Osteoporosis Screening
- Dr. Robin Lawrence member of the Cohasset Board of Health provided the Oral Cancer Screening
- Melanoma Education Foundation provided the Skin Analyzer
- Nantasket Therapeutic Massage and Wellness Associates offered Chair Massages
- David Bigley from "All the Best" Natural Foods
- Paula Pozniak – Nutritionist
- Cohasset Medical Hearing Center – Hearing Screening
- Council on Elder Affairs
- Susan Cameron – "Juice Plus"
- Peggy Chapman, RN and Cohasset Board of Health Chairperson provided the Mental Health Screening
- Corinne Cahill, RN and Mary Whitley, RN helped us throughout the day and helped everything run smoothly.

Thanks to all of you and we hope to see you again next year!

Shedding light on special education

COMMENTARY

MAUREEN JERZ

Special education funding is a complicated, much misunderstood and often contentious subject. However, in discussing special education funding we should always be mindful of the fact that behind this funding are families (not cases), who are our neighbors, and some of our community's most vulnerable students. Because of this, I was concerned to read the Sept. 29th article in the Mariner, with its accompanying list of special education placements.

In order to understand special education funding, one must first understand the mechanism by which students are placed in out-of-district placements. Special education law requires that students identified as needing special education services be educated in the "least restrictive environment" (LRE). This means that the law requires that students be educated in their local school districts whenever possible, and that they should only be sent to a more restrictive day or residential out-of-district placement if the local district cannot provide the services they need. In other words, the law works in favor of keeping students in district whenever possible because being schooled in their local community, close to home and with their peers is, most importantly, in the best interest of the child, and is often the less expensive option if appropriate services can be provided. There are very few families who, if given the option, would not prefer to have their child educated locally. However, families are often forced to make the difficult and painful decision to send their child to an out-of-district placement if their child's needs are so great that they cannot be met by the local school district.

Rail, rail and more rails

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Stuff that you can't easily see — While rail pulling continues from Scituate toward Hingham other work is proceeding at a slower pace. The big emphasis for the project is rail, rail and more rail. So, we thought that this week we'd show you some parts of the project that are not readily visible to the casual observer.

Rail stored at Lincoln Lane waiting to be pulled – The first photo was taken of rail at Lincoln Lane while it was waiting to be moved further north. Lincoln Lane is a private way off of South Main St. and is the closest road to the Scituate border. It is now closed as a result of the Greenbush project. For those of you who remember the train when it last ran in the 1950's there is a very interesting statistic. The "old" rail from earlier days weighed about 100 pounds per yard of length. Today's rail weighs 136 pounds per yard, or 36 percent more.

Sitting nearby was a very unusual piece of equipment. It is a Caterpillar machine that has been adapted to ride on the rails. The accompanying photo shows it sitting of its train wheels with its rubber tires high off the ground.

Train station — Moving north to the site of the new train station, earth-moving is under way big time. We have received several comments about the huge piles of dirt at the site. No, the MBTA is not building a ski hill. The whole station parking area will be raised about eight feet so the drainage structures will clear the water table. All of the dirt piles that you see has been brought onto the site and is now being spread around and leveled. This is shown in the next photo.

Lastly, moving to the other side of the station site, just off of North Main Street, we see the 800-foot long platform that will soon allow Cohasset commuters to board the train. The full 800 foot length is required since that is the maximum train length and all cars must be handicapped accessible from the platform to conform to Federal and State laws.

So, that's a quick tour of hard-to-see Greenbush views from near the Scituate line to the Hingham line.

Other stuff – Water Department paving projects around Town should be finished by today. The bone-jarring roads we have seen for the past several weeks should be a thing of the past — at least for a while.

Suburbanites might not understand

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

...city driving did help my overall parking skills. I can now parallel park with the best of them.

Ode on a Parking Space
(with apologies to the great poet John Keats)

THOU still unfulfilled space of emptiness
Thou foster-child of Suburbia and slow Time,
Urban historian, who canst thus express,
A parking tale more sweetly than our rhyme ...

I'm not going to pretend to be able to butcher Ode on a Grecian Urn for a full column. But, having recently emigrated from the city to the suburbs, I've developed an unnatural love affair with my parking space. Actually, parking spaces, plural. I have two! Yes, two, just pour moi and my beloved VW. And neither one involves anyone blocking me in, moving my car by 6 a.m., and remembering which side of the street to park on street cleaning days. Such is the beauty of my parking spaces.

Established suburbanites will probably not comprehend an ode on a parking space. But, as someone once told me, having a car in the city is a bit like having a pet that requires constant care and attention and daily strolls around the block. How many times have I circled my neighborhood looking for an available spot? Not the worst thing when trying to lull a screaming baby to go to sleep; however, when it involves heavy groceries or a cranky toddler who has to go potty that's an entirely different crises altogether.

And then there's the issue of actually finding a great parking space, only to pass up doing things for the next week because you don't want to move the car and lose your prized space. The irony, of course, is that what is the point of a great parking space, except to be convenient for your next use?

Only urban refugees can understand the depths of despair that arise after spending four hours in a snowstorm shoveling out your car only to have your space usurped the minute you pull out. Even worse is returning to find your neighbor's lawn furniture in the very same space marking it for their own.

But it's not just my own parking space I worship. I'm euphoric every time I go shopping and get to park in the enormous parking lots adjacent to stores here in Suburbia-Land. No more witnessing fistfights in the supermarket lot over the last available space or hoarding quarters for parking meters. You know you've hit a low point when you raid your kid's piggy bank in order to park.

However, on the plus side, city driving did help my overall parking skills. I can now parallel park with the best of them. The other day, when my son and I were headed to the farmer's market, I saw a tight spot right up front and I thought for a quick second. "Oh yeah, I could SO do that." But then I remembered something ... "But, I don't have to." And proceeded down the block and easily pulled into a space with no one around me.

So if you see a green VW in a store parking lot, towards the back with no other cars around; it's not because I don't want to get a scratch on it. Heck, my seven-year old car has been banged up beyond belief after living in Boston. But, the whole point is that I park in the beautiful, empty part of the lot with no cars on either side, simply because, for the first time, I can.

When old age shall this generation waste,
Thou shalt remain, in midst of other woe
Than ours, a friend to man, to whom thou say'st,
'Beauty is truth, truth beauty,—that is all
Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know.'
(Besides where to find a great parking spot in the city.)

Danielson, a Cohasset resident, is the CEO of DowntownWomensClub.com, a career website and social network for women with chapters across the country (including one here on the South Shore), and the co-author of Table Talk: The Savvy Girl's Alternative to Networking. HEALTH NOTES

Medical Reserve Corps volunteers sought

An information session for health professionals and other interested citizens will take place in Cohasset at 7 p.m., Tues., Oct. 17 at Town Hall.

The Cohasset Board of Health is working with other local towns to mobilize volunteers for a Medical Reserve Corps that would assist in the event of a health emergency.

Disasters such as Hurricane Katrina, tsunamis and the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks have made communities all the more aware of the need for an organized group of qualified volunteers prepared to help. Future needs may include flu pandemic or bio-terrorism. Therefore, the board of health would like to identify credentials and train as many volunteers as possible. Volunteers may be nurses, physicians, pharmacists and physician assistants, whether practicing or retired, those with experience in public health, mental health and allied health professionals or community members without medical training to assist with administrative and support functions.

An information session in Cohasset for health professionals and interested citizens is Tues., Oct. 17 at 7 p.m., at Town Hall in the basement meeting room. Additional sessions will be held in Hull on Oct. 23, at 10 a.m. and in Hingham on Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. Volunteers may choose to attend a session in their town or another town. To register, call Alison Minkoff at 617-665-3871 or visit aminkoff@challiance.org.

Recognizing that many professionals have limited time to volunteer, the Board of Health encourages Medical Reserve Corps members to choose their level of participation. Volunteers may elect to serve their community both during emergencies and for more routine public health needs such as immunization clinics, screenings and health education, or strictly during emergencies. Because Cohasset is working in cooperation with 27 area communities to share resources, volunteers may also choose to serve only in their town or as part of the regional Medical Reserve Corps.

Examples of practicing and retired professionals, who are encouraged to volunteer, include, but are not limited to: physicians, nurses, dentists, veterinarians, pharmacists, respiratory therapists, epidemiologists, health educators, psychologists, social workers, chaplains, language interpreters, lawyers, funeral directors and administrators. Medical, public health and other allied health professionals are also encouraged to apply, as well as non-medical personnel.

For more information, call Dr. Joseph Godzik, Health Agent, at 781-383-4116, or Alison Minkoff at 617-665-3871 or visit aminkoff@challiance.org.

Town Clerk's office has absentee ballots

Absentee ballots for the State Election on Tuesday, Nov. 7 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, November 6, 2006 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
- Physical disability.
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Nov. 7 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Register to vote

Wednesday, Oct. 18 will be the last day to register to vote and change party enrollment for the state election on Nov. 7.

Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on Wednesday, Oct. 18 from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Friday, the 13th

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I don't want to frighten all you young ladies who are expecting visits from the stork in the next few days, but there is an old maxim among triskaidekaphobes that goes like this:

"A child born on Friday the 13th must carry a rabbit's foot from a rabbit killed at midnight by a cross-eyed farmer. Otherwise, the child will bring bad luck to the family. If the child loses the rabbit's foot, he will die."

Yes, indeed, it'll be Friday the 13th in a couple of days, a day to stay in bed and pull the covers over your head lest the misfortunes that roam the land on that unlucky day befall you on the way to work or pleasure.

The fear of Friday the 13th has such a hold on us that it even has a name, "triskaidekaphobia"...

The fear of Friday the 13th has such a hold on us that it even has a name, "triskaidekaphobia," and a recently published biography, "13: the Story of the World's Most Notorious Superstition," by Nathaniel Lachenmeyer.

The origin of the superstition is obscure. Most feel it got its start at the Last Supper, when Jesus dined with his 12 Apostles, a total of 13, and was betrayed by one of them, but a number of other starts have been proposed.

Norse mythology tells of Baldur, the god of light, who could be killed only by a spike of mistletoe.

Loki, the god of mischief, snuck into a banquet of 12 and tricked Baldur's brother, Hodur, the blind god of darkness, into killing Baldur with a spear of mistletoe.

The Knights Templar, familiar to those who have read "The DaVinci Code," were arrested by King Philip IV of France and Pope Clement V on Friday the 13th in 1307. Most of them were burned at the stake, making it the unluckiest day on the calendar for the Templars, at least.

The first tribute to the American flag was a 13-gun salute, one for each colony. When Vermont joined the union, it went to 14 guns, and one was added for each new state until it was decided that there was a better use for that much ammunition and the number reverted to 21.

Gen. John Logan, the Civil War hero and founder of Memorial Day as a national holiday, was once asked to a social function at which he discovered he was to be the 13th person at the dinner table. He asked for and received seating at a side table.

It was the dream of George Eastman, the founder of Eastman Kodak, to honor the 13 colonies by changing the calendar from 12 to 13 months of 28 days each with 13 Friday the 13ths and a 13th month called "Sol."

Once long ago, an English shipowner decided to squelch the superstition once and for all. He fitted out a ship with 13 tons of cargo. He hired a 13-man crew, all of whom had names with 13 letters. They had supplies for a 13-day voyage.

The ship sailed on Friday the 13th at 1:13 p.m. (1313 by the sailor's clock) — and was never seen again.

Or so the story goes.

Special TM articles featured in new show

Tune into Our Town starting Monday. The program, hosted by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo, will begin focusing on articles going before voters at the Nov. 13 Fall Special Town Meeting.

In this first show Pat and Mark sit down with Andrew Willard of the Alternative Energy Committee and then Alix White and David Farrag of the Conservation Commission to discuss their groups articles.

Also, in a special roll-in Pat visits the Cohasset Senior Center to find out about the center's upcoming Antique Appraisal Event.

Where do you stand on 'Wine at Food Stores' question?

'Obsolete'

"The practice of limiting beer and wine sales to package stores in Massachusetts is obsolete, anti-competitive and inconvenient but still in place as an integral accomplishment of the corrupt nature of our Legislature. It should have been revised decades ago to conform with the practice of most other states."

—Richard E.T. Brooks

'Lost profit'

"Although I don't drink alcohol, (I'm underage) allowing grocery stores to sell wine in Massachusetts doesn't seem like a well thought out idea. I'm sure it has some pros, but to me, cons of the subject overrule.

"First of all, wine stores could lose business. I understand that it is more convenient to purchase wine along with your groceries instead of having to go to two different stores buy them. Food stores may get more business and money, but I believe that if this goes through, wine shops will lose profit. To me, the private business wine stores deserve the income.

"Secondly, minors may be able to illegally purchase wine more easily if it is available to them in grocery stores. I can't speak for everyone, especially because I am under aged, but I don't think that allowing grocery stores to sell wine in Massachusetts is for the better."

— Emily Toomey

'Supportive'

"I'm not a big drinker, so normally this wouldn't make a difference.

"However I am supportive, because if it passes, we South Shore shoppers will at last be able to buy 'Two Buck Chuck' (Charles Shaw) at Trader Joe's in Hanover."

— Kay Campbell

'Public safety'

"In general, we should trust the practical wisdom and daily experience of our law enforcement on issues such as this. They are the professionals who deal most directly with under age drinking and driving while under the influence of alcohol. If the issue is simply convenience versus public safety, then as a community we would do well to vote for public safety against Question One."

— John Seel

'No need'

"The Stop & Shop in Cohasset already has pretty poor selection. If they had to dedicate an isle to booze (on top of all the other ancillary junk they sell) the variety of actually food products would suffer. I don't think anyone in town is in danger of going thirsty so I don't really see the need."

— Lance Norris

'To vote yes'

"Yes. Convenience and price."

— Pam Miles

'Hurt business'

"I am against Question One. I believe it will hurt the small liquor store owner's business."

— Barbara Dillon

'Underage drinking'

" I am voting against Question One for three reasons:

"First, by allowing wine to be sold in any grocery store (including local convenience stores), it will make alcoholic beverages that much easier for underage drinkers to obtain. Indeed, a local convenience store in Scituate (which has a liquor license) is the place of choice for Cohasset underage youths to get their alcoholic beverages. Whereas the adult employees of package stores are well trained to stop underage liquor purchases, the typical cashier at a supermarket or convenience store (who themselves are underage and who shuffle in and out of that job) never will rise to the same level of training and vigilance. As for the argument that beer is the drink of choice of under age drinkers, it should be noted that many wine coolers and beverages are targeted to the under age crowd.

"Second, for better or worse, the people of this state voted for the present system 70 years ago when Prohibition ended. Many small businesspeople have invested their life savings and livelihoods into their businesses based upon the system that has been in place for decades. For the big chain stores suddenly to say, 'Hey, let's change the rules so we can make more money,' constitutes a dramatic and unfair shifting of the playing field in the wine business. (For the record, I have no friends or relatives who have any connection to the wine or liquor business).

"Finally, the chains tell us that they are doing this for our convenience, so the harried shopper can buy their wine and groceries in one stop. Also, they suggest prices will be lower. Perhaps there may be some truth to this. But whatever small benefit there may be for the typical consumer, it is far, far outweighed by the social detriment of having alcoholic beverages for sale on every street corner. It should be noted that in poor, inner city neighborhoods, the well publicized object of greatest wrath of the residents are the corner liquor stores. Cohasset may not be a ghetto, but underage drinking is way too prevalent already in our community. The recent study which was profiled recently in the New York Times demonstrated conclusively that the rate of alcoholism is infinitely greater for persons who start drinking while teens than if they wait to drink until they are in their 20s. Trust me, I am no Billy Sunday (and if there were a ballot question to legalize drugs, I would be the first in line to vote 'Yes'). But as adults, we always must place the welfare of our children over profit. There is no voter who can make a sane argument that saving 50 cents or a buck on a $12 bottle of wine at Stop & Shop is worth the social damage that liquor-on-every corner will inflict on our youth."

— Andrew Quigley

'Underage drinking'

"Could we be opening up yet another venue to police for underage drinking? There are always those places that sell to underage kids- are we just making it yet more convenient?"

— Georgie Gladdys

Curtis Liquors in Tedeschi Plaza is letting passersby know where the store stands on Question One, which if passed at the polls Nov. 7, would allow towns to issue wine-only licenses to stores that carry certain food items.

'Makes sense'

" Wine and beer are sold at Stop n Shop in Weymouth and other supermarkets in Massachusetts. It makes sense for supermarkets to make wine, beer and spirits available to shoppers, as shoppers are busier than ever, one stop shopping conveniences are needed.

"In addition, supermarkets need to stay competitive by offering a wide range of services to consumers. Nationally, this trend is apparent in larger markets, in California, large chain supermarkets like: Ralph's, Vons, and Albertsons all have a 'liquor department,' along with dry cleaning services, photo developing, ice cream quick serve on the spot, etc. For Cohasset, Stop and Shop, and Shaw's will need to apply for liquor license like other stores, restaurants and bars. For greater selection of liquor, I can go to a local liquor store. Cheers and Salud!"

— Mary Cirafice

'Already enough'

"There are already enough places to purchase alcohol in Cohasset. Liquor store personnel take special courses to learn how to reduce the sale of alcohol to minors and police observe these stores carefully for the same reason. Why stretch the Town's resources further just so we can cut out an errand?"

— Patience Towle

'Small is beautiful'

"Tedeschi's already sells wine at the Scituate store, so I'm not sure how it is categorized in this issue. At face value, I have no problem with supermarkets, etc. selling wine. My concern is rather for the smaller stores like Village Wine and Spirits, The Weinery, and even the larger Curtis Liquors. When one category of store begins to vacuum the smaller enterprises (Wal-Mart is the nation's mega culprit in this regard), a sense of community is undermined. It becomes all about commerce and nothing about a smaller scale of exchange that allows us to be in connection in our towns and cities and to support the merchants who know that 'small is beautiful.' For me, it's not an issue of convenience, but of community and caring."

— Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull

'Fairness'

"There is no easy answer to this question. It doesn't change anything except who will be allowed to sell wine. Right now, some grocery stores can (Stop & Shop in Hingham is the closest one to me). And some grocery stores, like The Fruit Center in Hingham, have wine for sale in an adjoining store. Why should they be allowed to sell wine, and not Stop and Shop in Cohasset, or Shaw's in Cohasset?

"As far as I know, local wine stores are in business because they specialize and come to know the preferences of their regular customers. Excessive consumption, irresponsible drinking, littering, drunk driving — all these are issues that we are constantly confronting as a community. The availability of a product may increase our problems with it. The availability of guns comes to mind. But in the case of the selling of wine, I come down on the side of fairness and competition — let the local communities decide who should be allowed to have the available licenses, and then strictly enforce the laws regarding purchase and use."

— Chartis Tebbetts

'No big deal'

"I don't see what the big deal is. Several states already have this option, and the Stop and Shop in Hingham has had it for years. These stores can't do any worse in terms of selling to minors, since it seems only those with Massachusetts licenses can purchase alcohol. Anything else — including passports and military IDs — can't be "verified" according to local liquor storeowners.

"The argument about increasing drunk driving or risk of underage drinking is specious at best. Melanie's Law notwithstanding, we as a community aren't serious in dealing with both of these issues. A week doesn't go by without a news report of someone with multiple drunk driving arrests causing another accident or injuring someone. I know from firsthand experience that we have a number of permissive parents in the area who enable their child's drinking by turning a blind eye and reinforcing 'the rules don't apply to me' mentality — until tragedy strikes. Then, the doctors and nurses try to put someone back together, and the lawyers do their version of damage control to preserve Johnny's or Jennifer's future."

— Jim Mensching

'Will vote yes'

"I would absolutely vote yes on the Question One initiative. I am from California where it is legal to buy wine and beer at all grocery, convenience stores, and gas station markets 24 hours a day, seven days a week. I also have made a career out of teaching alcohol and drug prevention education to children, teens and adults. I've spent 25 years advocating for the safety of teens. Very few teens buy wine or beer in grocery stores. The liquor store lobbyists are using scare tactics and appealing to puritan sensibilities of New Englanders. You can't imagine the convenience of being able to buy a bottle of wine along with groceries for dinner! It's time to get with this century."

— Patty Johnson

'Less effort'

"Cohasset has two types of customers; those who support the local stores downtown, and those who may seek the best price. For our town, the change will probably not hurt our local stores, but will make those who are frugal use less effort and maybe gas in getting their chores done."

— Steve Bobo

'Opposed'

"I oppose it because liquor stores are plagued with teenagers attempting to buy alcohol, are monitored for compliance with the law , and are used to dealing with the problem. The grocery stores have a high turnover in cashiers and won't be as effective in dealing with the tricks of thirsty teenagers. Hence more tragic accidents."

— R. Murray Campbell

'Disaster'

"I think that selling in grocery stores would be a disaster because of the difficulty in monitoring who is buying. The ability of underage kids getting someone of age to buy for them is huge. The treating of alcohol as just another food or beverage gives the wrong message to teens, also."

— Mimi White

'Support village'

"I think wine and beer are readily available. Liquor stores are now able to be open on Sundays and until 11 p.m. the rest of the week. I think that's enough time to figure out if you need some beer or wine.

"We have a small liquor store here in the village that is doing a fabulous job in competing with the 3A stores by offering an excellent selection and great service. And let us not forget those wonderful Friday Wine Tastings. She doesn't need more competition from Stop & Shop and Shaw's.

"If we are to keep the village stores surviving, we need to support them. That means actually shopping at them in addition to the lip service of 'It's so great to have such wonderful shops right here in the village' and then going and shopping at the big chains.

"Can you tell I am now a Village Shopkeeper?"

— David Bigley

'Put brakes on'

"If we are to offer wine in supermarkets, alcohol will become considerably more accessible to our children. The underage drinking problem in Massachusetts is already out of control. Why exacerbate the issue. Adults seem to have no trouble accessing wine through the existing channels. Let's focus on putting the brakes on existing accessibility of alcohol to minors, rather than expanding an already concerning problem."

— Pam Wilson

'Unnecessary'

"Sorry, I'm not a 'wine drinker' of any size or description, but for the record: It seems to me that there is sufficient availability, and opportunities for wine to be sold at the present time. I therefore feel that allowing Food Stores to provide additional availability seems to create over-abundance and is totally unnecessary.

Measuring success of our school district

NOTES FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT

DENISE WALSH

I have been asked lately to share with you how a school department evaluates or measures the success of a school district. The questions we ask ourselves first are:

- Is each child reaching full potential according to his or her ability level?
- Are support services in place to ensure that every child has access to the curriculum?
- Do teachers have the necessary resources and professional development to meet the challenges of what every child needs to know and be able to do at each grade level?
- Are assessment systems in place to monitor individual, building, and district student performance?
- Are all teachers and administrators "highly qualified"?
- Do we have sufficient staff to provide program offerings to challenge students beyond proficiency?
- Are students prepared to move beyond high school as life long learners in a global community?

It is critical that we be able to answer yes to all of the above questions if we are to raise the bar and improve student performance. It is more important than ever to support our teaching/administrative team and to provide for our students and staff an adequate, predictable budget each year, if we are to meet the district goals to:

- Challenge all students to proficiency and beyond
- Close achievement gaps where they exist
- Function as a professional learning community
- Establish partnerships with families and community

Despite these difficult fiscal times, our students are doing very well by a wide variety of quantitative measures:

- This past June, 94 percent of the graduating class for 2006 went on to further their education.
- Recently, 29 seniors — based on their MCAS scores — were awarded John and Abigail Adams scholarships. (full 4-year tuition to any Massachusetts state college or university).
- 100 percent of grade 10 students passed the English Language Arts and Math (MCAS 2006) for competency determination; 94 percent scored Advanced or Proficient.
- The Boston Globe recently ranked Cohasset's grade 10 students #10 in the state in math and #14 in English Language Arts based on latest MCAS results.
- All schools in the district (2006) met A.Y.P. (adequate yearly progress), as required by the federal No Child Left Behind Act (NCLB).
- 22 students at Cohasset High School have earned the distinction of Advanced Placement Scholars by the College Board. Of those 89 percent who took the AP examinations, scored 3 or higher.
- The mean SAT scores for 2006 are 542 Verbal, 551 Math, and 544 Writing. This is well above the state and national average.
- The National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) has announced that one of our seniors at Cohasset High School has been named a finalist in the 2007 Merit Scholarship Competition. Five additional seniors have been named Commended Students for 2007 by NMSC.

This is how a high performing school district measures success. We are very proud of all of our students and their outstanding academic accomplishments. We appreciate a hard-working student body, a dedicated faculty and staff and a community committed to maintaining high expectations and supporting the Cohasset Public Schools' mission to continue the "commitment to excellence."

Dr. Denise M. Walsh is Cohasset Superintendent of Schools.

Shedding light on special education

FROM EDUCATION, PAGE 12

In order to understand special education funding, one must first understand the mechanism by which students are placed in out-of-district placements.

in the chart of special education placements is public information, Cohasset is a small town. By publishing a list of out-of-district placements specific to school and number of students attending the school, it is quite possible that this information could be deemed "personally identifiable". It would be fairly easy to figure out which children are in which placements. In the past, families whose children are in out-of-district placements have been subjected to hurtful comments relative to the cost of the placement and its effect on the school budget. No family should be made to feel badly because their child, through accident of birth, has needs that require more intensive services.

That said, funding for special education is an issue, as noted in a letter-to-the-editor last week. Massachusetts has made some progress in assisting cities and towns with "extraordinary" costs of special education through the circuit breaker program, which the legislature has funded at approximately 75 percent for the past few years. It should also be noted that our school district does the due diligence of recouping "municipal Medicaid" funds. There is a great deal of paperwork that goes along with this, and some towns do not bother, so the district is to be commended for making that effort.

Finally, what most people are not aware of is that a high percentage of the grant funding coming into the town are state grants related to special education and federal "flow through" funding under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). In total, these funds represent slightly over 50 percent of all the grant funding the school department receives. So while funds are expended, funds are also coming into the town for special education. In total, the town receives over half (approx. 54 percent) of the costs related to out district placements through these funding mechanisms. The state and federal government can and should do more. I join last week's letter writer in calling on our state and federal legislators to ensure adequate funding for special education. Perhaps it would make sense to have a moratorium on tax cuts until these mandated programs are adequately funded.

Maureen Jerz is a former member of the School Committee. She lives at 133 North Main St.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FROM LETTERS, PAGE 12

Setting record straight on SPED issue

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing in response to F. Roy Fitzsimmons's letter in last week's Mariner. In this letter he indicates "for years I have asked our local State Representative to introduce legislation to cure the unfair special education costs that our cities and towns face annually". A check of my constituent database does not show any letter, e-mail or call from Mr. Fitzsimmons on this issue. If I am wrong, I am sure he will let me know. However, perhaps he is referring to the numerous times I have heard him speak at Town Meeting regarding a litany of issues of which I am sure education funding, or SPED, was one.

His letter mixes the issue of special education funding with the issue of total education funding commonly referred to as "Chapter 70" funding. Given that he insinuates that I have been doing nothing on this issue, I would like to take a moment to mention what I have been doing.

In 2004, I supported, and voted for, a change to the SPED formula that created a "circuit breaker" for local communities. This was passed by the Legislature and signed into law. This new law provided additional funding for communities in the following way. Once a community spends four times foundation, or approximately $32,000, on a SPED student, the state picks up approximately 75 percent of the balance of the cost. Also, we created an "extraordinary expenses" line item that can provide relief to a community that sees an increase of over 125 percent in SPED costs from one year to the next.

Next, I am a co-sponsor of a bill, familiar to most school committees, called the Acton plan (HD5041). This bill did not pass this year, but I am co-sponsoring it again in the next session. This bill would set a floor of $2000 per student in Chapter 70 aid. This bill would be a significant help to communities such as Cohasset. For example, in FY 06 Cohasset received approximately $830 in Chapter 70 aid per student from the state. Under this bill, Cohasset would see an increase of over $1.7 million in state funding. Although this did not pass, we were able to force some changes through the budget process. For the first time, in the FY 07 budget, we set a floor on state school funding of 17.5 percent of the community's foundation budget. Since Cohasset only received 11.9 percent of its foundation budget from the state last year, this resulted in an increase of $332,008 in Chapter 70 funding for Cohasset in the FY 07 budget.

Lastly, I have worked with your superintendent on a specific SPED issue that Cohasset has regarding a dispute over whether it should pay for two SPED students. This stems from a determination by the Department of Education that makes no distinction between a "legal guardian" and a "custodial" guardian. I hosted a meeting in my office with Dr Walsh and members of the Department of Education. Dr Walsh and I urged them to change this arcane regulation, but to date they have not. The Department of Education, and the regulations promulgated by it, are overseen by the Governor's office. Pressure directed toward the Governor, particularly from members of his own party, is likely the most direct route to eliminate this burden on the taxpayers of Cohasset.

If, Mr. Fitzsimons, or anyone else has a question about this or any issue, please do not hesitate to contact me. I carry my blackberry most places and can be reached on the e-mail at Rep.GarrettBradley@hou.state.ma.us or by phone at (617) 722-2396 (office) or (781) 740-3127 (home). I look forward to your input.

CHS boys topple Abington

The Cohasset High boys soccer team got back in the win column Tuesday with a 1-0 triumph over Abington. Junior Emma Oronte scored the goal in the 37th minute off a scramble in front of the Abington net.

Freshman keeper Will Wise recorded the first clean sheet of his varsity career, and had to make a great save off a Green Wave corner kick with four minutes remaining to preserve the lead. Cohasset was also buoyed by the return from injury of senior stopper Adam Smith and junior striker Sam Roth.

The Skippers hosted Carver yesterday (Oct. 12) in a rematch of a Sept. 18 game won by the Crusaders, 4-1. On Saturday, Cohasset hosts a strong Cardinal Spellman team, with kickoff scheduled for 3 p.m. Next week, Cohasset travels to Harwich (Monday) and Hull (Wednesday) before hosting Norwell on Saturday.

Skippers head coach Rob Leary says anything can happen in what has been a topsy-turvy season in the South Shore League, so long as his team can improve its finishing.

"We just need to put the ball in the net," Leary said. "We're making the plays; we're just not finishing."

Skippers catch up to Carver

Late DiPaolo touchdown gives CHS win in South Shore League opener

By Alan McCall
CORRESPONDENT

CARVER – Never underestimate the value of extra points in football.

On Saturday morning, the Cohasset Skippers converted on one of their two opportunities. The Carver Crusaders missed both. And that was your ball game, folks, as visiting Cohasset held on for a 13-12 win.

After gaining only 83 yards through three-plus quarters, Cohasset (3-1-1, 1-0 South Shore League) marched 66 yards for the winning score, answering Carver's go-ahead touchdown with 5:03 remaining to play.

Quarterback Anthony DiPaolo culminated a 10-play drive with a 1-yard keeper with 1:22 left in the game to give the Skippers the 13-12 lead. DiPaolo had runs of 21 and 18 yards in the drive to set up the winning score.

But Carver (1-4, 0-2), looking for its first win over Cohasset in five years, made it an exciting finish. Brandon Holbrook returned the ensuing kick off 30 yards to the Cohasset 44-yard line. Holbrook then hauled in an 11-yard pass from Kevin Jellison to the 33-yard line.

Cohasset's defense came up big on the next play as Jake Cuneo deflected Jellison's next pass, which was intercepted by Schyuler Wakefield with 1:01 to go.

CHS golfers take second in SSL

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

When it became apparent three weeks ago that the Cohasset High golf team would be hard-pressed to repeat as South Shore League champion, it set its sights on taking second place.

That is exactly what the Skippers have done, as Tuesday's 46.5-7.5 romp over Abington gave Cohasset a 9-3 league record, good enough for second place.

All six golfers in the lineup won their matches against the Green Wave: Kevin Barber, Zach Murray, Charlie Czerkawski, John Wade, Chase Stebbins and John Sturino. Czerkawski, a junior, was the medalist with a score of 39 and Wade finished undefeated in league play from the 4-spot in the lineup with a 10-0-2 record.

The Skippers finished their regular season with a solid 38.5-24.5 win over Quincy at Cohasset Country Club on Wednesday. The victory improved Cohasset's overall record to 11-3.

Eight players got in on the action, with Chris Mills and Owen Stevenson joining the regular six in the lineup. Murray was Cohasset's top golfer with a 1-over par 37, followed by Czerkawski (38) and Barber (40). For Czerkawski, it was his fourth straight sub-40 round.

Looking at the regular season, Wade was not the only Skipper to post an impressive individual record. Czerkawski went 12-2 (11-1 in league), and Murray (11-2-1) and Stebbins (10-2-1) were not far behind. Barber finished 7-6-1 at the top spot in the lineup, while Sturino finished 5-2.

Cohasset will next compete at the South Shore League meet on Oct. 19 at Souther's Marsh Golf Club in Plymouth. Top four golfers from all seven league teams will play the full 18 holes, and it is a stroke play tournament.

That will serve as a good warm-up for the Div. 3 South Shore sectionals, which take place Oct. 23 at Pembroke Country Club. Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney is optimistic about his team's chances at these two tournaments.

"This is, by far, the best stroke play team I've had," Sweeney said. "I'm hoping we're going to break through (at sectionals) and make the finals."

Depending on how many teams qualify for the sectional, the top three or four teams advance to the Div. 3 state finals, to be held Oct. 30 in Lynn.

Lady Skippers holding steady

Rebound from EB loss with tie at Abington

The Cohasset High girls soccer team recovered from a rather inauspicious start to earn a big 1-1 tie at Abington Tuesday afternoon.

The point earned gives the Skippers a 7-3-1 record for the season heading into yesterday's (Oct. 12) match at Carver.

Cohasset took a 5-3-1 South Shore League record into that game, and a positive result against Carver would give the Skippers a chance at a top-two finish in the SSL.

After a 2-1 loss at East Bridgewater on Friday, the girls had the weekend off and had a light practice on Monday to get ready for the Abington match. The girls got a quick wake-up call Tuesday, however, when Abington scored just 40 seconds into the match.

Skippers head coach Deb Beal said her team essentially started over after that goal, and began to play its kind of soccer.

"Someone lit a fire under our feet (after the Abington goal) and we went with it," said Beal. "The passing, the communicating and the play were top-notch."

Defensively, Sammie Lehr, Anna Haggerty, Colleen Richardson and Sarah Coggins continued their strong play of late, and both Haley Haracz and Alyssa Hinman have played well off the bench. At sweeper, Lehr played a great game against the Green Wave, and with Haggerty nursing a sore ankle, Hinman has stepped back from her usual outside midfield spot to play some good minutes at fullback.

The Skippers equalized eight minutes into the second half when Christine Coner scored off a pass from Torey Hart. Coner, a freshman, has been splitting time between JV and varsity and has shown a good attacking sense for the game.

Cohasset had a last-second chance to pull out the win when Lehr booted an Abington clear attempt right to the feet of teammate Meg Anderson in the Abington penalty area. Anderson did well to beat her mark and get

Revolution players to hold clinic in Scituate

Come meet the New England Revolution's Matt Reis, Clint Dempsey, Andy Dorman and Jay Heaps, and help a deserving family on Sunday, Oct. 15 at Scituate's Central Field from 1 to 3 p.m.

The players will provide a free soccer clinic, sponsored by RBC Dain Raucher. This year, they are joining forces with the South Shore Habitat for Humanity's Kids Fun Run for a family activities day, which is working to raise funds for a home to build in Scituate for a deserving family.

The soccer clinic is free, and Scituate Soccer Club along with Scituate High School Soccer will be assisting in the clinics. The Fun Run is $10 per child with a maximum of $25 per family. All of the proceeds go to Habitat for Humanity. The first 500 kids get a free t-shirt.

For more information, go to www.sshabitat.org or www.scituate-soccer.com or email Bruce Addison at bruce.addison@rbcdain.com.

off a quality shot, only to see it go just wide. With that, the whistle blew and Cohasset had picked up a point on the road against a good team.

Beal said she was pleased with how the team played and the attitude that the girls took to the game.

"It seemed as though when we played Abington and Norwell in the past, there was always some tension in the air or some sense that we have to work extra hard," said the coach. "On Tuesday, it was fun, it was exciting and it was great soccer."

The Green Wave created some nice opportunities of their own, but, as she has done all year, keeper Johanna Brophy was up to the task. Beal marveled at one particular play when Brophy came off her line to snatch the ball of the feet of an Abington player who was in on a one-on-one.

Brophy got the ball, and the Green Wave player found herself on the ground.

In the midfield, Beal says Maggie McGoldrick, Lara Novak, Caren Garber, Kristin Monaco, Mackenzie Hart, Jamie Genovese and Emily Coggins have been working hard at practice to use the width of the field to Cohasset's advantage and create more scoring opportunities.

Joining that group lately has been Kara Wilcox. Usually a forward, Wilcox has filled in at times for Emily Coggins and has been a tireless worker at the outside midfield position.

The forward line of Torey Hart, Anderson, Coner and Karoline Holt have been working hard to improve its finishing. Hart began the week in EMass' top-10 in scoring with 21 points (11 goals, 10 assists). That total put Hart one point ahead of Carver's Tina Gillen for the league lead.

McGoldrick is second on the team with 12 points.

Beal says keeper Shalea Daly has been training with Brophy, and "both are striving to become more vocal leaders on the field. They have the best view and what they see needs to be broadcasted."

Next week, Cohasset returns home (finally) on Monday against Harwich to kick off a six-game homestand to end the season. The girls host Hull on Wednesday before a Saturday showdown with Norwell.

Late DiPaolo touchdown gives CHS win in opener

Cohasset seemingly sealed the deal when Brian Hill dashed 32 yards down the sideline deep into Carver territory, but he fumbled as he was tackled and Carver still had a pulse when Holbrook recovered the ball.

Cohasset finally put the game in the win column as Fletcher Smalzel picked off a fourth down pass to end the game.

"We played a great game on defense, and the defense has been our strength all season," said Carver head coach Mike Fraccalossi. "We made a few huge mistakes at critical times that hurt us today."

For the Skippers, winning a game in the fourth quarter is nothing new.

"We have had late game drives to win games twice already this season, so the kids were confident that they could go down and score again," said Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw. "They (Carver) did a good job of taking away some of the things we wanted to do on offense, but we were able to adjust and execute. They are an aggressive team and we expected that we would have to play well to beat them."

The first half belonged to the defenses, as each offense was held under 100 yards over the first two quarters. The Skippers finally broke through by capitalizing on a turnover as an errant pitch in the Carver backfield resulted in a fumble that was recovered by Wakefield at the Cohasset 47-yard line.

"We have had late game drives to win games twice already this season, so the kids were confident that they could go down and score again."
Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw

The Skippers later faced a fourth-and-7 at the 29-yard line and converted on a DiPaolo to Hill screen pass for 16 yards which gave the Skippers a first down at the Carver 13. Cohasset converted another fourth down moments later on a perfectly executed option pitch from DiPaolo to Hill, who beat the Carver defense by one step to the pylon for a 2-yard scoring run with four seconds left in the half.

Pat Doonan kicked what would be the crucial extra point for a 7-0 Cohasset lead.

Carver opened the second half with an impressive drive to the Cohasset 25-yard line, but stalled there on a failed fourth-and-5 passing attempt.

But the defense held and took advantage of a Cohasset miscue as a bad snap that rolled to the 18-yard line, setting up Carver's first score, a 17-yard touchdown pass from Jellison to Marcus Grant on the last play of the third quarter. Carver went for the two-point conversion and the lead, but misfired on an incomplete pass.

The Crusaders took the lead on their next possession, marching 55 yard on eight plays. An inside reverse by Holbrook picked up 24 yards, followed by a 13-yard pass from Jellison to Holbrook just short of the goal line. Wilson Wadlow barreled over for a 1-yard score, but once again the conversion pass failed leaving Carver with a 12-7 lead.

The Skippers now travel to Mashpee tonight (Oct. 13) for a 5:30 kickoff. The Falcons won their league opener in Norwell last weekend, 7-0, and are 4-1 overall.

Basketball clinics

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club would like to announce that there is open gym at the Deer Hill School for pre-season basketball clinics, starting Monday, Oct. 16.

The times are as follows: Monday and Wednesdays, girls fifth and sixth grade from 5:30 to 7 p.m.; girls seventh and eighth grade from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Tuesdays from 5:30 to 7 p.m. for fifth grade boys; seventh grade boys from 7 to 8:30. On Thursdays, sixth grade boys from 5:30 to 7 p.m. and eighth grade boys from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Contact ellenmaher63@comcast.net with any questions.

CBBC Basketball Coaches needed

Anyone interested in coaching girls and boys travel basketball teams, grades 5-8, for the upcoming season should contact Joe Campbell for boys programs at 383-0655, or via email, campcoh@comcast.net. For girls programs you should contact Chris Haggerty at 383-9930.

The season begins in late October and ends in mid-March. You will be asked to forward a letter of interest to the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club and to provide information for a CORI check.

Coaching selections will be made before tryouts begin on Oct. 30. Assistant coaches and scorekeepers will be recruited after the teams are selected.

Instructional and Learn To Skate

Instructional Hockey for Coastal Stars Youth Hockey program is now open for online registration. The fee for the season is $500, which includes practice ice, skills session and weekend games. Full equipment is required. Skating skills are required.

If you have any questions, please visit the website. The season begins Oct. 2 with Skills at Hobomock Arena, 5 p.m.

Coastal Stars Learn to Skate begins Saturday, Oct. 28 at 5 p.m. at Hobomock Arena. Helmets, gloves, and neck guards required. Please visit the website for further information and online registration.

Mike Stacy Memorial

The Cape Cod Landscape Association will hold the 16th annual Mike Stacy Memorial golf tournament Saturday, Oct. 21, at Hyannis Golf Club on Orrs Avenue, Hyannis. The $120 entry fee covers greens fee, cart and dinner following the tournament. The tournament will be played in a scramble format with a 1 p.m. shotgun start. Contact Diane Johnson at (877) 432-3156, P.O. Box 1327, Sagamore Beach, MA 02562 for details, or e-mail ccla1999@comcast.net.

Fall Wiffle Ball League

Extra Innings will be hosting a fall Wiffle Ball League starting Friday, Nov. 3. It will run every Friday night, through Dec. 22.

Age groups will be broken down as follows: ages 6 through 8 will play at 4 p.m., ages 9 and 10 at 5:45 p.m., and ages 11and 12 at 7:30 p.m. There will be playoffs and championships for each age level, as well as trophies.

You may sign up as a team of five or as an individual. All individuals will be placed on an Extra Innings Team. The league is limited to 12 teams per age group. To register, go to www.extrainnings-wbridgewater.com or call (508) 580-3113.

Head of the Charles Regatta

Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 21 and 22, more than 7,500 men and women will travel from around the globe to test their rowing abilities in Boston, on three miles of the Charles River, at the 42nd annual Head of the Charles Regatta. Races will be held from 8:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Oct. 21, and 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m Oct. 22.

Admission is free. Spectators can enjoy food and beverages at the popular Reunion Village, while listening to the annual "Row-a-Palooza" live-music festival. Reunion Village admission is $1 per day, which benefits the regatta's official charities. The regatta includes 52 different men's and women's races, divided into various age groups and skill levels. Races start at Boston University's DeWolfe Boathouse in Cambridge and finish at Artesani Park in Allston.

Seadogs/ AAU baseball

Seadogs/AAU travel team baseball program's 2007 season will field seven teams: 10-and-under through and including 16-and-under. Players are selected from a series of clinic/tryouts to be held throughout this fall.

The 2006 Seadogs produced a program-record eight All-Americans and the 11-and-under team captured a bronze medal at the AAU National Championships.

Seadogs clinic/tryouts:

13U: Oct. 28, 8 a.m. at SSBC

14U: Oct. 28, 11 a.m. at SSBC

15U & 16U: Oct. 28, 2 p.m. at SSBC

10U: Oct. 29, 8 a.m. at SSBC, Hingham

The Seadogs program is part of the South Shore Baseball Club, which has been a member of the Massachusetts Association of the Amateur Athletic Union since 1994. The Seadogs compete against other Massachusetts AAU teams for the right to qualify for the AAU National Baseball Championships, which are held all across the country. The Seadogs program is intended to supplement, rather than replace, local Little League, Babe Ruth and American Legion baseball programs.

The South Shore Baseball Club is a year-round, full-service club and training facility for baseball and softball players (boys and girls), age 5 and older, in Hingham. For information about SSBC or the Seadogs, call (781) 749-6466 or visit the Web site www.ssbc.com.

Foliage walk Saturday in Scituate

Scituate's Maxwell Conservation Trust will hold its annual Fall Foliage Family Walk on Saturday, Oct. 14 at 9 a.m. Meet at the Mt. Hope Improvement Society at the corner of Clapp Road and Cedar Street in Scituate for a guided hike through the beautiful Litchfield property and Carl Pipes Memorial Trail. The suggested donation is $3 per person or $5 per family group. Bagels and donuts will be served.

This is a marvelous opportunity for adults and children to become familiar with the largest undeveloped forest that remains in Scituate — and autumn is the best time of year to enjoy the beauty of these woods. There will be two guided walks — one shorter and less challenging; the other longer and more rugged. For more information, contact Cynde Robbins on 781-545-4167.

Pancake breakfast supports CHS soccer

The Cohasset Soccer Booster Club is hosting its 31st Annual Pancake Breakfast this Sunday, Oct 15, from 8 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School. This annual event is the main fundraiser for the boys and girls high school soccer teams.

Purchase of a ticket includes a great breakfast and a raffle for Red Sox/Yankees tickets or a weekend at the luxurious Custom House Tower. A silent auction will also be held at breakfast.

Proceeds from the Pancake Breakfast have been used for uniforms, coaching and scholarships. To date more than $50,000 in scholarships have been awarded to Cohasset students.

For tickets call 781-383-1341. Tickets are $5 per person or $20 for a family and can be delivered to your home or held at the door.

Join the Girl Scouts

Any girls interested in joining Girl Scouts, who are in grades kindergarten through high school, can call Amy Brash at 781-923-1099 or email amybrash@putnam.com for more information.

Adults are also needed to become troop leaders. Anyone interested should contact Brash.

Gulf Assoc. meeting features cyclists

Jim Spelman, past president of the Gulf Association, and his daughter, Kate, will recount their adventures bicycling coast-to-coast at the annual meeting of the Gulf Association. The meeting will take place Wednesday, Oct. 18, at Lightkeepers on Cohasset Harbor, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The trip began as a challenge from Kate to her father to accompany her on the trip to benefit the Jimmy Fund. A graduate of Noble & Greenough School, she is now a first-year student at Wellesley College. Age difference notwithstanding, the two covered the country at an average of 61 miles per day, the longest covering 104 miles.

Roadside scenes recorded in photos will accompany the presentation.

Attendance at the meeting is open to all. Refreshments will be served.

Spring bulbs

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is currently taking orders for a selection of spring flowering bulbs that will fill gardens with color from April to June. The assortment includes a violet-rose peony, flowering tulip, double narcissi with huge creamy yellow flowers, parrot tulips, deer- and rodent-resistant alliums, as well as petite muscari and scilla. Bulbs ordered now will become available at the end of September, and each order will be accompanied with directions for planting. Dutch organic bulb food is also available and recommended to enhance a garden's performance.

To order now for the best selection, call 781-383-0838. All purchases help fund club programs and community services.

Hingham Cemetery walking tour scheduled

A fall walking tour of Hingham Cemetery will take place Saturday, Oct. 21. Those interested should meet at Hingham Bell Tower, next to Old Ship Church, at 1 p.m.

Cemetery director Lucinda Day will lead the tour, which will include the history of the cemetery dating from 1672, cemetery monuments and notable burials, as well as social commentary. The cemetery's 150-year-old arboretum consists of several hundred specimen trees, both native and exotic, and the many sugar maples should be at peak color.

The tour will last about one and a half hours, and is open to the public. A $5 donation is requested, with no charge to those younger than 12. Rain date is Sunday, Oct. 22.

For more information, call 781-749-4868.

Mackerel fishing

The Cohasset Historical Society is offering offer a fall lecture series.

The Oct. 18, program is "Mackerel Fishing on the South Shore: A Retrospective." Rob Thompson, a longtime South Shore resident and lifelong fisherman, takes a look at mackerel fishing from colonial times to the present; the ships, the people involved and their impact on the history of Cohasset as well as the rest of the South Shore.

"Grandma's Attic" on Nov. 21, the Historical Society plans to have an interactive evening of sharing and telling a little about items from a bygone era. Categories might include tools, kitchen items, articles of clothing, or furniture, anything no longer considered modern, used on a regular basis, or that has undergone radical improvement.

All Wednesday evening programs will be held at the Pratt Building, 106 S. Main St., beginning at 7:30 p.m. There is no charge for these programs and light refreshment will be served.

Other events planned for the fall season include the Annual Meeting and Fall Dinner on Oct. 22, at The Cohasset Harbor Resort from 5:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. and the annual Wassail Party on Sunday, Dec. 3, at the Pratt Building from 2 to 4 p.m.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

'Guys and Dolls' cast is announced

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

After a much needed rest, CHS is a little bit brighter. Collectively, the proverbial weight was lifted off our shoulders last Thursday, and we couldn't be happier. Strike that. Having to go back to school Tuesday was a bummer, but beggars can't be choosers. Two four-day weeks in a row isn't too shabby.

Martin Scorsese's "The Departed" is out in theaters if you're looking for something to do this weekend go see it. Let's depart from this intro and get down to business. Here is this week's news from the school.

Congratulations to the recently announced cast members of "Guys and Dolls!"

In order of appearance:

Nicely-Nicely Johnson- Ian Porter

Rusty Charlie- Myles Collins-Wooley

Benny Southstreet- Kyle Dattola-Harris

Sarah Brown- Sally Meehan

Arvide Abernathy- Ryan Barrow

Harry the Horse- John McCarthy

Lt. Brannigan- Chris Rose

Nathan Detroit- Tim Toomey

Miss Adelaide- Sinclair Dean

Sky Masterson- Charles Miller

General Matilda B. Cartwright- Caitlin Hurley

Big Jule- Tyler Kelly

Master of Ceremonies- Andrew DeVitre

• Debate team met Wednesday after school.

• The Basketball Boosters met Wednesday night.

• A College Mini-Fair was held Thursday during school.

• The PSO President's Council met Thursday morning.

• Department Heads met Thursday after school.

• Today was Picture Retake day.

• Grade 7 went on a field trip to Blue Hills today.

There are some crows milling about on the lights to Alumni Field. Is it an omen, or just some birds? Either way this week flew by. Another weekend is here, so let's leave the interpretation of airborne symbols to the superstitious, or somebody who actually cares. Don't read too deeply into this one, I've got a feeling everything is going to be fine.

Video on stuttering available

Kids who stutter have a lot to say, and friends can show them how in a "Stuttering: For Kids By Kids," a new DVD starring real kids who stutter now available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Many children who stutter have never met anyone else who struggles with the same disability. But in this new video from the Stuttering Foundation, they meet other kids who recount how they handle challenges such as teasing, speaking out in class, and teaching others about stuttering.

Swish a lively and engaging animated basketball character that was designed by students from the Computer Graphics Technology Department of Purdue University, narrates the video.

The video and DVD are available free of any charges to all public libraries. For information, call the Stuttering Foundation toll-free at 800-992-9392, visit www.stutteringhelp.org or write info@stutteringhelp.org

Pumpkin Patch is open daily

The pumpkins have arrived, turning Wheelwright Park off N. Main Street into a Pumpkin Patch once again. Pumpkins will be available for purchase from now until Halloween, every day from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. The Pumpkin Patch is located at Wheelwright Park on No. Main St. in Cohasset, and pumpkin sales will benefit the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project.

Every year, residents who participate in ASP travel to areas of Appalachia to make badly needed home repairs to families in need. The Pumpkin Patch is one of ASP's largest fund-raisers for the trip.

British organist at St. Stephen's

As part of its Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church is presenting organist Philip Scriven of Lichfield Cathedral, England in recital on Thursday evening, Oct. 19, at 7:30 p.m. Receiving his early training as a chorister at Westminster Abbey, Philip Scriven is now organist and director of music at Litchfield Cathedral. He founded the Vienna Orpheus Choir and Orchestra and is well known as a conductor of opera. Scriven has toured Europe, Canada, and the United States, and in 1995, won the Royal College of Organists Performer of the Year competition.

The program will include Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in D Major," Duruflé's "Suite for Organ," and "Rubrics" by Dan Locklair. The program will be performed on the historic 58-rank Aeolian-Skinner instrument at St. Stephen's, known for its tonal diversity and unique placement.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave., and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781.383.1083.

Weir River Farm

The Weir River Farm Fall Festival will be held on Saturday, Oct. 14, from noon to 3pm. Festival goers will have an opportunity to reap and share the joy of harvest on the Farm and meet its family of barnyard animals. Activities will include field games, pony rides, pumpkins, children's crafts, and music. Cost is $5, $3, members. Visit www.thetrustees.org or call 781-740-4796 for more information.

Historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its Fall Dinner and Annual Meeting on Sunday, Oct. 22 from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Harbor Inn, 124 Elm St.

The event features Michael Tougis, author of "Ten Hours Till Dawn." He will present a slide and lecture presentation of heroism and tragedy aboard the 'Can Do' during the blizzard of '78.

The menu includes a buffet dinner consisting of a cheese and fruit platter with crackers, assorted rolls and butter, a mixed green salad, herb roasted chicken with garlic herb jus, penne pasta with plum tomato sauce and cheese, seasonal fresh vegetables, apple crisp with vanilla ice cream, tea/coffee and a cash bar.

Tickets are $31 for members; $36 for non-members. Checks can be made payable to Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627,Cohasset, MA 02025.

For more information call 781-383-1434. Deadline for reservations is Oct. 13.

Body Stop, Sylvia's raise funds for Shelter

Mark your calendars and make your reservations soon for a spectacular Sunday in Scituate Harbor that will benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter.

From 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 15, The Body Stop and Sylvia's By the Sea, both at 131 Front St., are joining forces to raise funds for the shelter.

The Body Stop will donate 100 percent of all proceeds from serviced including manicures, pedicures, waxing and tanning. Those planning to attend are advised to call 781-545-0303 for a reservation because the event is expected to sell out. There will be snacks and beverages of all who attend.

Sylvia's will donate 10 percent of all sales that day and will also raffle off a 1961 Blue Nose Model Sailboat valued at $295. Tickets are currently available for $5 each or three for $10. The model sailboat is on display at Sylvia's and the drawing will be Oct. 15 at 5:30 p.m. For more information, call 781-545-6060. There will be free gifts, special sale items and other surprises at Sylvia's that day too.

DESTINATIONS

Warming up to Iceland

By TANIA MEJER
TMEJER@BOSTONHERALD.COM

JUST OUTSIDE REYKJAVIK, Iceland -- I hopped out of a Ford Expedition, surrounded by a desolate-looking landscape -- moss-covered volcanic rock, rough-looking roads, no trees.

It was quiet, save for the low, loud whirring generated by an enormous, alien-looking steel tube that produced endless amounts of billowing steam.

I had to pinch my arm to remind myself I was standing in front of a geothermal power plant in Iceland, not on a Hollywood set for an upcoming sci-fi film and not in Tolkien's Middle Earth (his "Lord of the Rings" books were inspired by Icelandic sagas).

During the "Super Jeep" tour (www.activity.is), my guide and driver pointed out the above-ground pipes that carry naturally hot water to homes for heating and bathing. It's weird to realize no one here has hot water heaters in their basements. Geothermal activity is the heat source, also used for electricity alongside hydroelectric power.

The driver took our group up a bumpy 45-degree incline (everyone was relieved when we made it to the top without rolling down the hill), through small rivers, over a black sand beach, and all around deforested landscapes.

The fog and cold rain kept us from spending much time outside, although the experience was well worth getting wet.

You have to be hearty to visit here. Even in the summer the rain can be cold and miserable. And global warming is also taking a toll -- our driver said that last winter the skiing areas had so little snow that they were barely were able to open for even a few days. The unpredictable and sometimes harsh climate, paired with times when the sun never comes out in winter or is constantly out in summer, makes you curious about why and how people came to live here.

Reykjavik's Hallgrimskirkja Church

For a historical look at the Viking Settlement, approximately 870-930 A.D., I checked out the Settlement Exhibition (www.arbaejarsafn.is) in downtown Reykjavik. While I didn't figure out why anyone back then would choose to live in a place where it was so difficult to survive, I did get to see the archaeological ruins of a Viking house, surrounded by an interactive, multimedia exhibit that showed what life was like during the settlement times.

After the settlement, there were enough people living in Iceland that the first form of parliament, the Althing, was created.

This general assembly met every year from 930 until 1798 at Thingvellir (www.thingvellir.is), a gorgeous historical site where Icelanders once came and camped out for the duration of the event.

While the pretense may have been for governmental affairs, the Althing was also the hottest singles event of the times. People came not only to resolve disputes but also to contract marriages. After all, it is only recently that Iceland has transitioned from a mostly rural population to one where nearly two-thirds of the people reside around Reykjavik.

When you're in Iceland, you know you're not in Kansas anymore -- or Boston for that matter.

The capital city today looks appropriately modern, if small by American standards. Along the easy-to-navigate streets you'll find plenty of colorful one- and two-story concrete buildings as well as buildings with corrugated iron facades and roofs. Street art and street performers help create a lively atmosphere.

The gothic-looking church Hallgrimskirkja (www.hallgrimskirkja.is) is to Reykjavik what the Pru is to Boston. The 240-foot high church towers over the city, and from the top (you have to pay to go up) you can look down on all of the city. With its old-form architecture, it is surprising to learn this church only opened 10 years ago -- after 40 years of construction.

After the sightseeing, I indulged in a little shopping. If the fashion here is a little too weird for me, the music is more up my alley. I checked out the two indie record labels/stores -- Smekkleysa Plotubud (www.smekkleysa.net), aka Bad Taste of Bjork fame, and 12 Tonar (www.12tonar.is). At 12 Tonar there's plenty of staff recommendations to help you get started and a cozy listening room where the staff will serve you complimentary shots of espresso.

A must-do is a trip from the capital to the Blue Lagoon (www.bluelagoon.com), only about an hour outside the city. The original Blue Lagoon was formed by the hot water runoff from a geothermal power plant. People started bathing in the milky blue waters there, but the Lagoon was later closed and relocated, and changing rooms, a restaurant and a gift shop were added. Despite the fact it's now a major attraction, this is an ideal place to spend a few relaxing hours in the steamy blue water -- the mud is used as a facial mask. Locals may prefer other geothermal pools (there are many), but visitors who come to the Blue Lagoon will not be disappointed.

On another afternoon, I set off on a boat in search of puffins. The waterfront in Reykjavik, where whale-watching and puffin tours depart, was conveniently down the street from my accommodations at the Radisson SAS 1919 Hotel (rates from about $193; 800-333-3333; www.1919.reykjavik.radissonsas.com). The hotel is a modern, downtown property with comfortable rooms featuring minimalist Swedish decor -- the glossy-white sculptures of life-sized human bodies adorning the lobby walls made me feel like I was in a funky artist's loft.

Like everything in Reykjavik, the 90-minute puffin trip was pricey (about $33 per person), but it was cool to see thousands of the cute little birds covering the coast of a small island. It's weird to learn that puffin, or lundi as it's known here, appears on the menus of some local restaurants.

But that's not the strangest local dish. Living on an island with limited resources, Icelanders historically have made sure nothing goes to waste. That means svid (sheep's head), slatur (sheep's leftovers tied and cooked in a sheep stomach), sursadir hrutspungar (pickled rams' testicles), and hakarl (putrified shark meat that smells like ammonia and tastes slightly less bad) are part of the culinary culture. There's plenty of fish and lobster too, though to New England natives the tiny lobsters look more like large shrimp (rest assured, they taste like lobster).

I steered clear of the weirder local delicacies but did try hverabraud (a sweet and tasty rye bread baked in underground ovens using geothermal heat) and skyr (a delicious treat that's like yogurt, but sweeter).

If that still sounds strange, keep in mind this is the country that produced Bjork. When you're in Iceland, you know you're not in Kansas anymore -- or Boston for that matter.

Rachel Kadish signs her book, "Tolstoy Lied: A Love Story," during a "Coffee With the Authors" at Atlantica on Oct. 10. Kadish, along with Elisabeth Brink, center, and Suzanne Berne, right, met with South Shore residents to talk about their books, thanks to Buttonwood Books in Cohasset.

Suzanne Berne talks about the journey, which led her to become an author, and the inspiration behind some of her work during "Coffee With the Authors," at Atlantica Oct. 10. Berne is a Newton resident and won Great Britain's Orange Prize for her first book, "A Crime in the Neighborhood."

Coffee and conversation

Authors share their inspiration

Gerry Quigley of Randolph had her copy of "The Ghost at the Table" autographed by author Suzanne Berne, during "Coffee with the Authors" sponsored by Buttonwood Books at Atlantica Oct. 10. Berne was one of three authors featured during the semi-annual event.

Elisabeth Brink holds her book, "Save Your Own," while discussing the inspiration behind the book during Buttonwood Books' "Coffee With the Authors," Oct. 10 at Atlantica. Brink's book tells the story of a geeky grad student attending the Harvard School of Divinity.

Barbara Nicosia reads along with author Rachel Kadish, who presented the first two pages of her novel, "Tolstoy Lied: A Love Story," during "Coffee With the Authors," at Atlantica Oct. 10. Nicosia and Catherine Davis, left, both work at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset, which sponsored the event.

How do suspense writers work? Where do they get their ideas? Listen to three celebrity authors as they read from their books, share personal insights about their art and answer your questions. And the setting? The living rooms of our three Custom Gallery concept homes.

Choose from two sessions:

SESSION 1

11:30AM - 4:30PM

including a lunch buffet

SUSAN ORLEAN - The Orchid Thief

Best-seller about the dangerous, costly obsession with all things orchid. Orlean's most prominent work went on to become a major motion picture.

WILLIAM MARTIN - Harvard Yard

Martin crafts a massive New England mystery that ranges from the Pilgrims to the Boston Tea Party to the Civil War and beyond.

ANDRE DUBUS III - House of Sand and Fog

Dubus, Massachusetts' own suspense master, spins a literary thriller that combines vibrant contemporary characters with a chilling dose of film noir.

SESSION 2

5:30PM - 10:30PM

including a light dinner buffet

DENNIS LEHANE - Coronado

Traditional myths about class, gender, freedom and violence are explored in this remarkable assortment of stories by the Mystic River author.

JOYCE MAYNARD - Internal Combustion

Maynard delves into an unbelievably personal and deeply psychological true story of murder, brimming with Americana in the motor city of Detroit.

JOSEPH FINDER - Killer Instinct

Finder has created a rollicking thriller about climbing the corporate ladder while exploiting cutthroat tactics and the skills of an ex-special forces comrade.

$100 per guest per session. Each session is a separate admission.

Worship Notes

How teens can make a difference

First Parish Unitarian Universalist is hosting a workshop this Sunday, Oct. 15, from 3 to 7:30 p.m., at the Parish House, 23 North Main St., for district-wide youth on the related topics of human rights and work camp opportunities offered through the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee. Youth are invited from throughout the Unitarian Universalist Association's Ballou Channing District, which spans southeastern Massachusetts, the Cape and the Islands.

Nguyen Weeks, Associate for Youth Outreach, of the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee (UUSC), will discuss the UUSC's work in economic and environmental justice, civil liberties, and human rights in humanitarian crises. She will address what teens can do to advance human dignity and justice. "As the focus of our work," says Nguyen, "human rights creates many bridge-building opportunities to harness gifts, talents, and insight that youth bring to the table to move the world towards justice. No movement is as effective as one with youth presence and participation."

"No movement is as effective as one with youth presence and participation."
— Nguyen Weeks

Ms. Weeks will hone in on the JustWorks camps of the Service Committee. Over the past 10 years, JustWorks camps have provided hands-on learning and advocacy opportunities for more than 2,000 people across the county and overseas on issues of racial, social, and economic justice. Participants work directly with residents of the communities they serve. JustWorks is a key element of the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee's mission to advance justice and protect human rights in this country and globally.

Founded in 1941, the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee is a nonsectarian organization that promotes human rights and social justice worldwide. With over 40,000 members and supporters, the UUSC maintains partnerships in the United States, South and Southeast Asia, Central Africa, Latin America, and the Caribbean. Its programs are grounded in Unitarian Universalist principles that affirm the worth, dignity, and human rights of every person. For more information, visit www.uusc.org.

For this Sunday's workshop, participants are asked to bring food to share for a potluck dinner. A suggested contribution of $5 per person will go directly to the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee. The workshop will conclude with youth worship. To learn more, contact Nan Moore, Director of Religious Education, First Parish Unitarian Universalist, at 781-383-1100.

Nguyen Weeks will address what teens can do to advance human dignity and justice.

World peace subject of interfaith conference

"Contemplative Prayer and Meditation as an Interfaith Grounding for World Peace" is the title of an upcoming interfaith conference to be held at Regis College in Weston on Sat. Oct. 28th from 9:30 a.m.-4:15 p.m.. The keynote speaker will be Fr. Thomas Keating, a Trappist monk, Catholic priest, and noted author. Ven. Tenzin LS Priyadarshi, the Buddhist chaplain at MIT, Rabbi Sheila Peltz Weinberg, Director of the Institute for Jewish Spirituality in New York City, and Imam Salim Chishti of the Nur-al Imam Sufi Community of Knoxville, Tenn. will be presenters and engage in dialogue with each other and the audience.

The purpose of this conference is to bring together contemplatives from different faith traditions to help make connections, deepen dialogue and understanding, and work together for peace. How can meditation practice create an environment in which peace is possible? How can we awaken peace in the midst of great conflicts? Presenters will share wisdom and seeds of hope arising from their contemplative practices and interfaith dialogues. Time for actual prayer and meditation is included in the day's program. Contemplative Outreach of New England organized this conference.

Registration: Suggested donation is $40, ($20 students) and $10 prepaid boxed lunches are available: choose vegetarian, roast beef, or turkey. Send your name, address, e mail, and check to Marcy Venskus, P.O. Box 505, Dracut, MA 01826. Questions: 978-851-3391 ext. 35, or to local committee members Fran Riccarelli at 781-749-5377 or Rosemary Edwards at 781-749-5377.

St. Anthony's host parish for Fatima Statue

St. Anthony Parish, 129 Main St. has been selected to be a host parish for the Fatima Statue Wednesday, Oct. 18. The statue was given to the United States in November 1967 by the Bishop of Fatima and blessed by the Pope before the journey.

It has traveled from parish to parish ever since promoting the Message of Fatima. Mass will be at 7:30 p.m., followed by a talk on Fatima, Eucharistic Adoration and hourly Rosaries until midnight.

Eucharistic Adoration and the Rosary will take place Oct. 19, after the 7 a.m. Mass until noon.

Acting is in the pipeline

From construction to center stage for Hingham actor

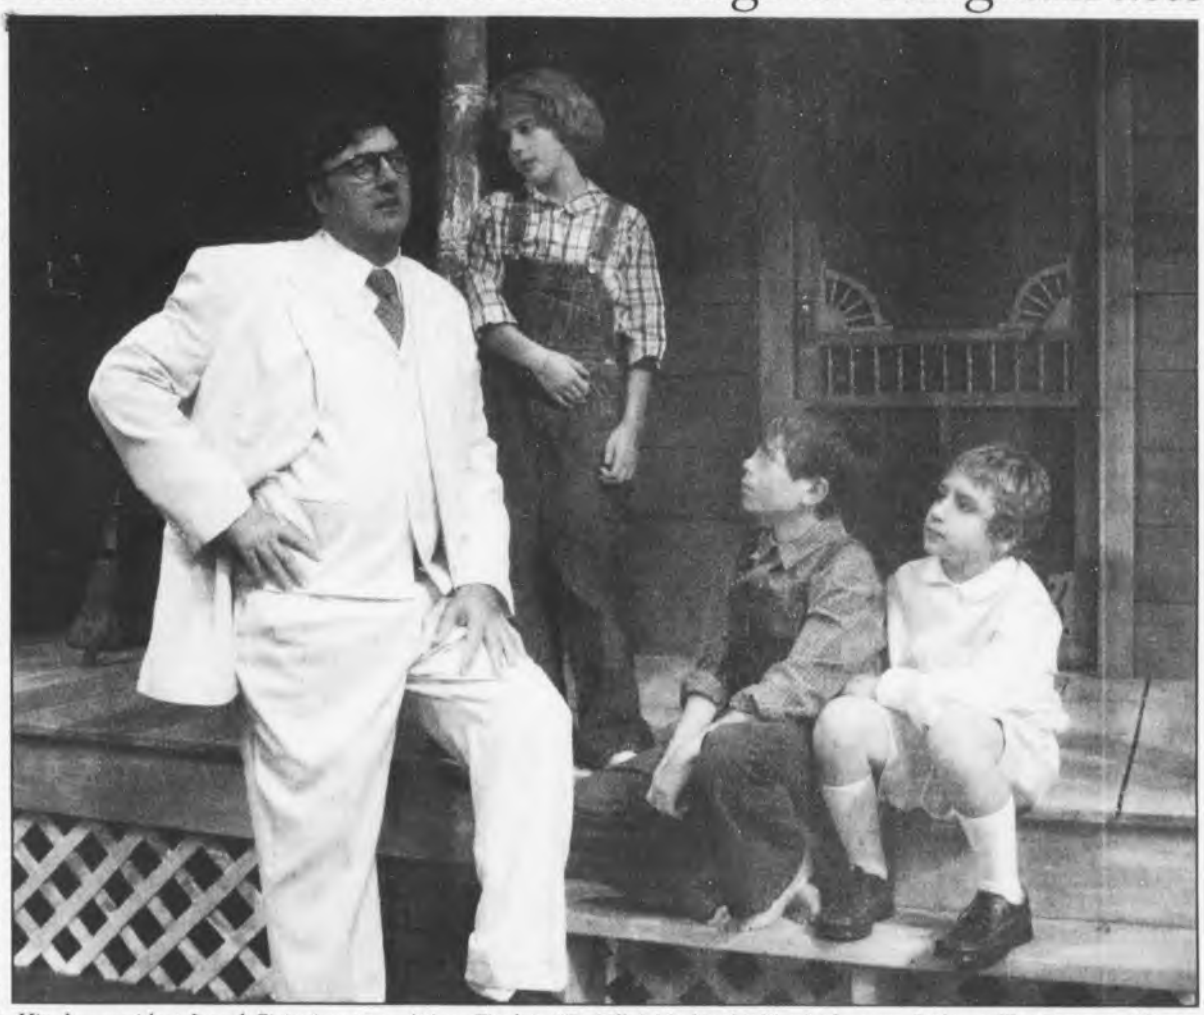
By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

With the proliferation of cell phones, actors can talk up their latest projects from just about anywhere. Most performers still speak to the press from dressing rooms and rehearsal halls, but others call from tour buses, their own cars or even a ditch on a construction site, which is where actor and construction worker Joseph Siriani was last week when it came time to promote his starring role in the Company Theatre production of "To Kill a Mockingbird," opening Friday in Norwell.

"I take all kinds of flack from some of the guys I work with about my acting," said Siriani while on lunch break from a Hingham water main job. "If I could be just one thing, however, I'd be an actor."

Like many other actors, Siriani, 48, finds himself holding down not one, but two other jobs. By day, he works construction on the South Shore. By night, the married father of two is either acting or officiating as a referee at high school and college basketball games all over Massachusetts. Until basketball season gets underway, Siriani will be portraying stalwart attorney Atticus Finch, who pokes at the conscience of a Depression-era Alabama town, in the Company Theatre's staging of Harper Lee's 1960 novel "To Kill A Mockingbird."

"It's great for me to have the opportunity to play this role," explains Siriani, whose previous stage credits include the title role in "The Music Man" with the Cohasset Drama Club and the part of Oscar Madison in "The Odd Couple" at Norwood's Fiddlehead Theatre. "Atticus is very different from most of the other parts I have played, which have often involved physical comedy."



Hingham resident Joseph Siriani portrays Atticus Finch in "To Kill A Mockingbird", which opens Friday at The Company Theatre in Norwell.

The play, adapted by Christopher Sergel from Lee's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, tells the story of a Southern lawyer and father of two who stands against his fellow townspeople by defending an innocent young black man accused of raping a white woman. Even though he loses the case, his actions begin to soften the community's long-held racial bigotry. The story was made into a 1962 feature film that won five Academy Awards including Best Actor for Gregory Peck.

It may have been written more than four decades ago when Siriani was himself just a young child growing up in Arlington, but he says the story is one he relates to now on a very personal level.

It may have been written more than four decades ago when Siriani was himself just a young child growing up in Arlington, but he says the story is one he relates to now on a very personal level.

If you're a parent, this story really resonates with you. I have two daughters, 17 and 8, and I still often try to see the world through the innocent eyes of my 8-year-old. It is so important to be open and available to your children."

Told through the eyes of Scout, a feisty 6-year-old tomboy, the story is presented first as a sweet tale of life in the sleepy little town of Maycomb in the early 1930s. The story unfolds through a series of neighborhood adventures involving Scout, her brother Jem, their friend Dill and a host of eccentric townspeople. The community soon finds itself the setting for the trial of Tom Robinson, a young black man falsely accused of raping a white woman. Lawyer Finch - Scout and Jem's widowed father – is tasked with defending Tom before an all-white jury, from whom a guilty verdict is a certainty. The two children watch as their highly principled father takes a stand against the racism that is so rampant in his town.

In addition to being a powerful indictment of intolerance, Siriani believes Finch's tale is also one about the meaning of fatherhood.

"This story is a wake-up call for Atticus as a single father. He has live-in help, but he is still raising his children alone. He realizes that he needs to integrate himself into his children's lives," explains Siriani who has lived in Hingham since 1983. "I work so much and am away from home so often that it's very easy for me to relate to Atticus and the awakening that occurs in him. He shows real strength in the face of everything that happens to his family and his town."

In the role, Siriani is showing range as an actor in playing a character very different from himself.

"Atticus is a very internal person, while I am very outward with my feelings. I show my emotions readily and often. My two directors, Steve Dooner and Zoe Bradford, are forever telling me to keep Joe in check and remember that Atticus is a very stoic character."

"To Kill A Mockingbird" will be at The Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park, Norwell, through Oct. 29. For tickets, call 781-971-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com.

Scorsese scores with 'Departed'

"The Departed" (A)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

To a list including "The Friends of Eddie Coyle" (1973) and "Mystic River" (2003), we can now add "The Departed."

A great, Boston-set crime drama and a "GoodFellas"-like return to form for Martin Scorsese, "The Departed" — the title refers to the "dearly departed" — is a wonderful example of genre filmmaking, another triumph for Jack Nicholson and an adeptly rooted transplant of a 2002 Hong Kong action flick.

In the Whitey Bulger-like role of ganglord Francis Costello, Nicholson wears a devilish goatee and mustache and makes his entrance practically trailing clouds of fire and brimstone.

Shaking down a Southie shop owner, Costello can't resist ogling the man's barely adolescent daughter. Costello also spots Colin Sullivan (Conor Donovan), an altar boy he bends to his will, buying him candy and a Wolverine comic book. A Shakespeare buff, Costello impishly tells Colin of the motto James Joyce attributes to Satan, "Non serviam" (I will not serve).

Officer Dignam (Mark Wahlberg) gives a piece of his mind to the new cop on the block, Colin Sullivan (Matt Damon).

In a series of gory, haiku-like scenes accompanied by the Stones' "Gimme Shelter," we see Costello's rise to power, using a saw, hatchet and several bullets to several heads.

Sent by Costello to the police Academy to be his mole, a grown Colin (Matt Damon, resplendent in a bad-guy role) is promoted to the ranks of Boston's elite anti-crime unit.

At the same time, troubled Billy Costigan (a strong turn by Leonardo DiCaprio), another young Bostonian whose life choices can be summed up as cop or criminal, has chosen to become a policeman in spite of his family's many felons.

When hothead Billy is recruited by the film's other, surrogate father, the pontifical Capt. Queenan (a fine Martin Sheen), and Sgt. Dignam (an amusingly barking mad Mark Wahlberg) to infiltrate Costello's gang, he experiences growing fear and panic and seeks the aid of police counselor Madeleine (Vera Farmiga). The film pits the twin undercover men in a blind struggle with each other with Costello playing real-life Joker-cum-puppetmaster, pervert and blood-drenched killer.

What's great about "The Departed" are its riotously profane dialogue, fabulous cast, including terrific turns by Ray Winstone and Alec Baldwin, and writer William Monahan's relevant references to the city's racist reputation and pedophile priest scandal. A scene featuring Costello at his breakfast table will remind some of James Cagney's famous grapefruit moment from "The Public Enemy," but with another, grislier prop.

Granted, the finale boasts more corpses than a Jacobean drama, and the cellphone-jockeying doppelganger plot of the Hong Kong original weighs a bit around the movie's neck.

That aside, "The Departed" is a welcome addition to the growing list of must-see Scorsese films.

Rated R. "The Departed' contains profanity, sexual situations and graphic violence.

ART WITH A HEART

Special talent showcased

Arc fundraiser at Art Center

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For the past eight weeks, a group of artists has been hard at work creating one-of-a-kind pieces for a very special exhibit at the South Shore Art Center. Currently awaiting matting and framing, the masterpieces will be hung in a gallery at the Art Center by the end of this week, to be showcased during the second annual "Art from the Heart" art show and wine tasting fundraiser.

The fundraiser will be held Saturday, Oct. 21 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Art Center, located on Ripley Road. Thanks to a collaborative effort between the Art Center and the Arc of the South Shore, the event will spotlight the artistic talents of children, teens and adults with mental retardation and developmental disabilities. Tickets are $50 each and proceeds will benefit The Arc, which provides resources for children and adults with developmental disabilities and their families.

"Could you think of a better cause to support?" said Katie Hanley, Coordinator of Community Services for The Arc, adding not only will the proceeds benefit a good cause, the night will be really fun. Along with the art show and wine tasting, there will be a silent auction with some big-ticket items up for bid including: a Venetian silver bracelet from Tiffany & Co.; an overnight stay at the Fairmont Copley Plaza; dinner for two at Cedar's Steak House at Foxwood's Resort and Casino; and a wine tasting tour for 10 at Westport Rivers Vineyard and Winery in Westport, Mass.

Arc Development Coordinator Claudia Cuscianna added there will be

BUDGET BATTLE

Capital requests reined in

New boat floated for harbormaster

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Every town department has needs that are not being met with the current levels of funding allocated. With money to spend, the Capital Budget Committee has received multiple requests for funding, and presented its recommendation to the Board of Selectmen Monday.

Based on current finances, Town Manager Bill Griffin told the committee he felt comfortable recommending spending $300,000 in free cash for capital projects at the Special Town Meeting, to be held Nov. 13 (see sidebar). With roughly $1.6 million in requests, the committee had some tough decisions to make. Ultimately, voters will decide if the money should be spent.

The CBC met each request by measuring the item against a series of guidelines, which it created. The guidelines strive to separate "need" from "want" and quantify the cost of the need; determine if common needs exist among departments which could be addressed broadly, providing greater town-wide cost efficient benefits; and determine if any departments' needs, if unmet, compromise the health, safety or welfare of the citizens/employees of, or visitors to the community. Secondarily, it sought to determine if any needs identified should clearly be acted upon immediately to save substantial future expense to the town.

The CBC met with each department that submitted a request as well as Facilities Manager Brian Adams who made a case for more than one depart-

'Always a champion of the district'

Studds remembered for 1/4 century of service

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Former U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, who served 12 terms in Congress, won most of his races by comfortable margins.

But what many may not realize is that it was not until 1978 that he actually won the vote in his hometown of Cohasset with its numerous republicans.

"I went to his home on Black Horse Lane to tell his mother that he had won his hometown," recalls Donna McGee, who serves on the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. "They were thrilled! It meant a lot to Gerry and his family to be recognized by his friends and neighbors."

This week, his family, many friends and hundreds of thousands of former constituents are remembering Studds, 69, who passed away Oct. 14, as someone who brought people together.

He was not shy about criticizing republicans in Washington, whom he viewed as dismantling the federal government, but he felt it was critical that citizens — regardless of their political persuasion — pay attention to what is being done by those elected to represent them.

"What always amazed me was his ability to win people over, especially coming from what has to be the smallest political base in the 10th Congressional District — Cohasset with its two precincts," says Cohasset Selectman Fred Koed. "Gerry had support across the spectrum from the machine politics of the cities, to the wharfs, to the reaches of Nantucket."

Always a champion of the district, Studds — whom fishermen across the district supported through thick and thin — took the time to study Portuguese and learned to speak it fluently. He made cranberry juice the signature drink wherever he went.

"He always felt blessed to represent the most beautiful congressional district in the country," Koed recalls.

In addition to regional interests, Studds was not afraid to support national causes that were not always popular. Congressman Barney Frank, D-Newton, describes Studds as having been an "articulate and effective" opponent of the Vietnam War, and as someone who insisted the government not ignore the AIDS crisis.

Studds narrowly lost to incumbent republican Hastings Keith on his first

Fithi, the snake, turns out to be escape artist

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Plans had been afoot for a while to find Fithi — the three-foot-long, ball python at Our World museum — a new home.

To the best that anyone can guess, the snake found out about those plans and wanted to stay right where she is, here in Cohasset.

Fifti, which means "snake" in Greek, went missing sometime overnight last Thursday (Oct. 12) and has not been seen or heard from since.

There were rumors of a "sighting" outside Deer Hill School this week, but most think Fithi won't likely leave the warm confines of the museum that is located off Sohier Street in the back of the Paul Pratt Library.

Julie Laugelle of Our World went to the police station last Friday morning after arriving at the museum and discovering Fithi had somehow pushed off the top of her tank, climbed out, and slithered away.

Her favorite meal is mice and she had two for supper earlier that week. The mice, dubbed "mousicles," are sold frozen and are available in pet

Alternative Energy Committee to meet

Alternative Energy Committee of Cohasset will host two public forums to inform Cohasset residents of the progress of its investigation into wind power for the town. Forums will take place Thursday, Nov. 2, from 7 to 8 p.m., at the Unitarian Parish Hall; and Wednesday, Nov. 8, from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Congregational Church Hall.

One free compact fluorescent bulb will be given to the first 50 people to arrive.

Selectmen to discuss Warrant articles Monday

The Board of Selectmen will take up a number of draft Warrant articles at its Oct. 23 meeting. There are currently seven zoning articles on the table, which will be the basis for Monday's discussion. Draft article 21 would ask the town to reconsider the wording of the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw. Draft articles 22 through 27 are all citizens' petitions, which would ask voters to consider amending the town's zoning bylaws for a variety of downtown issues. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. and all are welcome to attend. For more information, please contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Motorist not happy with 'fire-lane' ticket

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A local woman complained to police last week after an officer gave her a ticket for parking in the fire lane at Cohasset Plaza near Blockbuster.

Police Chief James Hussey said the officer drove by and saw several cars in the fire lane at the plaza which is off Route 3A. He put the cruiser lights on and beeped the horn to alert the vehicle owners to come and move their cars, several of which were "live parked" meaning the engines were running.

"It is not as if there aren't plenty of parking spaces there," said Hussey, who explained parking in a fire lane is a safety issue because police cars, ambulances and fire trucks need unfettered access to the buildings.

He explained the other people came out, but no one arrived for this particular car, which the officer then tagged.

The woman later complained to police saying she was discriminated against because other cars were not also ticketed.

Hussey what other people are or are not doing is not the issue.

"When I hear that, I ask 'have you gone fishing in your life?'" Hussey said. "Usually the individual will answer 'yes.'

"Then I say, 'did you catch every fish in the ocean?' Sometimes we catch someone and sometimes we don't – but that is no excuse for what you did," Hussey said.

Hussey said in most cases police will give a verbal warning to someone in the fire lane. But he reiterated parking there is illegal. "Emergency vehicles have to have uninhibited access to the front of those stores," he said.

Candy thieves escape

Some young teens, who were caught on video stealing candy from the convenience store at Leo's Exxon, have apparently gotten away. Police looked at the tape but could not identify the youths, Chief Hussey said. The incident was reported about 9:15 p.m., Saturday (Oct. 7). Hussey said because the theft was less than $100, the criminal offense would be punishable by a fine, not jail time.

Mirrors collide

Police are investigating an alleged hit-and-run accident that occurred at about 11 a.m., Tuesday (Oct. 10) near Beechwood Street and Route 3A. The reporting party contacted police to report that a passing car, which did not stop, hit his side-view mirror. The motorist provided police with the plate number and police are trying to get the parties together to exchange papers, Chief Hussey said.

"It appears the two mirrors on the cars made contact near the center line of 3A," he said.

The chief said police are trying to determine who is responsible and whether a citation should be issued.

Cigar thief

Curtis Liquors caught a cigar thief on video in the humidor room concealing cigars in his pocket. The store was able to get the cigars back but the man fled the establishment and drove off. Chief Hussey explained even though, the man did not take the cigars out of the building, it is still shoplifting because he tried to conceal them on his person.

Police have looked at the tape and ID'ed the individual and will be seeking a complaint.

"Concealing merchandise is enough for a shoplifting charge," Hussey said.

Private eyes

Police are looking into a couple of complaints about suspicious vehicles and whether the drivers were private investigators. A mother called police and wanted an individual investigated after a motorist asked her daughter a lot of questions, Chief Hussey said.

In another incident, a police officer asked a driver why he was sitting in his car on Buttonwood Lane and got a flip response to the effect, "this is a free country and I've committed no crime."

Chief Hussey said most private investigators check in with the police department to give police a heads up that they are in town or in a particular neighborhood.

In the second incident police have the plate number and wrote a report and will be following up.

"We know who he is and are concerned as to why he would respond that way to a police officer," Hussey said.

In the first incident, the type of questions the individual asked the girl have led police to believe the person may have been a private investigator.

Police Officer Jamie Cochrane was killed in an off-duty motorcycle accident Sept. 10. South Shore police departments are hosting "A Night to Remember Officer Jamie Cochrane" Friday, Oct. 27 in Dorchester.

Night to remember fallen Quincy officer

Police Officers around the South Shore are banding together to get the word out about a very special benefit event to be held in honor of one of their fallen brothers. On Friday Oct. 27 at 7 p.m., the Quincy Police Department will host "A Night to Remember Officer Jamie Cochrane," at the IBEW Local 103 Hall, located at 256 Freeport Street in Dorchester. Tickets are $25 per person, and there will be hors d'oeuvres, a disc jockey and both a live and silent auction.

On Sept. 10, 2006, Quincy Police Officer Jamie Cochrane passed away from injuries sustained in a motorcycle accident the previous day. Cochrane was an 8-year veteran of the department, assigned to the Special Operations Unit.

Second-hand article gets second look

New version of 'jewelry' bylaw supported

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The draft Town Meeting Warrant is a work in progress. Already, changes have been made to some articles, and more changes could be made before the Warrant is sent to the printers.

The Board of Selectmen voted to rescind a previous approval on draft article 15, which deals with the sale of second-hand items, and approved a new version at its Oct. 16 meeting. The Board of Selectmen placed the article on the Warrant at the request of Police Chief James Hussey.

The original article would have put a 14-day freeze on the sale of second-hand items, to enable those whose property may have been stolen ample time to file a police report and for the items to be tracked down. However, after speaking with local second-hand dealers, Hussey was informed the article could negatively impact their businesses.

By requiring the 14-day waiting period, items purchased at estate sales would in theory have to be warehoused, which could result in additional costs and a significant delay in the sale of those items. The intent of the article is to cut back on selling stolen goods, and Hussey said estate sales obviously do not qualify.

"Their concerns were very valid," said Hussey, which is why the bylaw was changed. The new version does not require a 14-day hold on selling items which are not considered "junk" or "second hand articles," which includes stamps, coins, books, clothing, furniture or factory made mass produced ceramics, glass and decorative items. Items such as used electronic equipment bearing serial numbers, jewelry, old metals, items made of gold, silver or platinum, decorative porcelain figurines, furs, rugs, one of a kind objects of art would all be included in the "frozen" sale items under the bylaw.

The wording for the article that will be presented to Town Meeting was taken from an article in place in the town of Brookline. Hussey said he feels the new language, "Will not affect their operations. The original language was just too vague and would have put an unnecessary burden on them," he said of the shop owners in town.

Hussey said to be clear, there has been no problem with second-hand sales to date, but being preemptive is never a bad idea. He said while it used to be very common for thieves to bring stolen goods to pawnshops to sell them quickly and take the cash, pawnshops have become more restricted in recent times, which has led criminals to look to "secondary markets" when selling their loot, such as jewelry or antique shops. The bylaw will help clamp down on stolen items changing hands or pieces being melted down.

The fall Special Town Meeting will take place Monday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School. The Warrant was scheduled to be sent to the printer Friday (today) and will be mailed to every household two weeks prior to the meeting.

School Committee votes new budget transfer policy

The School Committee voted unanimously to approve a new budget accounting, transfers and reporting policy at its Oct. 4 meeting.

The new policy will require the superintendent receive School Committee approval before making line-item transfers. The policy would establish 10 "cost centers" and essentially, transferring money out of one cost center to another would require the superintendent to first obtain approval from the School Committee.

However, according to Massachusetts State Law Chapter 71, Section 34, the superintendent should have been asking the School Committee for permission to make transfers even before the new policy was in place. Chapter 71 states the power to transfer amounts between line items in the school operating budgets belongs exclusively to the School Committee and cannot be delegated to any other municipal board or officer. The new School Committee policy will make it absolutely clear all transfers will require School Committee approval, the board said last week.

New member joins Harbor Committee

Adam Donovan is the newest member of the Harbor Committee. A lifelong resident of the town, Donovan is a lobsterman that began fishing four seasons ago and said he feels there is a need for representation for the town's commercial fishermen on the committee. "I've sat in on a couple of meetings and it was pretty painless," he quipped during Monday's selectmen's meeting, adding he is excited about becoming involved as a member.

CEA board organization

The Elder Affairs Board got organized Monday night. Recently, Town Manager Bill Griffin became aware the board is supposed to have nine members with each member appointed to a three-year term by the Board of Selectmen, with three new members appointed each year. However, in reality, the board has seven members appointed by the board and sworn in by the Town Clerk, including: Delores Roy, Jean Thompson, Nancy Barrett, Edward Mulvey, Anna Abbruzzese, James Kearney and John Campbell.

Griffin said the first six members all have terms, which expire in 2007, while Campbell's term expires in 2009. In addition, Marjorie Murphy and Joseph Nedrow have both been serving on the board for several years, but Griffin has been unable to determine whether the board ever voted to appoint them, as the Town Clerk has never sworn them in.

To remedy the situation, the board officially voted to appoint Murphy and Nedrow to the board. In addition, the board voted to stagger the terms of board members. The terms for Barrett, Kearney and Mulvey will expire in 2007, and the terms for Abbruzzese, Roy and Thompson will be up in 2008. The terms for Campbell, Nedrow and Murphy will be up in 2009; Griffin noted they were the three most recent participants on the board.

Selectmen approve giving schools aid

The Board of Selectmen voted to give its recommendation to allow Town Meeting to decide whether the school department should receive the $200,000 in Chapter 70 (education state aid) funding the town received. The Board of Selectmen did not have any discussion on draft Warrant article one, as it had agreed months ago to approve giving the schools the money when it came in.

Keeping kids safe is priority for school department

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Look for security system reimbursement

With incidents of school violence on the rise across the country, keeping Cohasset's students safe has taken on new meaning. To that end, the school department has installed new security systems at all three schools, which will allow the Cohasset Police Department to monitor the buildings — inside and out — 24/7.

The security systems at Deer Hill and the middle-high school were paid for with funds left over from both school renovation projects. However, to bring the Osgood system up to the level of the other two schools, an upgrade was required for which funding had not been earmarked in the budget. The School Committee paid for the roughly $65,000 system out of its operating budget, but will ask the fall Special Town Meeting Nov. 13 for reimbursement for the Osgood system. Should Town Meeting vote no, the School Committee has funding in a reserve account which it could use to pay for the system, but which it would prefer to spend on something more academic.

At the time the school department was looking into installing the new systems at Deer Hill and the middle-high school, Town Manager Bill Griffin suggested the School Committee jump on the chance to have the Osgood system completed at the same time to ensure they would all be compatible. He said it would also likely save the town money to have all three systems installed at the same time.

In addition, the School Building Committee was looking at systems for Deer Hill and the middle-high school, which were very similar to the system currently being used by the Water Department. Having the schools and Water Department all on the same system, which the police department can monitor, would also be cost-effective and eliminate the confusion of running more than one system at the station.

"Given everything that happened last year, we need to do whatever we can to make sure our buildings are safe and secure," said School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy. MacCarthy was referring to various incidents, which took place at the middle-high school last year including incidents of vandalism and anonymous notes left at the school indicating violence. She said with the Deer Hill and middle-high school systems on their way, "We didn't want Osgood to not be safe."

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz echoed MacCarthy's statement. "The School Committee felt this was a capital project that should be paid by the town, so we're asking the town to reimburse $65,000 to the school budget. We wanted to make sure all the buildings had it, and we're glad we did."

Griffin noted the issue of installing the system or not really came down to a timing issue. He said when the contractors were at the Deer Hill and middle-high schools, it was the summer and students were out of all three schools, making it much easier to get the job done. He said with the Special Town Meeting months away at that point, if the project was going to be done with the others, having the school department pay for it was the only way it could be accomplished.

"I stated on several occasions there was no guarantee (the town would approve spending the money)," said Griffin, but added had the Special Town Meeting been right around the corner at the time the decision was being made to spend the money, he would have supported putting it on the Warrant to ask the town to fund the project.

MacCarthy told selectmen, last year there was practically no security system in place at Osgood. "There was no buzzer and all last year, parents manned the door. There was very limited security in the original project," she said.

Chairman of the School Building Committee Scott Collins explained the system. He said it is an all Internet-based system, which means anyone with the client software can log on to the Internet and see a live shot of the schools. This means the police department or school administrators can be anywhere with Internet access and still be keeping a close eye on the buildings. The cameras digitally record onto a hard drive, and typically systems such as this will be set to respond to motion. If there is no motion detected for a certain amount of time, footage is deleted so as not to take up unnecessary memory space. However, if motion is detected, it can be set to automatically keep footage from the 15 minutes leading up to the event. The system can also be set to send an automatic alarm to the police department when motion is detected.

Slanetz noted not only will the cameras be able to help the police department keep a close eye on the buildings, but should the unthinkable ever happen and an intruder ever entered one of the buildings, having cameras throughout the schools which could monitor things constantly could help the police department determine a course of action.

Collins said the school department has a warranty for the systems and an agreement to receive technical support at a set rate per hour. He said the cameras are not complicated and the building maintenance department will be able to maintain them.

While members of the Board of Selectmen agreed the project should be considered a capital expense, Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he was not happy with the way the school department went about things. "Other committees don't spend their money and then come to us" for reimbursement, he said. However, Griffin reiterated in order to have all three systems installed at once, timing was an issue and the school department needed to act quickly.

MacCarthy added, "It's not like we purchased something we couldn't pay for, but it is a capital item."

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer asked whether the Advisory Committee had been notified about the project, and MacCarthy said she was heading downstairs to the lower level at Town Hall to meet with the Advisory Committee after the Selectmen took a vote. Selectmen voted 3-0 in favor of including the project as a capital budget request on the Town Meeting Warrant. It will be up to voters to decide whether the funding is allocated.

Advisory Committee

The School Committee met a tougher crowd when it came before the Advisory Committee. The draft meeting minutes state Advisory Committee Chairman Merle Brown presented a motion, which read, "The Advisory Committee is very disturbed that the School Committee went ahead and made a decision to spend money on the security system without consulting either the Selectmen or the Advisory Board. It is fine that they make a decision to spend their money (operating budget), but if they are then going to seek reimbursement from the town, it should first have the blessing of the Selectmen and the Advisory Committee."

The motion was seconded by Pat Waters and the committee voted 8-0 in favor of not recommending the article to Town Meeting.

The fall Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School. Warrants, or Town Meeting agendas, will be mailed out to every household in town two weeks prior to the meeting.

Absentee ballots are now available

Absentee ballots for the State Election on Tuesday, Nov. 7 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, November 6, 2006 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
- Physical disability.
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Nov. 7 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Welcome home to Cohasset's Jamie Litchfield!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

IN FULL SWING

Hey Cohasset. The fall is in full swing and as you will read in this week's column, many events and programs are taking place. I know that many personal and social events are happening around town as well. Make sure to send it all in to me here no later than Tuesdays at 5 pm with all photos going to mford@cnc.com for the copy in that week's paper

HARVEST SUPPER

The Annual Harvest Supper and auction, an autumn tradition, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church Street. The public is invited to get together for dinner on Thursday evening, Oct. 26 at 6:30. Dinner will include ham, string beans, Harvard beets, red bliss potatoes and dessert. Following dinner, participate in an auction of locally harvested produce, pies, homemade goods and various donated items. Dinner is $8 for adults and $4 for children. Required reservations may be made by calling 781-383-1298.

DRAMA CLUB NEWS

Some news has come in to me about The Cohasset Dramatic Club on a few counts. Earlier this month at the annual meeting of the club, a new president, executive committee and Board of Directors were elected. Susan Jaffe is the newly elected president, Lisa Pratt is the vice president and Mark Bono is the secretary. Elected to the Board of Directors were immediate past president, Jean DiGiacomandrea, Chris Hetherington and Rob Hillman. Congratulations to all.

In their first "official act" as vice president and president of the club, Lisa Pratt as director and Susan Jaffe as producer are teaming up to put on the CDC's fall production of "The Women" by Clare Boothe Luce. This show will be held on Nov 10, 11, 17 and 18 at 8 pm and Nov 12 at 2 pm. The CDC will also present "The Pajama Game" in March and Disney's "High School Musical" in the summer of 2007 as part of Cohasset Recreation Department's summer program.

US Marine Corps
Lt. Cpl. Harold "Jamie" Litchfield.

WELCOME HOME

The best news came to me this week from a very happy and proud family. Lt. Cpl. Harold James Litchfield, known to all as Jaime is back from Iraq where he served as a United States Marine! After arriving in Maine and then heading to California for some regrouping time, Jaime will be back in town with his mom Peggy, sister Tricia, Aunt Julie, Uncle Steve and his grandfather, Harold Litchfield. Jaime, words will never express to you how proud of you your family, all of your friends and this town are of you and all who serve for our country. We love you Jaime.

Jamie graduated from Cohasset High School in 2004 and after a summer of working around town with his grandfather, he joined the Marines.

DEAN'S LIST

Alicia Sanchez, a junior at Salve Regina University in Newport R.I. was recognized at a ceremony on Sept. 30th for achieving dean's list the spring semester of this year. The requirements are a 3.6 GPA and Alicia's GPA was a perfect 4.0. Alicia's parents, Armando and Ellen are so proud of her, she's been on the dean's list every semester since freshman year. Congratulations on this news Alicia!

COACHING CLINIC

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club is sponsoring a coaching clinic for all Recreation basketball coaches. The clinics will take place at the CMHS gym on Wednesday Oct. 25 and Thursday Oct. 27 from 7-9 pm. The clinics are mandatory for all coaches who have signed up and is open to anyone interested in coaching youth basketball who hasn't yet signed up. Clinics for Coaches for grades 4-8 will be from 7-8 pm and for grades 1-3 will be from 8-9 pm each evening. You only have to attend one session. Coaches will be provided with handouts for the skills and rules that are applicable by grade and will be shown various drills available to coach and teach with.

The program is still looking for coaches for Boys grades 6-7-8 and Girls 1st grade. If you haven't signed up your child to play yet, walk-in registrations are still Taking place at the Recreation Office in the Cohasset Town Hall.

Please Email ellenmaher63@comcast.net. Look for our new and improved website www.cohassetbasketball.com coming soon!

YEAR IN MADRID

Skyler Ralston will be spending this academic year in Madrid where she is studying International Business at ICADE University, a highly regarded business school in Europe. All her classes are delivered lecture style in Spanish. She is an International Business/ Marketing major at Northeastern and by maintaining an average of 3.0 plus earned the right to spend her 4th year of the 5-year program in Madrid. She reports loving being in Spain and hears her Spanish getting better every day. She has had the opportunity to visit Barcelona, Sevilla, Toledo, Switzerland and Germany in her month there so far and is planning her next trip to Morocco. Her Chihuahua, Bailey, is accompanying her on her adventures. No doubt she will have tales to tell when she returns.

JUNIOR GARDENERS

Here is some great information about a program that is bringing green thumbs to our young people in town. After a hiatus of five years, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset is attempting to revive a Junior Gardener program. The free pilot program will be open to all students at the Deer Hill School and will be offered once a month from 2:45-3:45 p.m. in the cafeteria. Following is the Fall schedule: Monday, Oct. 30: Horticulture – planting bulbs for spring flowers with Jackie Fitts Thursday, Nov. 16: Creating a Thanksgiving arrangement with Judy Dickstein; Thursday, Dec. 14: Bringing greens into your home with Lee Jenkins.

The object of the Garden Club is to promote an interest in gardens, horticulture and conservation of natural resources. This is achieved through the programs at the monthly meetings plus horticulture and design workshops and field trips and yearly participation in the New England Spring Flower Show and holding Standard Flower Shows in Cohasset. The club also maintain a relationship with a sister city club in Nagoya, Japan. Among our many civic pursuits, the club cares for the gardens at the Lightkeeper's Cottage, the Historical Society and Constitution Park plus has provided Arbor Day programs and trees and plantings for the schools. A monthly Garden Therapy program is sponsored for the residents of the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

The club acts as an Advisory Committee to the Cohasset Tree Department and has been working on a tree identification program for the town. Through the Junior Gardeners, the courtyard at the Deer Hill School had been maintained. A significant portion of the budget is dedicated to contributing scholarships each year to Cohasset students. All of the activities of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset are financed through the volunteer work of its members in several fund raising endeavors. The most well known is the Christmas House Tour held every other December. Through the endeavors of the full club, we have published two cookbooks, Cohasset Entertains and by popular demand is in the process of being reprinted plus Cohasset Entertains Encore which is currently available. The Eclectic Gardener, the newest publication is a month-by-month gardening journal packed with plant information plus recipes and crafts. In January the club will be working with the Cohasset Historical Society hostessing a dual fundraiser. Presently the club is in the midst of its annual fall bulb sale and will have the plant sale in the spring. To support its community work by purchasing any of its books, which make wonderful presents, or the bulbs which are currently available please call. Dolores Roy (781-383-0838)

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

Make-a-Difference Day is a national day of volunteering in its 15th year. Last year alone, over 3 million people volunteered to help others on Make-A-Difference Day. It has long been a tradition at the Osgood School and this year, the Deer Hill School will be holding its first Make-a-Difference Day. This year, there will be two events in Cohasset. First, there will be a school improvement day on Saturday, Oct. 21. At the Osgood School from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., volunteers will spread mulch on the Osgood playground, paint 4-square and hopscotch patterns, and do general weeding and cleanup. At Deer Hill, from 1:30-3:30 p.m., volunteers will clean up the main courtyard and prepare for a student garden to be planted in the spring, paint 4-square patterns on the blacktop, weed and clean windows.

A second day of activities is planned for Nov. 18 when students of both Osgood and Deer Hill and their families will be working in teams to help with fall cleanup for some of Cohasset's elderly residents. Volunteers will rake, pull down storm windows, change outdoor light bulbs and remove window air conditioners. These are wonderful opportunities for the whole family to Make-a-Difference. If you are interested in volunteering or have any questions, please contact Lisa Rosen at (781) 383-6491.

SCOREBOARD

As part of its continuing commitment to the schools, Pilgrim Bank has donated $1,000 towards the restoration and maintenance of the scoreboard at the Alumni Athletic Field located at Cohasset Middle/High School. Cohasset Chamber of Commerce There will be an after hours event on Nov. 8, 2006 at 5:30 p.m. at Pilgrim Bank, 800 Chief Justice Cushing Way.

A representative of Massachusetts Workforce Training Fund will be present to discuss grant money, which is available from the Commonwealth for various employee training initiatives. Non-members are also invited. R.S.V.P. to Judy Lyden at 781-383-9089 or Nutrilink@AOL.com.

VETERANS PARK

Pilgrim Bank has also donated $3,500 to purchase the flagpole for the new Veteran's Memorial Park. Through the efforts of the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee, the renovations are underway to expand the memorial to honor all of the service men and women from Cohasset who have served during the Korean, Vietnam, Gulf Wars and the current War on Terror. The dedication of the new park, will be on Veteran's Day, Nov. 11.

APPRAISAL DAY

an autographed picture up for bid of Steve Carell, who has appeared in many movies including the newly released "Little Miss Sunshine" and is also the star of the NBC series "The Office." There will also be items to help spark artistic creativity such as paint sets and easels. While placing bids on the items, there will be a flutist playing soothing music, thanks to the Berklee College of Music in Boston.

A pair of diamond earrings will also be raffled off during the evening. Tickets for the "Sweets and Treats" raffle are $10 each, and guests will receive their choice of a complimentary truffle or glass of champagne with the purchase of each ticket. There will also be decadent hors d'oeuvres provided by Reggio Italian Ristorante of South Weymouth.

"Could you think of a better cause to support?"
— Katie Hanley, The Arc

Art teacher Patrice Kelley and Assistant Coordinator to Community Supports Laurel Hickey have been working with some of the artists over the last couple of months to create the artwork for the show. "We've had a lot of fun," said Kelley, who has been teaching Cohasset residents Jay Nothnagle, Peter Plante, Nick Sida and James Strazzulla. All four boys also had artwork on display last year. In addition, artwork has been collected from area special education schools including the St. Coletta and Cardinal Cushing Schools, which will also be on display. Artwork will be available for purchase and will also be auctioned off.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the individuals and families supported by The Arc of the South Shore, headquartered in Weymouth. The Arc has provided advocacy, support, training and services to South Shore children and adults with developmental disabilities since 1951. The organization provides vocational support and employment opportunities at its Harbor Industries site; Early Intervention Services (serves eligible children from birth to 3 years old); Day Habilitation (improves independence levels and functional abilities); Residential Supports (provides housing options); Recreation and Family Support; and Personal Care Attendant services.

Nicholas Sida glues together part of his tile collage quilt during an art class at the South Shore Art Center. This will be the second year in a row Sida has had artwork featured in the "Art with Heart" fundraiser.

Cohasset resident Maria Plante is the Second Vice President for The Arc Board of Directors. She explained while The Arc currently offers many programs for families on the South Shore, it would like to continue expanding its offerings to cover every need families face, and fund-raisers like "Art from the Heart" make that possible.

She said many adults, who are being serviced by The Arc, are reaching ages where Alzheimer's is setting in, and that requires specialized services which additional funding will be able to help support. The Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Department of Mental Retardation, Medicare, Mass Health, Social Security, HUD and other agencies fund programs at The Arc. Most services are entitlement programs for individuals who qualify. Some of the funding The Arc has depended on has been cut, and fund-raisers help bridge the gap.

Plante added state Sen. Robert Hedlund is currently working with the Committee on Ways and Means to secure the funding necessary to allow The Arc to purchase the building in which it operates. "Right now, it belongs

Buttonwood to host 'Flat Stanley' illustrator

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, will host Scott Nash Saturday, Oct. 21, at 10 a.m. Nash is the illustrator for the new picture book adaptation of Jeff Brown's classic, "Flat Stanley." Nash will read this book about an ordinary boy with an extraordinary problem. He's 4 feet tall, about a foot wide and half an inch thick. Flat is fun for a while, but like most novelties, the allure fades and Stanley wants to be a normal boy again.

Many school-age children know Stanley Lambchop, and while he is a new discovery for early elementary pupils, high school students may remember him. The pictures are vivid, and the story is classic. In addition to reading the story, Nash will do a drawing demonstration, and there will be a "Flat Stanley" activity.

Nash has taught illustration and graphic design at the Art Institute of Boston, Northeastern University and Boston University. He has illustrated many children's books, including all six Stanley Lambchop chapter books by Brown, "Betsy Who Cried Wolf" and "Saturday Night at the Dinosaur Stomp".

This is a free event. Anyone who is unable to attend and would like to order a personalized and/or signed copy, can call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online at buttonwood-books.com.

to the state and we can't make the changes we want to," she said. However, with the $50,000 raised at last year's "Art from the Heart" fund-raiser, The Arc was able to complete a portion of renovations to its building.

The Arc of the South Shore's mission is to provide the highest quality services and advocacy for children and adults with mental retardation and cognitive, physical, or developmental disabilities. The Arc is a family oriented, community-based agency, which believes that all individuals have the right to participate fully in their community.

The agency was founded in 1951, and undertakes a broad range of legislative advocacy, information and referral, parent networking, community education and outreach activities. Its success is the result of active parent participation and strong public and private partnerships.

The "Art from the Heart" fundraiser will be held Saturday, Oct. 21 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center, located at119 Ripley Road. For more information, please contact Claudia Cuscianna at (781) 413-2230 or via e-mail at ccuscianna@arc-southshore.org. James Strazzulla draws a Halloween pumpkin during a class at the South Shore Art Center. The Arc of the South Shore and the Art Center are partnering together this weekend to host a fundraiser to benefit The Arc, which provides services for individuals with mental retardation and developmental delay and their families.

South Shore Art Center teacher Patrice Kelley shows off some of the artwork created by her students. The pieces will be on display this weekend during the "Art with Heart" fundraiser, which showcases artwork created by children and adults with mental retardation and developmental disabilities.

Students are busy at work creating pieces for the "Art with Heart" fundraiser, to be held this weekend. There will be wine tasting, a silent auction and a pair of diamond earrings will be raffled off.

Peter Plant is happy to show off a leaf print he created in art class at the South Shore Art Center. This piece is one of many which will be showcased during the "Art with Heart" fundraiser.

Pancake Breakfast scores with soccer boosters

By George McGoldrick
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Picture of George McGoldrick, Haley Haracz and Joe Coggins. Haley is receiving a check for $150 for being the top sales person for the 31st annual Pancake Breakfast.

Cohasset High School Soccer owes a great debt of gratitude to all who supported our recent fundraising Raffle and Annual Pancake Breakfast. We are thrilled to announce that we not only eclipsed last year's totals, we exceeded our most aggressive pre –event goals. This result could only be realized through the generosity of local merchants, the tireless efforts of Booster Club members, the salesmanship of our Varsity and Junior Varsity athletes and most of all the support of the Cohasset Citizenry and their friends.

We would like to personally thank the following local merchants and families for their generous donations to the 31st Annual Breakfast and Raffle:

- Wallace St John, US Flag
- Dr. Kevin Thomas, Cohasset Dental
- Black Rock CC
- Liz Richardson, Photographer
- Cohasset Youth Soccer
- The Coggins' Family
- Sharon Daly, Pastel Artist
- Steve Daly, Auto Cleanser
- DeNiro's Restaurant
- Marty Corry, Red Sox Fan
- The Ofsthun Family
- Atlantic Bagel's inimitable "Steve"

We would also like to acknowledge the effort of our Number 1 "SalesAthlete", senior Defensewomen Haley Haracz, who sold in excess of 100 tickets.

Thank you to the Cohasset School Administration for the use of the Deer Hill Cafeteria, and, Mr. Jones and Ms. Rhodes for their guidance and help in the kitchen. We greatly appreciate the efforts of Susan Wilcox, Ann Brophy, Mike Novak, Debbie Shadd, Nan Roth, John Dunn, and Denise Castro for spearheading the Ticket, Food, and Personnel responsibilities of the breakfast, as well as the spirited culinary consortium that so graciously satisfied a record dining crowd. More than 400 hungry boosters attended the event.

Money raised is used to fund College Scholarships, purchase Varsity Warm Ups, and hire Assistant Coaches.

Look forward seeing everyone next year!

George McGoldrick is President of the Cohasset Soccer Booster Club.

This photo shows Fithi, the python, a year ago when Our World ran a contest to name her.

On the loose in the library

vides services to all pets, including exotic ones, quickly responded but were unable to locate the elusive Fithi.

"The snake could stay secreted away a month or more until it gets hungry again," Murphy explained. "It could hide anywhere and survive within the walls.

"It will certainly seek out any field mice that may have gotten inside but the snake is not dangerous and poses no threat to humans," he said.

Conard spoke to a meeting of the Our World Board of Directors on Wednesday night to reassure members that the snake is harmless.

"It is a constricting type of animal – meaning it squeezes its pray and swallows it," Conard said in a telephone interview. "It is not poisonous or venomous.

"And from what I understand, the snake was hand-raised so it is very friendly and used to people," Conard said.

He explained that pythons are "well known escape artists" and do not typically like enclosures. So Conard was not surprised that Fithi pushed her way through the lid of the glass tank. The snake can also lie dormant for a period of time, meaning she may not come out for a while.

Conard said Fithi might come out to bask in the sun but would likely seek out places that are warm that have some moisture.

About a year ago, the museum held a drawing to name Fithi, who came from the Inly School in Scituate. She needed a new home after a teacher there, who owned the snake, left the school. The former director of Our World, Michelle Bolduc, had worked at a science museum and was used to snakes so Our World was the perfect choice for Fithi's new home.

Laugelle of Our World explained no one is sure whether Fithi is female but museum officials decided to refer to her that way because it sounded "friendlier."

She said a student group, which is home-schooled, came through the museum on Monday and was excited to go around and hunt for Fithi. Laugelle said she called the lady in charge of the group the Friday night before to alert her. "She thought it sounded great – and the kids knew about cold-blooded creatures and how they might look for someplace warm."

"Everyone is worried sick she might be out in the cold."

— Patience Towle, library trustee

Laugelle said Fithi is black and brown in color and is very friendly. She said Bolduc would take Fithi out and let children touch her.

Word about Fithi's disappearance has spread quickly around town.

Police Chief James Hussey appeared on camera during Monday's Selectmen's meeting to put any fears to rest.

"The library staff has posted notices. We just want the public to know the snake is not dangerous, but it could scare someone," he said. Hussey said Fithi is about one-inch in diameter.

In an interview Wednesday, Hussey said Animal Control Officer Murphy has been in contact with Rainforest Reptiles in Beverly for advice on how to capture the snake. Apparently there are no contraptions out there that can attract a snake and safely capture it.

"The snake will probably come out when it gets hungry but in the meantime we are trying to learn from the experts a better way to catch it," he said.

Patience Towle of the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Library which shares the building with Our World, said signs have been posted on both library doors alerting patrons there is nothing to fear if Fithi decides to show herself.

"Everyone is worried sick she might be out in the cold," Towle said. Towle said the trustees learned getting a search party together to look around for her probably wouldn't be fruitful. "She is probably well hidden," she said.

Marlena Alex, who is co-president of the board at Our World, said the museum had been looking for a new home for Fithi. She explained once Bolduc left, there was no one currently on the board who was really a "snake person."

Conard, the Crazy Paws veterinarian, said there is nothing to fear.

"She poses no danger to humankind," he said. "The only inhabitants of the library that should be worried are three-inch-long varmints."

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Thanks, Fithi

We think only in Cohasset could a young ball python named Fithi cause a stir that reached the front page of the local daily paper.

Let's face it pythons on the loose in Quincy or other places would probably take a back seat to more pressing news.

But there is something about this small town that can provide a temporary diversion from all the world's problems and bring a smile to our collective faces.

The good news is there is little to fear from Fithi. In fact, she may do a better job than a cat could in keeping any little field mice at bay. We all know when winter approaches field mice can find their way inside some homes and public buildings; the little creatures are only looking for a warm place to spend the cold months.

We want to be clear: we are not saying there are mice in the library or at Our World!

And in the interest of full disclosure – the editor has, in the past – found field mice in the cupboard under her kitchen sink. She dragged her cat over and demanded action, but Tiger turned up his nose at the idea and walked away. A trip to the hardware store for some mousetraps; a dab of peanut butter on the snapping device; and within a short time, the field mice, were – shall we say – history.

We're thinking Fithi would have made that job more pleasant (for the editor, not the mice).

Fithi escaped from her glass tank at Our World sometime overnight last Thursday into Friday morning. Some suspect she may have heard about the museum's plans to find her a new home and did not want to leave.

Since Fithi went missing, there have been some rumored "sightings" – one of which reportedly occurred outside the Deer Hill School. But most experts think Fithi would not have traveled beyond the warm confines of the library building.

Fithi is a ball python and from what we could find out, could be around for sometime. With proper care they can live up to 50 years!

Here is some other information about ball pythons that we found on the Internet:

• Ball pythons are so named because when threatened they roll themselves into a tight ball, tucking their head inside their coils. Young ball pythons grow about a foot a year for three years.

• Growing to a maximum size of three feet to five feet, ball pythons are not as large as many of the other constricting snakes that are kept as pets, and are quite docile and easy to handle. A captive bred ball python usually flourishes given the proper care.

• The Ball Python (Python regius), is also known as the Royal Python, and is native to the savannahs and rain forests in western Africa, predominatly the countries of Ghana, Togo, and Benin. The origin of the Royal name comes, in part, by Cleopatra who wore them around her wrists.

• Adults can range from three fee to more than six feet in length, with the average female reaching three feet to five feet and the average male reaching two feet to three feet. A mature female will commonly grow distinctly larger than the male. Typically, ball pythons have a gentle disposition which, in addition to their size, makes them a common household pet.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Time to pay attention to train safety is now!

TO THE EDITOR:

It happened so fast. I stumbled over the huge granite boulders chasing my new puppy, who hasn't got the hang of his invisible fence yet. As I lay sprawled across the railroad track while trying to hold this cherished pup up in the air like he was a piece of fine china, I thought "What happened?"

Like having your mouth drop open looking down at the scale after putting on 10 pounds. Wow, what a wake up call! "This really is a railroad bed in my backyard. And I'm lying face down on it!"

All right, maybe it's not in your backyard. Perhaps you only cross the rail on the way to school, to work or Stop & Shop. But, the construction has a ripple effect throughout our towns. It is tough to keep on top of the progress with all the roads being torn up, paved, torn up, repaved, buildings being demolished, 10 wheelers charging down South Main Street like a herd of elephants. Have you driven through North Scituate, Cohasset's 3A, Main and King streets. Perhaps, downtown Hingham?

The activity on and around the rail bed is bustling and dangerous. The workers begin at 7 a.m. Besides working weekdays, they have recently been working Saturdays and on those school "professional days", when your children are roaming the village, going to sports, taking a bike ride. I even saw teenage boys throwing rocks on the track to see what would happen when the "work train" passed over them. In fact, did you know there are vehicles transporting construction stuff back and forth through Cohasset "on the rails" with a mini-style locomotive and some 30 or so ""flat beds" in tow on real train wheels? It's a spooky sound, quiet yet you sense something moving through the trees.. Where's the signs warning of "moving vehicles".

Also, did you know there are supposed to be locomotives in "test mode" after the first of this (2007) new year? There still are no safety fences up. Oh, maybe there's a post here and there, but nothing to stop the little wanderers, be they beast or child, to stay out of the construction sites.

Did anybody consider this "grey" area of when to educate the public? Did we think safety would only apply when the train actually took on passengers? I've gone in circles trying to find who is responsible for educating the public. Rather than point a finger, I thought it would be more efficient to alert citizens myself.

We need to take it upon ourselves to talk with our families and friends. Discuss what is going on around us. Stay away from the tracks and construction.

You can go on line to Operation Lifesaver "www.oli.org" for bits and pieces of information. Eventually, this will be the program presented to our schools. You still need to encourage your school system, whether private or public, your representatives, and police department, to begin their education of your children now, not when the project is complete.

Nostalgia isn't what it used to be

TO THE EDITOR:

Andrew Quigley is right; the old days weren't so wonderful. A few years ago someone produced a book of old photographs from the Bettman Achives in New York titled "The Good Old Days: They Were Terrible" The pictures were of crowded tenements, underfed and ragged children, sweatshops, horse manure in the streets etc. Of course, many still are disadvantaged, but now there are many more government and non-government agencies to help them.

We still do not have universal health care, but medical treatments unknown a few decades ago for many ailments now are available. Many people still are underfed, but most of us now can enjoy a variety of foods, in and out of season, that even the rich could hardly obtain a century ago. Many remain unemployed, and many work long hours at menial jobs, but nowadays the unemployed don't starve, and no-one works the long hours in dirty dangerous conditions at pitiful wages, as was common years ago.

In some respects, those of us who began our education in rural one-room schoolhouses (as did I, and as did John Kenneth Galbraith a few miles distant and a dozen years apart) were fortunate. We respected our teachers, we treasured our learning, we talked earnestly to each other about our schoolwork on the long walks home. Our "readers" were marvelous collections of examples of great literature, larded with inspiring maxims, and enriched by bits of poetry, some to be remembered for life. But few went on to high school, and very few to university and a career in the wider world.

We didn't have play stations or Ipods; our music came from mouth organs, tissue paper on combs, fiddles and a few (non-electric) pianos and organs. We didn't lug backpacks big enough for a polar expedition out to a school bus; we carried lunch in a 5-pound honey pail (to be thawed out near of the wood-stove at the back of the schoolroom) and only small bag with our homework. Sounds idyllic, but when childhood diseases like measles, mumps, polio, chicken pox came calling, there wasn't much in the way of treatment. Some died or were affected for life.

At that time and place, by middle age women were worn from constant work and childcare, most men suffered from rheumatism, improperly treated fractures and other ailments resulting from unrelenting labor. Food, even when plentiful, lacked the variety we now enjoy, and included fresh fruits and vegetables only in season. Vitamin supplements, frozen foods, orange juice and foreign foods were unknown. For most people, a vacation was rare, and did not include a cruise nor a week in the South.

There is much in the present and for the future to be thankful for. Better to learn from the past, than to get sentimental about it.

Pond St. closed to through traffic

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

What's new? If you routinely travel Pond Street into Town from Route 3A you have noticed that it closed again to through traffic at the railroad crossing at the foot of the Pond Street / Spring Street hill. CBB was kind enough to keep it open during the road grinding and repaving that was recently done on Pond Street and Norfolk Road. Thanks, CBB it was really a big help to the Town.

Rail pulling continues along the right of way. All of the rail that will be needed to construct the railroad up to the Hingham tunnel was welded into long pieces in Scituate and dragged up to the Cohasset / Scituate border and stored along side the right of way. See the accompanying photo.

After the rail is pulled and fastened into place it will be covered with about a foot of loose gravel (also called ballast). This will ultimately used to adjust the rail to the correct level. The process of dumping this additional gravel is very interesting.

Ballast Spreading Hopper — A hopper car is filled with ballast and then pulled along the rail bed by a truck designed to travel on the rails. While the hopper car is being pulled the doors in the bottom of the car are opened and the ballast is spread along the tracks as the hopper car continues to move. At the present, the hopper car is filled at the foot of Pond Street hill, where it returns to pick up each new load. See the photo for the hopper car and the truck that pulls it.

Rocky Lane – We have spoken about the new bridge before. In general it is an amazing structure. But, when you drive into Rocky Lane and look at the pathway that children must use to get to their school bus stop, go into Town to the Swim Center, library, or any other place, you can share the concern of the Rocky Lane parents. At Town Hall we have received many citizen concerns about this situation. It's very true that the "old" Rocky lane had no sidewalk. But, the reason it didn't was that the road had no steep hills and the road was flat even to the side of the road. There was only a shallow Cape Cod berm separating the roadway from the flat grassy area alongside the road. Children on bikes or parents with strollers could easily move to the grass off the road when cars came by. The new bridge has now dramatically changed all of that.

Now, even though the road is newly paved, there is a tall granite curb that separates the roadway from the grass next to the road. Bikes and strollers cannot quickly make the transition off of the road. And, the grassy strip is not very smooth. Certainly this area is not conducive for bikes, strollers or pedestrians. There is also a very steep grade of almost 8 percent that leads right into N. Main Street, which as we all know is a very busy roadway. See the accompanying photos.

Typical Rocky Lane edge of road after.

Rail stored at Lincoln Lane waiting to be pulled to Hingham.

The MBTA has offered to build a sidewalk for the Town as long as we pay for it. Our position is there was no sidewalk there before because it was not needed. There should be one there now because it is needed solely because of the dramatic changes that the new bridge has created in this residential area.

Sharing a purr-fect Halloween story

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

One Halloween night, Corey and his little sister Lee walked along their street carrying plastic pumpkins full of candy. They visited the last house before the road ended at the lake, then turned toward home.

"You tired?" asked Corey.

"Yeah," Lee said. It was late. Their house wasn't far, but taking the road back meant winding around a hill and a small farm that grew lettuce and corn.

"You want to take the short cut?"

"Okay," she said.

They set off along the shore of the lake, a half moon reflecting in the water. Soon they came to a cottage set right above the bank. They had played there many times over many years when their good friend Alex had lived there, until he moved away during the summer. Someone had recently bought the cottage and moved in, but nothing was known about the new owner.

On the porch facing the water several pumpkins sat beside the front door. Candles flickered in the den, and through the kitchen window the children could see a woman dressed as a witch, stirring a saucepan on the stove.

The children knocked on the door. They heard a spoon clank against the side of a pan, and the slow shuffling of feet. Finally the door opened and the woman peered outside.

"Hello?" she said.

"Trick or treat," said the children, and held out their plastic pumpkins.

"What?"

"Trick or treat?" they said.

"What day is it?" asked the woman, flustered.

The children looked at each other. "Halloween," said Corey.

"Oh Cripes," said the woman. She looked around behind her. "I don't have any treats."

"But you're dressed as a witch," said Corey.

"I am a witch," she said. "This is how I dress."

"That's a costume," said Lee. "Witches aren't real."

"Can you come back tomorrow night?" asked the woman.

"It's okay," said Corey. "Thanks."

The children started toward the porch stairs.

"Wait," said the woman. The children turned. "You said 'Trick or treat,' right? I can do a trick. Would you like that?"

Corey and Lee didn't answer.

"Just watch this," she said, and pulled a wand from her sleeve. She pointed it at one of the pumpkins by her feet. "Cantaloupe," she said. There was a flash and a hiss, and in the pumpkin's place was a ripe round cantaloupe.

The woman smiled proudly. "What do you think?" she said. The children looked at the cantaloupe, puzzled. The woman frowned. "Too subtle, huh. All right, how about this?" She pointed the wand at her mailbox, which sat on a post beside the porch. "Scarecrow!" she said. Flash. Hiss. The mailbox was a scarecrow. She turned to Corey and Lee. "Yeah? Pretty good, eh?"

"They do that at magic shows," said Lee.

"Gah!" said the woman. She threw open her door and pointed the wand at her sofa. "Cat!" she shouted. The sofa disappeared in a puff of smoke, and a little black cat trotted out of the den and into the kitchen. The children were silent. The woman snatched her left shoe from her foot and flung it out into the yard. "Boat!" she yelled, and a 60-foot schooner flashed into place beside the cottage.

Breathing heavily, the woman looked at Corey and Lee. "You just want a peanut butter cup, don't you," she said. The children nodded.

"Snickers bars are good too," said Corey.

The woman's face brightened. "Aha," she said, and picked up two acorns from the porch floor. "Snickerdoodle," she said, and offered two fun-size candy bars.

"We can't take those," said Corey.

"What? Why not?"

"We're not allowed to eat anything homemade," he said.

"But they're in wrappers, just like you'd get at the store," she said.

"It's okay," said Corey, tugging Lee's sleeve. "Thank you." The two children stepped down the porch stairs, and the woman watched as they hurried off into the night. She turned sadly, shuffled back into the house and closed the door. She stood in the tiny hall for a minute, watching her saucepan boiling over onto the stovetop.

There was another knock on the door. Startled, she turned and opened it. Corey and Lee stood on the porch.

"What. What is it now?" she asked, a little harshly.

"We're not allowed to eat anything homemade," said Corey.

"I know," she said. "I'm not deaf."

"But, if you wanted to... you could give us the cat," he said.

"Her?" said the woman, as the little black cat rubbed its nose against her shoeless left leg. "You two know how to care for a pet?"

"We had a cat," said Corey. "But a few weeks ago he didn't come home."

"Dad thinks he got eaten by something," said Lee.

"That's not true," said Corey.

The woman smiled at the cat. "Oh, nothing will eat this one," she said with a little laugh.

"How do you know?" asked Corey.

"You can trust me," she said.

Lee handed her plastic pumpkin to Corey, gently picked up the cat and petted her. She felt warm and purred happily.

"Thank you very much," said the children. "Happy Halloween."

"Okay," said the woman, smiling, and she shuffled back inside the cottage.

"We could name her Witchie," said Lee, as they walked home along the lake.

"Sure," said Corey.

HEALTH NOTES

Cohasset: Water, water, everywhere!

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

...the answer for our rocky landscape is to make better more efficient use of our limited areas of pervious land to recharge the water into the land.

Last week, the newly organized Stormwater Committee had its first meeting. This committee was formed as a result of a growing recognition that parts of Cohasset were being increasingly affected by surface water draining from the land after rain events into locations where it at minimum becomes a nuisance, but often represents a substantial health hazard. The Board of Health, as with many other Town departments, has received reports of flooded streets, backyards, water draining from neighboring property, and long dormant wetlands overflowing. One of the most flagrant examples is the periodic flooding of Post Office property in the middle of downtown. The problem has become more severe because of recognition that usually, this flooding is accompanied by extremely high bacteria counts in the floodwaters.

Normally, the response to flooding is, one: to clean the existing drain structures, and, two: to build more such structures like catch basins and retention ponds. As more basements and backyards are flooded with polluted water, there is an awakening awareness that our drain system is a part of the problem eventually channeling contaminated water into the Mass Bay. It's far worse in population centers like Lowell and towns along the Merrimack. It was worse in Boston, where the solution was to build pipes far out into the harbor; then to disinfect the water creating a dead zone nearby. Not good for fish, clams, etc , but a bit safer for people.

But in Cohasset, where even for a rich town such as ours the cost of disposing of the enormous quantity of surface drainage by building a pipe into the bay would not only be prohibitively expensive, but, also illegal. And there are cheaper solutions: As the problem has become more widespread in New England, the answer for our rocky landscape is to make better more efficient use of our limited areas of pervious land to recharge the water into the land.

Now for the first time in our history polluted water has become so much of a problem in towns like Cohasset that it is everyone's responsibility to do something about it. The Stormwater Committee has the responsibility to establish policies, which will address flooding in the Town. In the next few months they will be proposing activities designed to correct years of neglect of our surface water problems for literally hundreds of homes in Cohasset.

• Get the Data — The first thing they are doing is to collect evidence. There is an enormous quantity of data on the condition, causes and results of flooding all over Cohasset. Moreover there are extensive areas of town which can be used in the battle to solve some of the flooding problems.

• Planning — Strangely, most of the planning to reach solutions for the flooding problem exists, even to the description of detailed process and procedures to solve flooding in most of Cohasset's worst flooding areas. We know where the worst areas are and what to do about them. However, the agencies in Cohasset that are responsible for such planning have been, at best, dormant.

• Money — Earlier, it was said that flooding had such a widespread effect that it has become everyone's responsibility. At the Town Meeting this fall, there will be a request for a small amount of money, a few thousand dollars, to cover paying for organizing and publishing, creating rules, priorities and guidelines for managing and enforcing stormwater policies and activities. Funding for the work to be done will come from three places: Grants from the DEP and other agencies responsible for oversight of our coastal infrastructure. Fees and licenses for work already begun or planned by private parties in Town, and finally some kind of small assessment for individual properties in town; probably in the range of hundreds of dollars.

• Work to be Done — There is much to be done. In many cases, the engineering has begun. The locations are mostly known, but priorities will have to be reviewed and the actual work begun. The work will cover many years, depending on availability of funds.

• You ! The most important element in solving our water flooding and drainage problems is support of the various projects by the people of Cohasset. You'll be hearing much more about this important work this fall; we need your help, and we'll be asking for it.

Breaking a cardinal rule

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Kerry Healey's campaign for governor may have broken an unspoken but cardinal rule of politics when Deval Patrick's brother-in-law was attacked last week.

For those of you who have decided to pay attention only to the real campaign issues, let me fill you in: Bernard Sigh admitted to raping his wife, Deval's sister, in 1993, served 133 days in jail, rejoined his forgiving wife, and apparently has lived happily ever after.

The campaign tactic seems to have violated one of the tacit rules laid down by that master politician, Tip O'Neill, in his book, "All Politics Is Local," which should be must reading for every politician from fence viewer to governor.

The rule is called "Never attack an opponent's family."

"I heard this first from Harry Truman," said Tip. "I met him with a group of us freshmen when I first came to Congress in 1953 and the conversation turned to Mamie Eisenhower. Truman said he had no use for Ike.

"'But leave his family alone,' the President continued, his voice rising. 'If I ever hear that one of you attacked the wife or a family member of the President of the United States, I'll personally go into your district and campaign against you.'

"I've always followed Truman's advice and the one time I slipped up there was hell to pay. It happened 30 years later when I was speaker, Reagan was president, and James Reston from the New York Times came in to interview me.

"Early in our conversation, he asked me about Nancy Reagan. I made a facetious remark to the effect that when the Reagans were through — which I hoped would be in 1984 — they could return to California where Nancy could be queen of Beverly Hills.

"The next day, when the quote appeared in Reston's column, I felt just terrible. I sent a letter of apology to Mrs. Reagan, but by then, the damage had been done. To this day, I feel bad about it."

Of course, the gutter is never very far away in Massachusetts politics, all the way back to the days when Jim Curley and his enemies were firing at each other and to hell with whoever else got in the way.

When Curley was running for governor in 1924, the Boston Telegram, a daily paper published by one Frederick Enwright, revived a reference to Curley's jail term of 20-odd years before and made a snide reference to his family.

The two happened to meet one day on the site of the Boston Massacre. Curley kayoed Enwright with one punch, sued him for criminal libel, won, and shortly thereafter the Boston Telegram went out of business.

Curley scored one for himself when he was running for mayor in 1913 against John "Honey Fitz" Fitzgerald and he announced, not too casually, one day that he was about to deliver a lecture on "Great Lovers: From Cleopatra to Toodles."

Elizabeth "Toodles" Ryan was a cigarette girl and sometime entertainer at the Ferncroft Inn in Middleton, a favored watering hole of Boston pols, and Fitzie was reported to be messing around with her when she wasn't selling Luckies.

Curley's announcement was followed by a letter to Fitzie's wife, Josephine, and Fitzgerald dropped out of the mayor's race, citing pressure from the "petticoat element."

"It was a risky maneuver," wrote the historian Doris Kearns Goodwin, "for if Fitzgerald had called his bluff and stayed the course, Curley may well have foundered on the rocks of bad taste, losing not only the election at hand but even more, his chances for the future."

Medical Reserve Corps volunteers being sought

Medical Reserve Corps members are encouraged to choose their level of participation.

The Cohasset Board of Health is working with other local towns to mobilize volunteers for a Medical Reserve Corps that would assist in the event of a health emergency.

Disasters such as Hurricane Katrina, tsunamis and the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks have made communities all the more aware of the need for an organized group of qualified volunteers prepared to help. Future needs may include flu pandemic or bio-terrorism. Therefore, the board of health would like to identify credentials and train as many volunteers as possible. Volunteers may be nurses, physicians, pharmacists and physician assistants, whether practicing or retired, those with experience in public health, mental health and allied health professionals or community members without medical training to assist with administrative and support functions.

Information sessions will be held in Hull on Oct. 23, at 10 a.m. and in Hingham on Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. Volunteers may choose to attend a session in their town or another town. To register, call Alison Minkoff at 617-665-3871 or visit aminkoff@challiance.org.

Recognizing that many professionals have limited time to volunteer, the Board of Health encourages Medical Reserve Corps members to choose their level of participation. Volunteers may elect to serve their community both during emergencies and for more routine public health needs such as immunization clinics, screenings and health education, or strictly during emergencies. Because Cohasset is working in cooperation with 27 area communities to share resources, volunteers may also choose to serve only in their town or as part of the regional Medical Reserve Corps.

Examples of practicing and retired professionals, who are encouraged to volunteer, include, but are not limited to: physicians, nurses, dentists, veterinarians, pharmacists, respiratory therapists, epidemiologists, health educators, psychologists, social workers, chaplains, language interpreters, lawyers, funeral directors and administrators. Medical, public health and other allied health professionals are also encouraged to apply, as well as non-medical personnel.

For more information, call Dr. Joseph Godzik, Health Agent, at 781-383-4116, or Alison Minkoff at 617-665-3871 or visit aminkoff@challiance.org.

'No child left behind' versus all children moving ahead

COMMENTARY

ALFRED SLANETZ

Last week your School Committee unanimously voted in new Community Standards of Excellence for Cohasset Public Schools. These goals will fundamentally impact everything that we do as a School District. We believe that the goal of being in the top 10 school districts in the state and top 100 in the nation (by multiple measures) with every student achieving at their aptitude is the right goal for Cohasset. While they are high standards, we have confidence in our students, families, faculty and administration that we can achieve these objectives if we put our mind to it. We empowered the administration to prepare a viable plan to get us there. By making the Schools accountable to our Community Standards, we will move beyond No Child Left Behind to be a district where All Children Move Ahead.

No Child Left Behind — No Child Left Behind is a Federal law passed in 2002 to assure that every student achieves 10th grade competency in English and Math by graduation. The state is required to track a district's Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) towards reducing to 0 (by 2014) the percentage of students who fail/need improvement on MCAS in its general student population and certain subgroups (such as special education students). If a district fails to meet AYP in two consecutive years, that district will be sanctioned. The state department of education then requires the administration of the district to take corrective action and, if that fails, can take over administration of the district.

With the threat of sanctions, school administrators have become obsessed with reducing the failure rates on MCAS particularly in the subgroups with the greatest chance of failure. While it is certainly good for those kids who are failing to be brought to at least the Needs Improvement Category (the minimum passing level), AYP says nothing about the performance of a school for the average or gifted children who are already proficient. In a town like Cohasset average and gifted children comprise 90 to 95 percent of our student population.

In fact, in most suburban schools, because the No Child Left Behind Act was an unfunded mandate implemented at a time when the Federal and State Governments balanced their budgets on the back of the property taxpayer (i.e.- Level Funded/ Reduced School Budgets) and the fact that administrators have become obsessed with realigning curriculums to pass the MCAS, AYP targets have redeployed resources away from the average and gifted students and lowered the overall standards of the curriculum to a principle focus of passing MCAS. Passing MCAS is a standard of a student's minimal competency in English and Math at a 10th grade level in 12th grade but in no way is a standard sufficient for college bound students. Therefore, while the AYP is a measure of a districts operational success (as it reflects the administration's principle focus) and is important for staying in compliance with the No Child Left Behind law, in most suburban towns it measures a districts ability to help the poorest performing 5 to 10 percent of its students. It says nothing about the level of service, which a district provides to the other 90 to 95 percent of students.

All Children Move Ahead — With the goals voted in last week, Cohasset School District's operational and accountable focus shifts to one in which every child moves ahead by achieving at or above their aptitude. The focus on these goals assures that our Community's educational objectives are driving the school district above and beyond No Child Left Behind. Further, the targets we have set drive Cohasset Schools in 5 years to be amongst the top 10 in the state/ top 100 in the nation by multiple measures.

While no one metric is perfect, we believe that metrics, which focus on our level of service to the majority of our student population particularly those of average ability, have an equal or greater importance than AYP. We consider passing MCAS a minimum threshold, which all students should far exceed. The additional metrics which we are tracking include: Acceptance rate to Most Competitive/ Highly Competitive Colleges or the Ivy League (used by the Wall Street Journal); SAT scores (used by the popular press such as Boston Magazine); percent pass rate and percent of students taking AP tests (a.k.a. achievement at the college level used by Newsweek); percent of students in the Proficient and Advanced category on MCAS (used by Boston Globe); competitiveness, number and percentage of students participating in co-curricular offerings, percent of national merit scholarship semifinalists and commendations, percent of attrition to private schools and, perhaps most importantly, the percent of students in every grade level achieving at or above their aptitude in Reading, Writing and Math on a test written to the highest national standards (e.g.- CTP-4, Stanford 10 & Wrap). Ranking systems based upon metrics such as those mentioned above, rank the performance of district for all students and increase our focus on the objectives of the college bound student which reflects 90 percent+ of the student population in a town like Cohasset.

Mastery of written and oral communication, quantitative and verbal reasoning, and a solid foundation in the historical/cultural development of the global community and scientific world all to the terminus AP level is a far more relevant standard for college and for life in today's ever changing world. Learning how to think for oneself is more important than learning what someone else tells us to think. Drive, intellectual curiosity, organization, empathy and leadership experiences in competitive academic co-curricular activities, the arts, athletics and unique/meaningful national/international community service round out the educational foundation for a meaningful and constructive life.

The quantitative and qualitative goals outlined above constitute the basis of our Community Standards of Excellence for Cohasset Public Schools. It is important for the School Committee and the Community to solidly support and empower the Administration as it prepares and implements the plan to achieve these goals in all ways: politically, emotionally and financially. It is my hope that the goals which we voted in last week represent a new social contract between the School Committee, the Administration/Faculty and the Cohasset Community unified towards making Cohasset Schools an undisputed center of excellence in education to the highest national standards.

Alfred E. Slanetz, Ph.D., is vice chairman of the Cohasset School Committee.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on three roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$4.5 MILLION FOR EDUCATION RESERVE (H 5000)

House 157-0, Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of the entire $4.5 million in funding for a reserve account for education aid for cities and towns. This so-called "pothole account" provides funds to communities that meet certain criteria including cities and towns with extraordinary enrollment growth, median income below the state average and decreases in federal aid. Supporters of the $4.5 million said that it would fund grants for communities that are experiencing financial hardships. They argued that these grants are an important safety net for cities and towns across the state and assist communities that are struggling with their education budgets. In his veto message, Romney said that he vetoed the funding because it is not consistent with his original budget recommendation. (A "Yes" vote is for the $4.5 million).

$150,000 FOR SAFETY OF GAY AND LESBIAN STUDENTS (H 5000)

House 126-28, Senate 36-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $150,000 in funding for programming to ensure public schools' compliance with the Board of Education's recommendations for the support and safety of gay and lesbian students and the implementation of related suicide-prevention and violence-prevention efforts. Supporters of the $150,000 said that this funding is crucial to ensure that schools are safe for gay and lesbian students. They noted that some of the funds are used to pay the salary of a coordinator who oversees the many gay/straight alliances in schools across the state. In his veto message, Romney said that he vetoed the $150,000 because the program was not recommended. (A "Yes" vote is for the $150,000. A "No" vote is against the $150,000).

$100,000 FOR LIBRARIES (H 5000)

House 156-0, Senate 35-1, overrode Gov. Romney's $100,000 veto reduction (from $9.2 million to $9.1 million) in funding for state aid to public libraries. Supporters of the $100,000 said that this funding is important local aid to cities and towns and their struggling libraries. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $100,000. A "No" vote is against the $100,000).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

MASSACHUSETTS HISTORY DAY (H 3465)- The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Romney a bill designating October 19 as Massachusetts History Day in recognition of the convening of the first session of the Massachusetts Legislature in 1630. The measure also creates a special commission on civic engagement and learning to study ways to improve civic education and involvement in the state's public schools and in the community. The bill replaced a proposal, originally approved by the House, designating February 6 as Massachusetts History Day in recognition of Massachusetts' vote in 1788 to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

SHAKEN BABY SYNDROME (H 4959)- The House gave initial approval to a bill requiring the state to develop and implement a state-wide Shaken Baby Syndrome Prevention Initiative to reduce death and disability of infants from the resulting head trauma that occurs when someone unintentionally shakes a baby too hard. The measure includes a requirement that all parents at the time of discharge from a hospital or birth center receive educational materials describing the dangers of "Shaken Baby Syndrome."

MUSICAL GROUPS (H 1910)- The House Ways and Means Committee gave a favorable report to a Senate-approved bill aimed at regulating musical groups that perform live under the name of the original group that recorded a hit song. The measure prohibits a group from performing live under the name of the original recording group unless the performing group includes at least one member of the recording group or has the legal right to use the name of the recording group. Supporters argue that "fake" Supremes, Platters, Coasters and other groups are ripping off fans and original artists across the nation. They say many of these faux groups do not include any original members and do not have the legal rights to the groups' names. The legislation provides protection against imitators and imposes up to a $15,000 fine on promoters who violate the restrictions.

EYE EXAMS FOR CHILDREN (H 2671)- The House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill requiring the Department of Public Health to develop a public education and screening program for two eye diseases— amblyopia and strabismus. The screening would be offered at no cost to all children under the age of six. Amblyopia is commonly known as "lazy eye" while strabismus is referred to as "wandering eye" or "cross eyed."

CREATE WORK-FAMILY COUNCIL (H 4216)- The House approved and sent to the Senate legislation creating a 16-member Massachusetts Work-Family Council to focus on work-family issues facing employers and employees with families. The council would conduct public hearings to identify these issues and recommend solutions and public and private workplace practices that support the well-being of both employers and families.

Jim Hamilton's cartoon reflected the spirit of the community when Studds announced his retirement from public office back in the fall of 1995.

Studds remembered for 1/4 century of service

bid for Congress in 1970. Keith did not seek reelection in 1972; and Studds defeated former state senator, republican William Weeks, also of Cohasset, in a close contest.

Polly Logan, republican activist and member of the Republican State Committee, remembers Studds as an articulate speaker who ran a positive campaign.

"He was always a gentleman," Logan says. "There was none of the negativity that gets into campaigns today."

Logan said Studds served the district well. "He was extremely articulate, everyone had access to his office, and he was the ideal congressman in terms of always thinking of his constituents first.

"I don't know anyone who communicated more with his district."

To sit and chat and listen to his constituents, Studds conducted hundreds of open meetings over the years in the four dozen towns across the district.

McGee, who worked with Studds on his campaigns, said he was reelected to his 12 terms by a broad constituency of liberals, conservatives, fishermen and environmentalists.

"He inspired many young people to careers in public service, including my daughter," McGee says. "I will always be grateful to him for his representation of the district and for his friendship and support over the years."

Studds, who is described as both articulate and intelligent, gave a year's notice when he decided not to run for reelection. He made the announcement first on Martha's Vineyard and then at John and Caroline Stouffer's home in Hingham in October 1995. He said he wanted to give voters plenty of time to give careful thought to a successor.

"He always felt blessed to represent the most beautiful congressional district in the country."
— Selectman Fred Koed

That October evening, Studds arrived to cheers, tears, handshakes and hugs. Speculation abounded about who might make a run for Studds' seat. Studds told supporters that at an earlier reception in Quincy he was nearly "trampled" by democrats interesting in running for the 10th District.

US Congressman Bill Delahunt, D-Quincy, was the eventual successor. Delahunt said this week he feels privileged to represent the same congressional district Studds represented "so ably and with such professionalism."

"Gerry was able to build bipartisan consensus on a host of important and controversial laws due to his profound intellect, thoughtfulness and ability to understand every facet of a debate. It is a skill that is all too rare in Washington today," Delahunt says.

Back in 1995, Studds said, "it was simply time to move on" as his reason for retiring from Congress. "Without exception it has been an honor to serve," he said. "The beauty of this district is matched by the incredible decency and commonsense of its people."

Caroline Stouffer, now a Rhode Island resident, said the first time she heard Studds speak in public at the 12th Congressional District Caucus, she knew the party had found the best possible candidate for Congress. (Studds represented the 12th District, and then when the number of Congressional districts in the state was reduced to 10, the represented the 10th district).

"He was incredibly intelligent and thoroughly knowledgeable about issues," Stouffer recalls. "He was also fun and sometimes very funny and extremely witty. I remember one evening at a fund-raiser in Scituate, when he and Michael Dukakis staged what some might call a 'comedy central' act. They had us all in stitches for about 15 minutes. It was quite a performance and a revelation about each of them."

Many headlines and news stories this week talk about Studds being the first openly gay congressman and note he was censured by the House of Representatives in July 1983 for having had an affair 10 years earlier with a 17-year-old male Congressional page. During the course of the investigation, Studds publicly acknowledged his homosexuality.

Koed said noting the times, "coming out of the closet" must have taken a lot of courage.

"I think though through his extraordinary efforts, the South Shore, Cape and Islands and the fisheries have been preserved for future generations and that will be his legacy," Koed said.

Water Department begins water main flushing

Water main flushing helps to remove the mineral deposit build up that may have accumulated in the water mains.

Cohasset Water Department is flushing water mains. The work takes place in the evenings from 7:30 to 11 p.m., on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Temporary street signs will be placed on the main roads in the areas to be flushed each day. Notice will also be provided on local cable access Channel 10. The Web site, cohassetwater.org, will also be updated daily with current information on where the Water Department will be working.

Water main flushing helps to remove the mineral deposit build up that may have accumulated in the water mains. Over the past few months, the levels of a mineral called manganese have been higher than usual. Manganese causes discolored water and can stain clothes and plumbing fixtures.

Avoid washing clothes during flushing times in the area. If clothes do become stained, the Water Department provides complimentary bottles of "Iron Out" available at the Lily Pond Treatment Plant, 339 King St. During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration may occur. Run the cold water faucet for a short time until discoloration clears.

"Flushing the water mains is an important part of the ongoing commitment to providing high quality drinking water, " said Eileen Commane, Water Department superintendent. Customers with any questions can call 781-383-0057 or email info@cohassetwater.org.

Capital Budget Committee puts lid on spending requests

ment receiving funding. "He identified many projects as high priority," said CBC Chairman Steve Gaumer, including roofing repairs at the police station to the tune of $68,000. "With this project, we'll get the biggest bang for our buck, as it will both stop further damage and increase usable space," he said.

The CBC also recommended making $10,000 worth of electrical and carpentry repairs to the harbormaster's office. "You can't even run a computer in there right now," said Gaumer. He added Adams told the CBC if repairs are not made to the building right away, the town might be forced to rebuild the entire building before too long.

The Department of Public Works asked for the replacement of two trucks. However, without enough funding, the CBC felt replacing one truck was better than not replacing a truck at all. It therefore recommended replacing a 1995, 2500 utility truck, which is the smaller of the two, in the amount of $40,000. "Carl (Sestito, DPW superintendent) has no more duct tape to keep it together," Gaumer said.

Town Hall will receive $8,600 to replace or repair a variety of information technology items. "Some computers are not on the same system," said Gaumer, adding Town Hall would also like to purchase a check printer.

The harbormaster's position has been neglected over the years, and the CBC said before meeting with new harbormaster Lorren Gibbons, it had no idea how dire the situation was. She is responsible for Cohasset's waters 3 nautical miles out and from Black Rock to the Glades. She enforces environmental law and she regularly assists mariners. "We have to remember we have a working harbor. A 17-foot skiff can't tow or even take a swimmer aboard in open seas. Our understanding of her needs is now very clear," said Gaumer.

The CBC therefore recommended purchasing a new 28-foot boat with equipment for $70,000. "We've never made a purchase like this before," said Gaumer, and this will allow Gibbons to do her job well. She often collaborates with the police and fire departments during emergencies, and this will benefit their efforts as well and ensure people are able to get the help they need on the water. Due to the timing of the purchase, the boat will be new, but "practical, without being excessive," said Gaumer.

The CBC estimates the boat itself will have a life of 20 years, but the engine will need to be replaced in roughly 5 years. Selectman Gary Vanderweil said an increase in fees could cover the cost of depreciation of the boat.

The CBC also recommended allocating $10,000 for additional docks for Parker Avenue and Government Island. "The additional space could pay for itself over 5 to 10 years," Gaumer said, adding the fee for skiffs is $72.

Another $13,000 was recommended to make roof repairs at the library.

The police department will be purchasing a motorcycle for $15,000, thanks to the CBC. "We like the idea of a motorcycle. It saves us money by cutting down on the wear and tear on the cruisers, and they are more cost-effective to run," said Gaumer.

Police Chief James Hussey added while the motorcycle had previously been leased, that figure has gone up dramatically and the town will save $15,000 over the next 10 years if it purchases the bike. "We would remove a car from our fleet and replace it with the motorcycle," he said.

In addition, the CBC recommended allocating $48,000 for mobile data terminals for police department members. "Frankly, I was surprised we didn't have them already," said Gaumer.

At the fire department, $25,000 has been recommended to allow for a new ambulance billing and reporting system. Acting Chief Robert Silvia spoke to the system and explained it would be run on a wireless secure Internet network which would have a unit in the ambulance, and when the ambulance backs into the station, the information from the report filled out in the vehicle during the transport will automatically download onto the hard drive at the station.

Capital Budget Committee recommendations

- Roofing repairs at police station $68,000
- Upgrades for harbormaster's office $10,000
- Replace 1995, 2500 utility truck for DPW $40,000
- IT equipment purchase and replacement at Town Hall $8,600
- New 28-foot harbormaster boat with equipment $70,000
- Additional docks for Parker Ave. and Gov't Island $10,000
- Continue roof repair at Library $13,000
- Motorcycle for police department $15,000
- Mobile data terminals $48,000
- Ambulance billing and reporting system $25,000

TOTAL $307,600

He said if responders are filling out paperwork after a call, there is a chance they will not be able to respond to another call when it comes in, which means another town will pick up the revenue Cohasset could have collected. The town runs its own ambulance service, which means it charges for its service, and having the system will cut down on time and paperwork. "We billed out over half a million dollars last year," said Silvia, and cutting down on paperwork will allow more time for responding to calls.

Silvia said the system would improve the department's overall service, as it will be able to save the medical history of patients who have been picked up before, to allow responders to better serve that patient. It also has a list of state protocols and information for responders who might need to look up dosage or other information while on a call.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormtizer thanked the CBC for its work and the board voted to recommend its recommendations, to be brought forward to Town Meeting for a final vote. "You've done a great job. This is tough," said Dormitzer.

$300,000 spending limit

Town Manager Bill Griffin was recently notified the town's free cash was certified in the amount of $1,007,737. Looking ahead to the Annual Town Meeting and at the town's desire to increase reserves to keep the town's bond rating stable, he felt $300,000 is the most that should be spent on capital projects at this time and made that recommendation to the Capital Budget Committee. Griffin also recommended no capital projects be bonded at the Special Town Meeting due to the town's need to reduce its level of debt service as well as the town's likely need for bond financing in the future for needs such as drainage improvements, flood retention, etc.

The amount of free cash a town receives varies from year to year. At the end of every fiscal year, the Director of Finance prepares the balance sheet as of June 30, the last day of the fiscal year, essentially taking a snapshot of the town's finances at that date. After the Department of Revenue reviews the balance sheet, it certifies the amount of free cash, or surplus, the town has. Those funds can then be transferred by Town Meeting for any lawful purpose.

From year to year, free cash can vary greatly based on how much the town collected in revenue over and above what was predicted, how much money was turned back to surplus from budget appropriations and other Department of Revenue calculations. Free cash is somewhat of a misnomer as it is neither "free" nor "cash" and is essentially an accounting calculation, rather than an actual account with money.

Schools make a pitch for technology funding

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Roughly $1.6 million in requests were brought before the Capital Budget Committee, and with only $300,000 to recommend, many departments will have to go without this fiscal year. Although the School Committee made a case for its requests, it was disappointed with the decisions made.

The CBC did not recommend roughly $500,000 in requests brought forward by the school department for fiscal 2007. Of all the requests, member Steve Fusco — who was on the Technology and Planning Subcommittee of the Strategic Planning Committee — felt not funding technology requests will be very detrimental to the schools. He and School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz made a plea for funding at the Oct. 13 Board of Selectmen's meeting.

"Some of our computers are at the end of life. They're not even supported by Microsoft Windows," he said. However, in the CBC's written recommendations for the Board of Selectmen, it states the committee does not "understand why this might not be better addressed as a capital item in the school budget. Clearly this has little to do with building facility maintenance." The CBC also said the school department's request was largely unspecified and was not cost justified.

But Fusco said between the three schools there are roughly 700 computers and several servers, and their capability continues to decline. Slanetz said some of the computers are running Windows 98, which does not have the most recent virus software. In fact, last year, the schools' e-mail system was infected with a virus, which caused it to be shut down. "It's an embarrassment to have the entire e-mail system down for two months," said Fusco.

To run the latest anti-virus software, the school will need updated computers. "It will end up costing more in the end to add more life to a machine that is already dead," as past practice has led the town to purchase more memory for existing computers rather than upgrading, said Fusco.

Fiscal 2007 school requests turned down by the CBC

• CMHS roof repair	$50,000
• Technology upgrades	$100,000
• CMHS science exhaust fan	$25,000
• Emergency generator at Osgood	$160,000
• Osgood new back turn around/walkway	$50,000
• Playground replacement/repair	$75,000
• Track repair	$45,000
Total	$505,000

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he thinks it would be beneficial for the school department to take an inventory of everything it has and find out if all 700 computers are really necessary. Selectman Fred Koed agreed and said it makes sense to him to see if there are any machines that could run an updated version of Windows. Rather than throw money at the problem, the committee agreed it is best to find out how the computers at the schools are being used right now, and then decide the best course of action to fix the situation.

Fusco said the school department would be able to get the Board of Selectmen the information. He added it is important to remember with the lack of electives currently being offered at the high school, having computers, which can allow students to participate in online learning, will be invaluable. "We don't want to say to the kids they can't because our computers aren't fast enough," he said.

In addition to the technology requests, the school department requested $160,000 for an emergency generator at Osgood. The CBC said while it would be nice to have the generator, its purpose would be to provide enough power to generate heat, produce emergency lighting and run the phone system, and if power is lost at the schools, rather than try to carry on with generator power, it understood the district would likely send children home.

The school department requested $75,000 for playground equipment replacement and a toddler friendly upgrade, as the schools are now operating a preschool and full-day kindergarten and students at the school are on average much younger and require age-appropriate playground equipment. The CBC said if the schools would like to update its equipment, private funding might be a better route to take.

The middle-high school is in need of $50,000 of roof repairs and while the CBC said it should be addressed sooner rather than later, it said the school department should first pursue remediation with the contractor because the leak looks as if it is a result of the new construction.

While the CBC would like to recommend the $50,000 necessary for a new walkway at Osgood, by the time the funding is approved at the Special Town Meeting, it will be too late to complete the work. The CBC therefore recommended deferring the request until the spring.

The school department requested another $45,000 for Alumni field track maintenance, and the CBC's report states in its opinion, the request "epitomizes a costly approach often taken in town. The track is a rubberized composite surface like those found at premier facilities worldwide. When installed 10 years ago, we were advised the track should be resurfaced every five years to preserve the structure and maximize its life. It has not yet been done, according to testimony." Timing of the funding would prevent any work being done on the track until the spring, so again, the CBC recommended postponement. The science room exhaust fan for $25,000 was also postponed until the spring.

The Board of Selectmen said it would reconsider its motion to approve funding as recommended by the CBC if the school department presented new information on the technology piece. The Warrant is scheduled to go off to the printer Friday (today).

Communication lapse causes funding defeat

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee says poor communication is to blame for a lack of recommendations from the Capital Budget Committee. Out of all the town departments that submitted requests, the schools were the only ones not to have any requests recommended for consideration at Town Meeting.

Members of the Capital Budget Committee came before Selectmen Monday (Oct. 16) with recommendations for capital items for the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting. The School Committee talked about the issue at its Wednesday, Oct. 18 meeting.

School Committee members Steve Fusco and Alfred Slanetz were at the Selectmen's meeting when the CBC gave its report. Both made a case for funding, particularly for technology requests, and Selectmen agreed to rethink the recommendations if the schools could provide more information. The CBC's written report to Selectmen stated there was not enough information about certain school requests.

"We're as responsible for that as anybody and we need to learn from this," said Fusco, adding Selectmen want an inventory of the computers at the schools, what they are used for, and when they were purchased. "We did not provide all the information we could have and we're missing out on an opportunity," he said.

School Committee member Jamie Williams added, "They asked us for our 'needs' and we did not communicate they are not 'wants.'"

However, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said there was communication. "We clearly made our case as far as I'm concerned," she said, adding Town Hall has the district's 3-year technology plan which details the upgrades planned for the future and the number of computers owned by the district. She said the CBC asked Facilities Manager Brian Adams to present the capital needs for the school department. "We may need to present our own in the future," she said.

Walsh added Adams had drafted a list of capital budget requests months ago, which dealt with many facility items, which Walsh presented to the School Committee. "Technology wasn't even on that list," she said.

Slanetz said he thought the CBC should have asked Walsh to make the presentation. "The schools are more than facilities."

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the School Committee has not been kept abreast of the action being taken by the CBC. "We had no sense this was going to happen, that they were going to fund $300,000 worth of capital expenses," she said. If the schools had known, perhaps it could have attended another meeting to make a case for its requests, she said. She added because the committee was part of the rejection, "We should have been invited (to the Selectmen's meeting). Not one of our capital items were recommended," she said.

Williams noted in the CBC's report to the Selectmen, it states the CBC does not understand why the technology requests were not included as a capital item in the school budget. "We don't have a capital budget, we have to rely on the town," she said.

While not having its technology requests was disappointing, it was more disappointing to not receive funding for roof repairs. There is currently a leak in the roof in the middle-high school library. Walsh said in November 2005, Adams received a report on the condition of the roof, which indicated it was needed significant repair, but it was not included on the fiscal 2007 budget.

MacCarthy said in your own home, if you have a leaky roof you fix it and don't wait around to see if the contractor is going to reimburse you for it. The longer the roof is open, the more damage will occur. However, without a maintenance budget and without the recommendation of the CBC, "Our hands are basically tied," she said. "To think, as a town, we're not going to repair a leaking roof in a new facility...I'm appalled we will not fix a roof for $50,000."

"I've never worked in a district without a maintenance budget," said Walsh.

But Slanetz questioned why the School Committee did not hear about the leaky roof before. "If we had this report a year ago, why is the roof still leaking?" he said. Walsh said Adams and the Building Department knew about it, but the money was not allocated.

Fusco said regardless of the circumstances, fixing a leaking roof is not a "nice to have" item, it is a need.

The School Committee agreed to write a letter outlining its disappointment and the need for the items requested, and forward it on to the Town Manager, CBC, Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee and Building Committee.

Protest results in CHS field hockey's first ever draw against Harwich

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Let's face it: every time the Cohasset High field hockey team faces off against Harwich, the fans expect a negative outcome.

For the past 18 years, Cohasset has never even tied the Rough Riders, let alone beat them. Until Thursday, Oct. 5, that is.

After an unanswered first half Harwich goal, the Skippers questioned if yet another "well-played loss" would result. At halftime, however, Cohasset must have charged its batteries to the max.

At the 11-minute mark of the second half, junior Olivia Kimla electrified the crowd by finding the Rough Riders' net to tie the game. Less than four minutes later, junior Corinna Durham assisted senior Alida Tangherlini for the Skippers' go-ahead goal.

With seven minutes left, Harwich tied the game at 2-2. The refs blew the final whistle and the Skippers rejoiced in their record-breaking tie.

The two teams shook hands while the refs signed the scorebooks. Each team returned to the sideline benches for the standard post-game coaches' speeches. The Skippers walked off Alumni Field. A job well done, right? Apparently not, according to Harwich coach Cheryl Poore.

After the Cohasset scorekeeper admitted that three seconds remained on the clock, Poore frantically retrieved the refs from the parking lot and expressed her desire to "finish" the game. They granted her request, and the incomplete Cohasset lineup scrambled back on to the field to waste away the seconds.

With less than a second to play, jaws dropped as the refs called a penalty against Cohasset. Harwich took advantage of the

Lady Skippers ready for rematch

CHS girls ride four-game unbeaten streak into Saturday's game against Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Skippers vs. Norwell Saturday, 1:30 p.m.
Alumni Field, Cohasset

Sept. 29, the Cohasset High girls soccer team came as close as it has to beating Norwell in years when it lost a tough 3-2 decision in a game that was every bit as close as the score indicates.

Saturday, when the Clippers are in town for a 1:30 kickoff, the Skippers will be aiming to duplicate that effort and come out on the other side of the scoreboard.

"Saturday will be a great test for us," Cohasset head coach Deb Beal said. "We're going to treat it like a tournament game. It won't be like in years past where we've played Norwell, lost, and said to ourselves, 'Well, there's two more points we have to make up somewhere.'

"We're just going to play the game and see what happens. That attitude on the team is good."

A major reason for the team's good attitude is that, unlike in recent seasons past, its postseason hopes aren't coming down to the wire. With easy wins this week over Harwich and Hull, the Skippers are 10-3-1.

Instead of playing for a tournament berth, Cohasset is playing for a home game in the first round and possibly beyond.

In Monday's 7-0 win over Harwich, the Skippers received goals from six different players. Senior Kara Wilcox scored a pair, with junior Meg Anderson, sophomores Torey Hart and Maggie McGoldrick, and freshmen Christine Coner and Mackenzie Hart all finding the net once. Torey Hart and Coner both added a pair of assists.

Wednesday's win against Hull saw the same score line. Hart, who is in a battle with Carver senior Tina Gillen for the South Shore League scoring title, finished with a hat trick and an assist. Anderson continued her good form with two goals, while McGoldrick and sophomore Kristin Monaco each scored once. McGoldrick also had three assists.

In net, sophomore Johanna Brophy and senior Shalea Daly split time to record the shutout.

After Wednesday's win, Cohasset has scored a league-best 62 goals in just 14 matches. Just as impressively, the Skippers have conceded only 10.

Beal attributed a significant part of her team's success this season to the play of her outside midfielders, notably Wilcox and fellow senior captains Caren Garber and Emily Coggins. Beal has always preached to her teams over the years to stay wide and take advantage of Alumni Field's large dimensions, and those lessons are starting to kick in.

"The seniors have learned it; now it's just a process of teaching the young kids how to do it," Beal said.

Another key has been Cohasset's improved performance on corner kicks. Hart and McGoldrick are consistently clearing the first defender and getting the ball into the six-yard box, where tall targets like senior defender Haley Haracz and sophomore sweeper Sammie Lehr are there to make things interesting for opposing keepers.

After the Norwell game, Cohasset will host Mashpee next Tuesday followed by Thursday's game against Nantucket.

CHS JV gridders handle Mashpee

The Cohasset High JV Football team provided an exciting afternoon of football recently on Alumni Field.

Visiting Mashpee arrived ready to play and kicked off to the Skippers. The Falcons meant business as they held Cohasset to a three-and-out on the Skippers first offensive series.

Upon receiving the ball, Mashpee drove the length of the field and scored first. The Skippers delivered a less than stellar performance in the first quarter.

The second quarter was a different story, and one that played out for the balance of the game. Both the offense and defense made adjustments and played big for the rest of the competition. Dana Valentine and Mike Froio rushed the ball, tiring out the Mashpee defensive line and each scoring rushing touchdowns.

The Skipper offensive line gave quarterback Johnny Maher time and protection to deliver sharp passing to Brendan Doonan, Dean Driscoll and Nick Savage, with Driscoll and Doonan each scoring on completed passes by Maher.

Defense was key to this battle. Froio (fumble recovery, many tackles and an interception) and Alec Livingstone (too many tackles to count) got the Skipper linebacking core pumped up and they stopped the Mashpee ground game. Linemen Nick Lieberman and Will Lynner tagged-team on several tackles, throwing the Mashpee offense for a loss.

Dave Toomey (batted ball) and Mike Dorian (tackle) delivered defensive plays that stopped Mashpee cold. The JV Skippers won, 25-16.

Coach Brian Pattison said, "We finally played two good halves of football with second half adjustments that allowed us to establish our running game. That was huge because it set up Maher to be able to scramble out of the pocket and throw some nice passes.

"Andrew Littauer played great for us on special teams. Brendan Doonan did a great job for us on kick offs and PAT's. As far as defense goes, we tackled well. At the end of the game I told the kids that the team that blocks and tackles better always wins the game and today we are finally that team."

It's a JunglePlex in there

Indoor sports arena and convention center slated to open in December

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

PLYMOUTH — Maybe Kosta Haveles should just go ahead and get that tattoo of the word "soon" carved onto his forehead.

It might come in handy with all the daily questions he and his business partners have been getting as to when the JunglePlex will open.

"It's coming along as fast as humanly possible," Haveles said of the new 67,000 square-foot steel building that will house three full-scale indoor athletics fields as well as a large area for conventions and trade shows. "We've got guys putting this building up on the average of 16 to 20 hours a day. Everyone thinks the target date of getting the winter leagues started on Dec. 19 is right there next to impossible, but we are going to do all that we can do to prove all the doubters wrong."

Haveles, with proverbial fingers crossed, said they hope to open the building to the public a week or so before the grand opening so the public can come and see for themselves what the JunglePlex has to offer.

"We're getting bombarded with phone calls, e-mails and hits on our Web site (www.jungleplex.net) from parents and coaches wondering when we are going to open and how they can get their league up and running here," Haveles said. "We've had a couple of small miracles to help us get to where we are this quickly, but we'll just keep our nose to the grindstone until we've done all that we can do."

Haveles, owner of the 3A Café in Plymouth, and three other partners put together a $4.5 million dollar investment in August to purchase the Plymouth Sports Dome and the 7.3 acres at 8 Natalie Way, located just off Long Pond Road. The Sports Dome was always a hub of activity for indoor soccer and lacrosse teams of all ages, but the activity came to a screeching halt Jan. 23, 2005, when the structure's polyurethane roof collapsed under the weight of a blizzard that dropped nearly two feet of snow over the area.

An attempt to rebuild the Dome by the previous owners fell through, which brought Haveles and partners Darren Yee, Darryn Meichsner and Nick Stefos, as Plymouth Adventure Park, into the picture. The first thing the new owners did was move away from the concept of forced air holding up the roof. Instead they went with a permanent steel structure for the walls and roof.

"This roof is not coming down. There are too many steel beams and bolts up there holding everything up. It was expensive, but worth it. We got a break in that the foundation for the building was already in place, so we were able to design off of that," Haveles said. "From there, it's been a lot of hard work from all of us in getting this project up and running. It's been a great experience with all of the people from around the community that have stepped up to lend a hand in one-way or another. They've obviously missed what the Sports Dome brought to the community, and we're going to be more than happy to give it back to them."

The JunglePlex will have not only have the staples of soccer, field hockey and lacrosse games for all ages, there will also be some newer-style offerings like Wiffle Ball and flag football. And there are plans to introduce activities for adults like Ultimate Frisbee as well as a new craze, corporate kickball, into the mix. An area will be set aside for special events and parties.

One of the owners, Yee, was part of the Plymouth Sports Dome ownership group. He will be running his martial arts school out of the massive building. Another owner, Meichsner, is a Plymouth North graduate who was born and raised in the town.

"We're doing all we can to make all of this happen as quickly as we can," Meichsner said. "It's a lot of hard work right now, but we know it's something that's going to be a tremendous asset to the community. The only way this is going to work is by building a community-based business, which is what we plan to do."

Haveles said he hopes the JunglePlex will become a destination for families that are looking for a couple hours of fun and recreation with jungle-themed amenities like an arcade room and a children's activity center.

"We've done a complete redesign of what the building used to look like, and I think people are really going to like what they'll see," Haveles said. He added that the Jungle Cafe will include a viewing area where families will be able to sit and watch all of the activity happening on the fields. "We've done some fun stuff to make it as good of an experience as possible, and we plan to have things going on at the location all through the day."

"We wanted to put together a safe, friendly place where families could come and have some fun."

Haveles is also excited about what the convention center part of the plan should be able to bring to the town. With all the different businesses coming to Plymouth in recent years, Haveles said the convention center would fill a glaring need in the town. He hoped to have an announcement "very soon" on a home show/boat show convention that could come to town in the spring of 2007.

"A convention is a pretty big undertaking, so we only plan on booking them after the soccer season has ended," Haveles said. "We can open things up to about 52,000 square-feet of floor space, which gives us a lot of options for events that we can host. The way we're designing things will make this building easily converted to the space that we'll need."

FROM SKIPPERS, PAGE 19

How far the program has come

In 1998, Beal's first year at the helm of the Cohasset girls soccer program, the Skippers posted a 3-11-2 record.

It didn't get much better between 1999-2001, a span in which the Skippers finished with records of 1-13-3, 2-14-2 and 4-10-4, respectively.

In 2002, Cohasset went 10-8-1 to kick off a stretch of three straight seasons in the state tournament. The Skippers didn't win any of those postseason games, however, and last fall missed it altogether with a 7-8-3 mark.

One more win will give Beal the most wins of any season during her tenure. The coach credits the youth soccer system for teaching young athletes proper skills at a younger age, producing more talented, intelligent players by the time they get to the high school level.

This season, the talk is no longer about getting to the state tournament. It's about winning games in the tournament.

"I don't want to be one-and-done," Beal said. "I'd love to go a few games deep, and I think we can do it."

situation and tapped in the winning goal.

"The Cohasset girls were beside themselves," explained Skippers head coach Deb Bostwick. "Six of our players had already gone home by the time we were called back on to the field!"

Expressing sincere disagreement with the outcome, Bostwick protested the match. Five days later, the Skippers received the final and official ruling: Cohasset had tied the Rough Riders. End of story.

"In my view, when the officials blow the final whistle and sign the scorebooks, the game is over," said Bostwick. "I'm glad we were awarded the tie on this one; it was definitely the right thing to do."

Harwich senior Amy Menard understandably harbored different feelings. When asked about her thoughts on the game, she said, "I don't have much to say. Of course we're disappointed, but we just have to move on."

So there you have it. The Skippers have broken the curse and earned their first tie against Harwich. For the Rough Riders, the tie drops their postseason seeding down a notch.

With their morale flying high, the Skippers plowed into the next week.

On Tuesday the 10th, the Skippers hosted Sturgis Charter School in their second meeting of the year. Having beaten Sturgis 7-0 last time, Cohasset prepared for another cakewalk; not the case.

The Skippers earned an astounding 17 offensive corners, but only got off four shots. The only goal of the game came in the first half from Durham off a feed from senior captain Sheelah Scott.

"The girls seemed a bit flat from all the drama over the previous days, but they managed to bring this one home," said Bostwick.

Junior Katina Martone played very well up front, along with junior Meghan Coakley in the midfield and sophomore Marissa Tangherlini on defense. Though the close 1-0 victory unnerved the Skippers a little, a win's a win.

Cohasset took greater command the following day when they rode down to Mashpee. The Skippers remained in charge from the opening whistle.

Senior captain Caitlin Hurley connected with Scott, who assisted senior Virginia Spofford just four minutes in. Five minutes later, Scott found Kimla for goal number two on an offensive corner.

The second half shifted its focus to the Skipper defense that, aside from one Mashpee goal, controlled the field. Bostwick expressed particular satisfaction with Alida Tangherlini, junior Paige Strecker, midfielder Georgia Murley, and Spofford up front. The result: a 2-1 Skipper victory.

To finish off the week, Cohasset posted another 2-1 win, this time at Norwell. Just two minutes into the game, Scott assisted Spofford. In the second half, Scott tallied a goal of her own on a pass from junior Sally Meehan.

Aside from a Norwell goal with one minute left in the game from a confusing penalty call, the Skipper defense dominated. Along with outstanding performances from all defenders and the sweeper, midfielders Hurley, Durham, junior May McCarthy, and Scott up front kept this game under control.

"We've developed a tendency to come out strong early in the game," commented Bostwick.

Kimla agreed with Bostwick's observation.

"It will be very important for us, especially in the tournament, to continue to have lots of intensity early in the game," she said.

Cohasset was 7-3-2 heading into this week's action against Hull, Carver and Norwell.

Sheelah Scott pushes the ball upfield on an attack in the second half of Saturday's win over Norwell.

Rec Basketball Coaching Clinic

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club is sponsoring a coaching clinic for all recreation basketball coaches. The clinics will take place at the CMHS gym on Wednesday, Oct. 25 and Thursday, Oct. 27 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The clinics are mandatory for all coaches who have signed up and is open to anyone interested in coaching youth basketball who hasn't yet signed up.

Clinics for coaches for grades 4-8 will be from 7 to 8 p.m., and for grades 1-3 will be from 8 to 9 each evening. You only have to attend one session.

Coaches will be provided with handouts for the skills and rules that are applicable by grade and will be shown various drills available to coach and teach with.

The program is still looking for coaches for boys grades 6-8 and girls first grade. If you haven't signed up your child to play yet, walk in registrations are still taking place at the Recreation Office in the Cohasset Town Hall. Please email ellenmaher63@comcast.net.

Look for the program's new and improved website www.cohassetbasketball.com coming soon.

CYBSA Awards Night

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will be holding its 2006 Championship Awards Night on Wednesday, Oct. 25 at 7 p.m. at the CMHS auditorium.

The event will recognize the 2006 baseball and softball spring and summer championship teams. All CYBSA Little League participants, family and friends are invited to attend.

Any questions, please contact Nancy Froio at (781) 383-1897.

Hockey Unlimited prepares for 42nd season

Hockey Unlimited, an organization founded nearly 42 years ago and committed to teaching the fundamentals of ice hockey to local youths ranging in age from nine to 14 years, plans to begin its 42nd season at Travis Roy Rink, inside Tabor Academy's Fish Center for Health and Fitness.

This year's program will consist of approximately 16 weekly sessions. The registration fee is $295 for the entire season, payable to Hockey Unlimited in advance. The money covers ice rental expenses and all other operating costs.

Each participant should complete a registration form and return it with a check made payable to Hockey Unlimited. Mailing address is Hockey Unlimited, c/o Dyer Capital Management, P.O. Box 388, Marion, Mass., 02738.

Sessions are scheduled to be held primarily on Saturday mornings, as well as other selected school vacation days. The program runs from November to March 3, 2007.

Each player must be equipped with a stick, knee pads, hockey gloves, elbow pads, helmet, and face guard. Some type of tooth protection and hockey pants are also strongly recommended.

Fore more information, call Tim Dyer at (508) 748-3030 or (508) 748-0555.

Volunteer workday at World's End is Oct. 28

Looking for a way to give back to the Hingham community while enjoying the day with family, friends and neighbors? The Trustees of Reservations invites residents to pack a picnic and pitch in at World's End in Hingham Saturday, Oct. 28, from 9 a.m. to noon. Volunteers are needed to help clear trails, prune the red cedars and remove weeds from the grove area. Volunteers are asked to meet at the property's parking lot on Martin's Lane. Volunteer pre-registration is requested.

World's End is owned and managed by The Trustees of Reservations for the public to use and enjoy year round. This property is comprised of four major drumlins, grassy fields and miles of walking paths overlooking Boston Harbor. Even with a staff of caretakers and field personnel, there is always more work to be done.

Founded 115 years ago in 1891, The Trustees of Reservations are the world's oldest regional land trust and conservation organization.

Conservation Works! was created by The Trustees several years ago as an annual, statewide service day designed to bring people together to work and have fun while caring for the places that help preserve the quality of life in communities. The Trustees are hosting Conservation Works! programs in 23 communities around the state. In years past, up to 600 volunteers have contributed more than 2,700 hours of service, what full-time employee could accomplish in a single day.

Founded 115 years ago in 1891, The Trustees of Reservations are the world's oldest regional land trust and conservation organization. Supported by more than 40,000 members throughout the state, The Trustees protect Massachusetts' natural and historic resources for everyone to enjoy. From working farms to historic homesteads, barrier beaches to mountain vistas, The Trustees own, manage and interpret nearly 25,000 acres on 96 reservations in 70 communities across Massachusetts.

The Trustees also hold perpetual conservation restrictions on nearly 14,000 acres, more than any other conservation organization in Massachusetts, permanently protecting scenic and natural areas from development, and have assisted in the protection of nearly 12,000 additional acres.

With the support of more than 13,500 donors, The Trustees recently completed a capital campaign, raising $63 million in cash and receiving more than $35 million in land in just five years, the largest campaign by an environmental organization in Massachusetts' history. Funds raised have been used to establish 10 new reservations on 1,685 acres, all of which are open to the public.

For more information on The Trustees or how to become a member and receive regular mailings and benefits, call 781-784-0567, visit the Web site at thetrustees.org or email membership@ttor.org.

HSO concert opener features violin soloist

Hingham Symphony Orchestra presents its tenth season as a professional orchestra under the leadership of Music Director and Conductor Jin Kim. Opening night festivities will be held Saturday, Oct. 28 at the new Performing Arts Center in Duxbury.

The program features violin soloist Yevgeny Kutik, a 21-year-old Russian-born virtuoso, performing Shostakovich's Violin Concerto No. 1, plus Wagner's Prelude to Die Meistersinger and Brahms Symphony No. 2.

Jin Kim, an engaging and informative speaker, gives a pre-concert talk at 7 p.m., in the concert hall and the performance begins at 7:30 p.m. The audience is invited to celebrate the evening and meet the musicians and Jin at a dessert reception in the lobby, amid an art gallery of work by local artists immediately following the concert.

Tickets at $30 for adults, $20 for seniors and $10 for youth through age 18 and are available in advance at Hingham Public Library, Noble's and La Petite Maison in Hingham Square. Tickets are also available at Buttonwood Books, in Cohasset, at www.hinghamsymphony.org. or by calling the HSO at 781-740-5694.

Model railway show

South Shore Model Railway Club's fall Open House and Show will take place Saturday, Oct. 28, and Sunday, Oct. 29, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The club is in Building 51, Bare Cove Park, off Fort Hill Street, Hingham. The entrance to Bare Cove Park is one tenth of a mile west of South Shore Country Club.

In addition to the club's operating layout, there will be more than 40 dealer tables, a white elephant table, demonstrations of model railroad construction and a model live steam engine. Admission is $3 for adults; $2 seniors age 65-plus; and $2 for children ages 6 through 12 with an adult.

For more information, call the club at 781-740-2000. Directions are on the Web site at ssmrc.org.

Rowing race on Weir River Oct. 21

The Hull Lifesaving Museum will hold the Head of the Weir boat race, Saturday, Oct. 21, at 12:30 p.m. Registration begins at 11 a.m., at the starting line, which is at West Corner on Route 228 (the Hull/Hingham/Cohasset town line). The 5.5-mile race is for intermediate and advanced rowers only. The fee is $20. Refreshments will be available and awards will be handed out following the race. For information call 781-925-5433 or go to www.lifesavingmuseum.org.

SPA HARBOR

Use light for beautiful skin with the state of the art Epifacial

The Epifacial is a true photo skin rejuvenation technique, which successfully diminishes a number of skin irregularities. Spa Harbor is excited to be able to offer state-of-the-art Epifacials. Our treatment can be used to diminish skin surface imperfections such as large pore size, elastic skin changes, and fine wrinkling. The process uses light to stimulate subsurface remodeling, encouraging fibroblast activity and increased collagen deposition.

The Intense Pulsed Light Treatment is a no-down-time, skin rejuvenating procedure that is different than common laser treatments because it emits light over many wavelengths, allowing light to penetrate to all the levels of the skin.

Intense Pulsed Light Treatments are amazingly effective in treating facial flushing, redness, brown spots, sun damage, fine lines and wrinkles. This treatment is a true photo skin rejuvenation technique, which successfully diminishes a number of skin irregularities.

The Intense Pulsed Light Treatment is a no-down-time, skin rejuvenating procedure that is different than common laser treatments because it emits light over many wavelengths, allowing light to penetrate to all the levels of the skin. During the intense pulsed light treatment, light energy is sent through the outer skin (epidermis) and energy is concentrated on the dermis, the deeper part of the skin. Because the light generates heat, it stimulates cells in the body that go on to form more collagen, as much as 20 percent. This treatment is highly effective in treating rosacea, a fairly common, chronic skin disorder that afflicts about one in every twenty Americans. Rosacea causes significant emotional distress since the disease is characterized by facial redness, flushing of the nose, cheeks, forehead, chin and neck.

Commonly asked questions about fireplaces as answered by Erik Anthony, owner of Independence Fireplace in Cohasset Village

Artificial logs?

Dear Erik: I recently purchased a new wood stove. Can I use the artificial logs they sell in home building centers? I'd like to use one log in the evening. Is this OK?

Answer: It is OK to burn them in a stove with the doors open. (many have screens for this use) – but you should not use them in a sealed stove. They are designed to burn with a large supply of air. Burning them in an air-starved stove could cause these vapors to go unburned – which would pollute the great outdoors, coat your stovepipe and possibly cause a chimney fire. There is an alternative product called Super Cedar Firestarters, which are considered safe for wood stove use, and we carry them at our Cohasset store.

Dear Erik: My house has a corner fireplace in the living room. When we bought it, we had the chimney inspected and were told that the chimney was too short. Sure enough, when we tried to use the fireplace, it smoked up the whole house. I have had the chimney cleaned so that is not the problem. Should I hire a mason to extend the chimney? Should I get an insert to try and make it more energy efficient? Should I install a wood or pellet stove? What would it cost? I want to use the fireplace.

Answer: Your basic problem is too much opening size for the chimney. Almost all fireplaces like yours are prone to smoking. Extending the chimney a few feet would help, but may not solve the problem. Decreasing the size of the fireplace may also help. Best solution is to install a wood burning fireplace insert with a stainless steel chimney liner. Close off (with masonry, glass door, or metal) the smaller open side. A gas or pellet insert could work but be sure to line the chimney so it drafts well. Extending the chimney and lowering the opening of the fireplace will cost $1500-$2500. Purchasing and installing a stove or insert with a stainless steel liner would cost $2500-$4500.

Dear Erik: I want to buy a gas fireplace insert. Some dealers tell me to go with a direct vent insert with 2-4" pipes that go up the chimney and that this unit has a sealed chamber which doesn't allow gases to come back into the house. Some dealers say that this is new and the conventional fireplace is just as safe. What should I do?

Answer: Gas fireplace inserts are available in "direct vent" which is the two pipe system you mentioned and "b-vent" which is a one-pipe system. The b vent takes it's combustion air from the home and sends it up the chimney. The direct vent takes combustion air from the outside and exhausts back outside. Both are fine – but a properly installed direct vent may be a bit more efficient. Also, if you live in a very cold climate the direct vent may be better – draft wise.

Dear Erik: I live in a 90-year-old house. At some point the fireplace was made smaller by the addition of bricks (presumably firebrick). These bricks are quite clear around the sides; I don't know whether the brick at the back of the fireplace is original or newer. When we lit the first fall fire, we saw a crack at the back – about 18 inches – coming up from the bottom. How serious is this? Can we use the fireplace?

Answer: Small cracks are not usually serious since there is commonly more masonry behind that. But a customer of mine in Hingham had a fireplace that had been rebuilt improperly without another wall of masonry behind the back wall of the fireplace and he had a chimney fire. The side of his house had to be disassembled by the Fire Department to put it out. To be as safe as possible, use refractory cement (available at your local masonry supply or stove shop) to patch the crack. If you are unsure as to the safety of the construction, have it certified by your local chimney sweep.

Dear Erik: I would like to convert my existing fireplace into a heating source for my home. I want the most efficient solution: either a wood fireplace insert (we do not have gas) or a wood stove. Which is most efficient? Is there a significant difference in cost for the unit or the maintenance? Is it possible to heat a connecting room? The room with the stove is 14' x 18' the other room is 11' x 18'. Will blowers help circulate the air to other rooms? Can the blowers be directed? Is it possible to heat a room directly above the heat source if grills are installed in the ceiling?

Answer: Wood stoves are radiant heat. The farther out of the fireplace the more heat. Most inserts are just stoves with a surround and a blower. An insert that extends 6-10 inches in the hearth will provide more radiant heat. A small hearth stove will cost less than an insert. Best to use a small fan in the doorway (available at stove shops) to move heat form one room to another. Heat rises and will do the job if a grate is installed. (The room above is the same size). Is it safe to leave the stove /insert burning overnight – unattended? Just make certain the area around the stove is clear of debris and paper and make sure that you have adequate floor protection in front.

ADVICE from the EXPERTS

Designers Create Custom Window Solutions for Any Budget

Some of the most decorative and functional investments in one's home are the various treatments that adorn our windows. Modern homeowners have certainly evolved since the earliest cave dwellers, when openings were covered with animal skins or wide leaves to keep out the cold or to shield the family from the heat of the sun. The choices in today's marketplace can be overwhelming!

The staff of Madison James & Company take the "decorative and functional" aspects of window treatments seriously when working with individual homeowners. "The term 'custom window treatment' makes people a little nervous," says Ellen Rossano of Madison James & Company. "The biggest concern is usually budget, and customers are usually pleasantly surprised that custom window treatments can fit in to any budget."

"We talk to clients a lot about function – Where does the sun rise or where does the sun shine in late in the day? Do they need privacy? Are they stumped by an awkward window shape or location? There are a lot of factors to take into consideration, and we try to guide our clients to solutions that are practical and functional as well as beautiful."

To take the mystery out of "custom," here are some tips and terminology to keep in mind when shopping for window treatments.

- Professional measuring and installation are always worth the expense. A good designer should be able to provide a written cost estimate for the entire job.
- Swags, jabots, pelmets, goblet pleats, repeats, interlining – custom window treatments have their own vocabulary. Your designer can translate the terms and make sure you get what you have envisioned.
- Hardware needs to be measured and installed correctly. Very often, the wall studs are not in the perfect place. Let the experts help you choose not only the decorative hardware that you will see, but the nuts and bolts that will keep the treatment from falling off the wall.
- If you just can't make the leap to custom, or you don't want to invest the time and budget in a child's room or powder room, consider customizing ready-made treatments with ribbon or home trimmings like tassel fringe. Madison James & Company has a wide array of ribbons and trim in-stock, and the staff can show you how to apply these embellishments yourself to add color and personality to any room in your home.

Laser Hair Removal

Laser Hair Removal is the perfect answer to unwanted hair for both men and women. No more shaving, tweezing, electrolysis or messy depilatory creams. The technology employs a principle called "selective Photothermolysis" a beam of light is pulsed for a millisecond, it passes harmlessly through the skin, but is absorbed by the pigment in the hair follicle. the laser works by disabling the hair follicles that are in active growth stage at the time of the treatment. Because all hairs are not in this stage at the same time, a series of treatments is necessary at four to eight week intervals. the results are far more permanent than other techniques.

Awarded Best of Boston 2003 for Laser Hair Removal. Beauty Therapies has been performing laser hair removal since its inception in 1996. We feature the state of the art Cutera Coolglide laser, which can be used on all skin types, including tanned skin. We take exceptional care to apply our advanced training and education to give you a satisfying result.

Sometimes it can be embarrassing to talk about your excess hair issues, whether you are a woman having hair where it shouldn't be, or guys too embarrassed to play basketball in case they have to take their shirts off. I think it is downright brave of you to come in. I respect your desire to tackle the problem.

Thank you for choosing us.

OBITUARY

Former Congressman Gerry E. Studds

Longtime champion of New England fishermen and the ocean environment

Former Massachusetts Congressman Gerry E. Studds, 69, longtime champion of New England fishermen and the ocean environment, and the first openly gay person elected to the United States Congress, died Saturday, Oct. 14, 2006 at Boston University Medical Center. He had been hospitalized after sustaining head injuries from an accident while walking his beloved English Springer Spaniel, Bonnie.

He leaves Dean T. Hara, his husband and partner, who was at his bedside when he died. Studds and Hara were among the first same-sex couples to be legally married in Massachusetts in 2004.

Studds, after whom Congress named the 842-square mile Gerry E. Studds Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary in 1996 in recognition of his life long contributions to the marine environment, represented Cape Cod and the Islands, New Bedford, and the South Shore for 12 Congressional terms. (12th District 1973-83, 10th District 1983-97).

Studds was a ranking member of the House Democratic leadership and served as chairman of the committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries from 1990-1994. (In 1995, the Republican-controlled Congress abolished the House Merchant Marine and Fishing Committee and assigned its tasks to other committees).

During his Congressional career, Studds also served as chairman of the House Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Navigation, as chairman of the House Subcommittee on Fisheries, Oceans and Wildlife, and as a member of the House Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, and the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs.

Studds was the major sponsor of the original Magnuson Act of 1973, the law that helped preserve the U.S. fishing industry by extending U.S. fishing jurisdiction to 200 miles, and served as Democratic floor manager for its reauthorization in 1996.

He authored the National Marine Sanctuaries Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1992, in which the Gerry E. Studds Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary, an 842-square-mile ocean floor area between Cape Ann and Cape Cod, was officially designated as part of a network of marine protected areas chosen for their special ecological and/or historical significance and importance as a central summer feeding ground for whales.

His leadership on the Atlantic Striped Bass Conservation Act, known commonly as the "Studds Act," led to the recovery of a resource cherished in his home New England area and all along the coast.

Studds also worked successfully to pass the Marine Mammal Protection Act which provided federal protection to all whales, dolphins and porpoises, making it illegal to "harass, hunt, capture or kill" any marine mammal or any "negligent or intentional act which results in the disturbing or molesting of marine mammals."

Studds fought to limit the drilling of oil in the Georges Bank, a prime fishing area, and was a champion of the U.S. Coast Guard, fighting to safeguard its financing in times of budget cuts.

In 1995 he sponsored legislation that created the Boston Harbor Islands National Recreation Area, bringing the 31 Boston Harbor Islands under the control of the National Park Service under a unique joint management scheme.

Studds also played a leading role in Congress advocating for compassionate care and treatment for people with AIDS and for increased funding of AIDS research in the earliest years of the worldwide pandemic. He accused the Reagan Administration of being "criminally negligent" in educating the nation about the disease and for failing to respond to the public health crisis in a timely manner, and, in 1987, made national news by using his Congressional franking privileges to mail U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's report on AIDS to each of the 268,000 households in his district, urging other members of Congress to follow suit. Studds' constituents were the first people in the nation to receive, unsolicited, the explicit 36-page pamphlet.

In 1987 Studds was in line to assume the Chair of the highly visible House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs, then investigating President Ronald Reagan's covert support of Contra rebels, but instead opted to stick with the bread and butter issues of his seaside district by accepting the chairmanship of a fisheries subcommittee. Studds had been a member of the fisheries subcommittee since the day he became a member of Congress in 1973, with one of his first accomplishments being persuading members to support legislation that would extend U.S. fisheries jurisdiction out to 200 miles.

"In the end, my decision was based on my belief that I will be able to accomplish more as a legislator on fisheries, wildlife and environmental issues," Studds said at the time, "and that writing effective legislation is, or at least ought to be, the central responsibility of a member of Congress."

Studds nevertheless continued to serve on the foreign affairs subcommittee and was a leading and outspoken critic of the Reagan Administration's policy in Central America, particularly its illegal funding and support of the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

During these subcommittee hearings, Studds often went head-to-head with Elliott Abrams, then Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, and now a member of the Bush administration, who pleaded guilty in 1991 to withholding information from Congress in the Iran-contra affair.

"It is no secret that I believe the Reagan administration policy toward Central America has lacked creativity, balance and common sense, and that it has been conducted in a manner that violates both American ideals and federal law," Studds said in 1987.

He was also a leading critic of President Reagan's "Star Wars" or Strategic Defense Initiative that proposed building an outer space-based missile defense system, delivering a widely-quoted assessment of the project in 1985: "It is the Edsel of the 1980s. It is overpriced, it has been oversold, it will not perform as advertised."

Gerry Eastman Studds was born on May 12, 1937 in Mineola, Nassau County, N.Y. to Eastman and Beatrice Studds and grew up in Cohasset, a part of the district that he would later represent.

Studds attended Yale University, from which he received a bachelor's degree in history in 1959 and a master's degree in 1961. Following graduation, Studds served from 1961-1962 as a foreign service officer in the State Department, and from 1962-1963 as an assistant in the Kennedy White House where he worked to establish a domestic Peace Corps. In 1964 he served as Legislative assistant to U.S. Senator Harrison A. Williams, Jr., (D-NJ), after which he became a teacher at St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H.

Then U. S. Rep. Gerry Studds heads to the polls at Town Hall in Cohasset with his mother, Beatrice.

As a young peace activist in 1968, Studds served as New Hampshire state coordinator for U.S. Senator Eugene McCarthy's presidential primary campaign, organizing McCarthy's upset victory over President Johnson in that primary and going on to serve as a delegate to the tumultuous 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

Studds made his first run for Congress in 1970 at the age of 33, but lost to the incumbent Republican representative Hastings Keith in a close election. In preparation for the next campaign, Studds learned to speak Portuguese, the language of a sizable community in the district, and also studied issues related to fishing, an important industry in the area.

In his second bid for Congress in 1972, Studds was successful, defeating his well-funded opponent and becoming the first Democrat in 50 years to win what was considered a safe Republican seat. [John F. Kennedy lost to Richard M. Nixon in Cape Cod in the 1960 Presidential election by a margin of 20,402 for Nixon and 12,423 for Kennedy.] Studds held his Congressional seat for 24 years, retiring from Congress in 1996.

During his 12 terms in the House of Representatives Studds was known for his accessibility to his constituents and his effective advocacy of their concerns, notably in matters of the environment, health care, and fishing and maritime issues. He visited all the towns in his district several times a year, holding town meetings at which he discussed his votes in Congress and responded to questions from the public. He also wrote and published his Weekly Report to the People, a newsletter detailing his votes and positions on matters before the House of Representatives that was mailed every week to every district household when Congress was in session.

Legendary newsman Henry Beetle Hough, editor of the Martha's Vineyard Gazette, quickly noticed this unusual accessibility by the Cape's new representative, observing in his 1975 book, Mostly on Martha's Vineyard, "Our present Congressman, Gerry Studds, a young Democrat who overthrew a long Republican succession, is of different mettle. He campaigns, me meets people, and he follows up on problems of importance."

Studds faced controversy in 1983 when a 27-year old former page revealed that he had had a sexual relationship with the congressman some 10 years earlier. During the course of the House Ethics Committee's investigation, Studds became the first national politician and member of Congress to publicly acknowledge his homosexuality, stating in a June 1983 address to the House, "It is not a simple task for any of us to meet adequately the obligations of either public or private life, let alone both, but these challenges are made substantially more complex when one is, as I am, both an elected public official and gay."

Studds was censured by the House of Representatives in July 1983 for having an affair 10 years earlier with the 17-year-old male congressional page. The relationship was consensual, but presented ethical concerns relating to working relationships with subordinates.

Though many wrote his political obituary following the House censure, Studds stood for reelection to his House seat in 1984. He handily won reelection, receiving more than 56 percent of the vote, making him the first openly gay member of Congress and the first gay member of Congress to be reelected in the nation's history.

Following his return to Congress by his constituents in 1984, Studds continued to champion environmental and maritime issues. He also called for a stronger federal response to the AIDS crisis, with increased funding for medical care and research. Studds was among the first members of Congress to endorse lifting the ban on gay men and lesbians in the military, and played an instrumental role in obtaining and publicizing an internal Pentagon study known as the PERSEREC report that showed that gay and lesbian soldiers do not undermine military performance. In 1994, Studds and Senator Edward M. Kennedy (D-MA) introduced the Employment Non-Discrimination Act, designed to end discrimination in the workplace based on sexual orientation.

In 1996, not long before he retired from Congress, he gave an impassioned speech on the House floor opposing the Defense of Marriage Act, which barred the federal government from recognizing same-sex marriage and gave states the same authority.

Studds and his longtime partner, Dean Hara, who had been together since 1991, subsequently applied for a marriage license on May 18, 2004 and were married in Boston on May 24, 2004, one week after same-sex marriages became legal in Massachusetts.

Studds enjoyed a positive reputation from members of both sides of the aisle for his bipartisan approach to securing enactment of critical legislation protective of the nation's environment and maritime resources.

Representative Don Young (R-Alaska), Chairman of the House Resources Committee, said at the time of Studds retirement from the House that that he had "no greater respect" for a member of Congress than he did Gerry Studds. "I thank him for his love of the sea," said Young.

"Were it not for the gentleman from Massachusetts, Gerry Studds, and his ideas and his enthusiasm and the effort that he has put into his committee work, many of the programs and projects that we have worked on a bipartisan basis simply would not be," said Congressman Jim Saxton (R-New Jersey).

In honor of his work and dedication to the marine environment, the House proposed and both the House and Senate approved the renaming of the 842-square mile national treasure as the Gerry E. Studds Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary.

In recognizing his colleagues' accolades, Congressman Studds replied, "One would be hard pressed to find something that would have meant more to me than Stellwagen Bank, which lies between Cape Cod and Cape Ann in Massachusetts... The richness and diversity of the marine life in Stellwagen is a symbol, I think, of why it is that we all came together in this endeavor... I think folks will look back, I hope, and remember that it is possible to be as different as some of the individuals in the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries were and are and yet to work together in a very collegial and very collaborative and very constructive way on things that truly matter as opposed to so much of whit it is that we spend out time here and our lives in general being concerned about."

After retiring from Congress in 1997, Studds remained involved in marine issues and served as a consultant on fisheries issues and ocean outreach. He also served in several volunteer positions, including co-chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Island Alliance, the non-profit partner to the Boston Harbor Island National Park that he helped to create.

Studds continued to be honored for his work for the environment and for civil rights.

In 1996 he was presented the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission "Chairman's Award for Distinguished Meritorious Service" which read:

"For 24 years, Representative Gerry E. Studds has ably represented in Congress not only the Massachusetts 10th District but the interests of all citizens who value and care for the Nation's valuable living marine resources. He has courageously led the fight for effective conservation and management of marine fishery resources, marine mammals and endangered species; all the while protecting the cherished privileges of commercial and recreational fishermen everywhere to pursue productive, satisfying and profitable fishing. Mr. Studds has strongly supported the role of the states in mutually cooperative partnership with the federal government. His leadership on the Atlantic Striped Bass Conservation Act, known commonly as the "Studds Act," led to the recovery of a resource cherished in his home New England area and all along the coast; and set a standard for state and federal fishery conservation and management efforts everywhere. He has always been sensitive to the real needs of people in caring for their marine resources. ASMFC gratefully acknowledges his spirit and commitment as an example of outstanding leadership in Congress, and among all who recognize the importance of the seas and their bounty."

Other recognitions and honors included the creation of the Fenway Community Health Center's Gerry E. Studds Visibility Award, given each year to individuals or organizations who provide leadership and positive visibility for the gay male community, and the Boston Harbor Island Alliance's Gerry E. Studds Stewardship Award, given annually to those who work to preserve the Boston Harbor Islands.

He has also been honored by the AIDS Action Committee of Massachusetts, GLAD, the Center for Coastal Studies in Provincetown and numerous other environmental and civil rights organizations in Massachusetts and across the country.

Studds love of the sea was an essential part of his nature and remained so to the end of his life. He moved to the waterfront in Provincetown, Massachusetts in the early 1970s, later building a waterfront home from which he could see the once endangered Cape Cod Highland Lighthouse in Truro, Mass that he secured federal funding to rescue. He was an accomplished sailor and fisherman, often angling for the Striped Bass he had helped to preserve. He named his small boat "Bacalau" a Portuguese word for "Cod" and was a beloved member of Provincetown's Portuguese fishing community. In 2002 he sold his home on the Cape and moved permanently to Boston where he and Hara made their permanent residence. Studds and Hara nevertheless continued to make the ocean a part of their lives, taking a cruise every year so that they might experience the oceans and seas of world.

In addition to his husband, Dean T. Hara, Studds leaves his brother and sister-in-law Colin and Mary Lou Studds of Cohasset; his sister Gaynor Stewart of Buffalo, N.Y., four nephews, Colin and Tyler Studds, Andrew Babcock, and Kingsley Williams, and Bonnie, his English Springer Spaniel.

Funeral arrangements are still being made.

DESTINATIONS

Parma Charmed

Italy's ham and cheese hub a real cultural gem

By FRAN GOLDEN

Parma is Italy's food city, located north of Bologna in the fertile Emilia-Romagna region and lending its name to two famous food products, parmigiano-reggiano and prosciutto di Parma.

Foodies will want to come here to explore the restaurants -- some believe the best cuisine in Italy comes from this region -- as well as the gourmet food shops, city market, and cheese and ham factories in the hilly countryside (where you can learn everything you ever wanted to know about parmesan and Parma ham).

But besides the good eats, visitors will find a city of 250,000 that's both pretty and surprisingly cultured, especially for a place that's off the regular tourist path - it's a real find.

This is the city where Giuseppe Verdi (born just outside Parma) created some of his operas, performed at the Teatro Regio, built in the 1820s and still hosting opera productions today. Arturo Toscanini and Nicolo Paganini also hailed from Parma.

A key attraction in the city is an even older theater, the Farnese, a unique wooden space that dates to 1618 and is located in the Pilotta, a palace of several buildings constructed in the 16th and 17th centuries by Duke Ranuccio I Farnese. The theater and parts of the palace were destroyed by allied bombs in May 1944 but reconstructed in the 1950s. The palace today is also home to the National Gallery and National Archaeological Museum.

Like every Italian city there are beautiful churches, but Parma's cathedral is particularly noteworthy because it boasts frescoes by Correggio, who was born in Parma. While the cathedral is 900 years old, Correggio did his frescoe work between 1526 and 1530. He also frescoed the dome of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, where you can view the work of local artist Parmigianino (who also did the Church of S. Maria Della Steccata). Next to the cathedral is the architecturally interesting, octagonal Baptistery, which dates to the 12th century and is made of pink Verona marble.

Film buffs may recognize the city center's historic arcades and streets from Bernardo Bertolucci's epic "1900" (1976), the local son having filmed some of that famous movie here.

The countryside outside of Parma

Parma has some Roman ruins too, in odd places like under bridges (they are still being excavated).

This is an easy city to walk around. Allow yourself a couple of days to explore. You'll dodge more bikes than cars, pass outdoor cafes, explore the small market (where linens are a bargain) and no doubt be sidetracked by the large number of shops in the historic downtown boasting Italian fashions -- and proof that this is a prosperous place. The designer brands are here -- Gucci, Furla, Max Mara -- but so are plenty of little shops serving up Italian-made shoes and accessories and more.

Chef Alberto Rossetti of Al Tramezzo, a 1-star Michelin restaurant in Parma, shows off a parmesan creation (a parmesan cone filled with parmesan cream).

OK, I admit, I did not leave Parma empty handed -- I snagged a raincoat and skirt at Max & Company (Max Mara's youthful and less-expensive offshoot), and a soft leather purse at Furla. To heck with the poor performance of the dollar against the euro. I liked the design.

But eating was part of my goal and I did plenty of that, too.

While Parma boasts Michelin-starred restaurants including Ristorante Al Tramezzo in Parma (Via Del Bono, 5/b) and Stella d'Oro Locanda Ristorante (also a B&B) in the nearby town of Soranga -- and, believe me, the chefs here know their way around the local product and more -- I wanted a less gourmet, more authentic experience, to eat the way the locals might eat when going out.

Two places provided that experience for me: Ristorante La Greppia (Via Garibaldi, 39) and Sorelle Picchi (Via Farni, 27).

At both, the kitchen is dominated by women -- this is your Italian mother's or grandmother's kind of cooking.

At Ristorante La Greppia, the eggplant parmesan-like concoction was so amazing my companions and I asked the owner's wife, who runs the kitchen, for the recipe. She gave a complicated recipe in Italian (we had someone translate) hands flying to emphasize points. What it boils down to is lots of bechamel sauce made with cream, no bread crumbs and a layer of egg custard.

She estimated amounts, and I haven't yet tried to recreate the recipe, but I did crack up when at the end of her dissertation she asserted, "It is thus."

My other traditional local meal came at the recommendation of the friendly clerk at the Furla store. I really wanted to try the local dish called tortelli d'erbetta, a small, delicate ravioli stuffed with fresh ricotta and a green leafy vegetable such as Swiss chard or spinach.

So I asked her where to find the best for lunch and she directed me to a side street off Piazza Girabaldi and a food shop, with instructions to go to the back. So I pushed past the stern-looking cashier at the rear of the shop and entered a hidden restaurant space, simple in decor but with maybe 20 tables, all covered with fabric tablecloths.

Sorelle Picchi is only open for lunch and is full of locals. The friendly waitress understood enough English to take my order (and I understood enough Italian to find my way around the menu) and I totally enjoyed the pasta and the experience.

More exploring, to work off the calories, brought me to pretty parks and past side streets lined with colorful houses.

Before resting my head at Palace Hotel Maria Luigia (Viale Mentana, 140), named for Napoleon's second wife (Maria Luigia), who was Duchess of Parma in the 1800s, I stopped by some of the gourmet shops to check out the product.

I had already picked up cheese on a parmesan factory tour, and you can't bring home prosciutto (due to U.S. Customs regulations), but I did buy some truffle oil. I passed on the $100 bottle of aged balsamic vinegar (there were cheaper varieties; I figured I could get those at home) but I'm sure it's delicious.

At Salumera Garibaldi (Via Garibaldi, 42) I decided to pick up a picnic dinner and came away with marinated Roman artichokes, cold octopus salad and a fried rice ball, a delicious feast for less than $20.

Sitting in the open-air courtyard at the hotel, listening to birds sing, I felt quite lucky to have discovered Parma.

If you go

HAM AND CHEESE: Consorzio del Formaggio Parmigiano Reggiano (www.parmigiano-reggiano.it) can arrange tours of parmesan cheese farms. They are usually offered for groups, but individual travelers are accommodated when possible. Similarly, the Consorzio del Prosciutto di Parma (www.prosciuttodiparma.com) can arrange tours of Parma ham factories. In September, during the annual ham festival, ham producers open their doors for tours and tastings.

STAYING THERE: The Palace Hotel Maria Luigia has comfortable rooms and is an easy walk away from the city's historic downtown and key sights. Rates for two from about $228; www.sinahotels.it

TOURING THERE: The tourist office, located at Via Melloni, 1/a, offers a free audio walk in English that will get you to the major sights. For about $6.25 you can purchase passes to get into the various museums and monuments.

World-famous real estate investor and author reveals secrets of buying homes with no money down

Robert Allen's legendary workshop reveals how to change your financial future in 90 days or less

Years ago, when I invented the now world-famous "Nothing Down" real estate system, people thought it simply couldn't be done... Buying real estate without investing a dime of your own money! But, I have proven it can be done, year after year, in all kinds of housing markets. Perhaps you've seen me on TV — or perhaps you've read one of my best-selling books.

I've shown tens of thousands that just about anyone can make a fortune in real estate. But I have to tell you, in all my years of showing people how to create wealth through real estate, I believe it's never been as easy as it is today. Plus, I believe you can make more money now in real estate than ever before. And you can do it quicker.

With low interest rates and soaring appreciation, now is the time that you could become my next real estate millionaire — perhaps even a multimillionaire. Even if you're stone-cold broke right now, you can still become richer than most Americans will ever be. The profit floodgates have truly opened for so many of my students. I believe you too can take advantage of all the lasting wealth that real estate can provide. And I'd like to tell you how in my updated workshop, Creating Wealth with Real Estate®.

SAN FRANCISCO

Challenge #1: Find fast wealth in any city, town, or neighborhood

When I first developed my revolutionary system for buying real estate, I very publicly challenged the media to... "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money." Keep in mind, I would have no cash to invest. No connections. No firsthand knowledge of the real estate market where I was going. But I would have my new system for buying real estate. And that meant none of the above mattered.

DONE

I didn't buy just one property. I bought four!

The Los Angeles Times took me up on my gutsy challenge. In just 57 hours, I had taken title to not one, but to four properties — adding $722,000 in assets to my real estate portfolio. That's the equivalent of more than $10,000 an hour.

ST. LOUIS

Challenge #2: Take someone from unemployed to over $100,000 in equity

No better example of "ANYBODY CAN DO THIS" exists than when I made another major public challenge. As you might be able to guess, I'm not shy about telling others how my system works. So I declared..."Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, that person will be back on his/her feet with $5,000 in the bank."

DONE

It was in St. Louis, Missouri, where I pulled a couple out of the unemployment line and placed them on the path to wealth. Within 90 days, these first-timers earned more than $5,000 in cash. But that was just the beginning... Within the next 12 months, they garnered more than $100,000. It changed their lives forever. Think of how an extra $100,000 or more could change your life and improve your family's future. What dreams have you put aside that $100,000 could reawaken?

NEW YORK

Challenge #3: Prove anyone can do it

I've become famous as America's leading expert on purchasing real estate with no money down. I've been interviewed in newspaper, and on radio and TV. In fact, Regis Philbin challenged me on the spot to prove my system worked for anyone. I selected a young woman right out of Regis' studio audience and guided this first-timer to earning more than $20,000 in 90 days. And now, I'd like to pull you out of your chair and invite you to discover why my powerful and internationally acclaimed Creating Wealth with Real Estate® program has been so hugely rewarding for people across the country — and why it can also be your path to substantial wealth.

DONE

Your turn to succeed

Can you become a millionaire? Dozens of my students have. At the FREE preview of my workshop, you'll see real-life examples of how my powerful wealth-creation strategies have helped people jump into making money right away.

Challenge #4: Make you my next millionaire! STARTS NOW!

I've proved time and again that my system can work just about anywhere, anytime, and for just about anyone — even people who are flat broke. Now, I'd like to prove it can work for you. In fact, my big mouth could make you a millionaire. That's because I've challenged myself to create millionaires all across America. Yup, I went right for the "M" word: millionaire. Raised a few eyebrows with that one. But remember, you don't need money in the bank to buy real estate. You don't even need good credit. All you need is my Creating Wealth with Real Estate® system and the personal gumption to go out and apply it.

Now it's your turn to take a step toward real wealth

The wealth is out there. I will show you how it's possible to find it and grab it. Take a life-changing step toward financial independence for yourself and your family today. The road (it's more of a superhighway actually) to millionaire status begins right here. Right now, my goal is to create millionaires all across the country. And I'd like to count you among them. There's no telling when my FREE workshop will be back in your area, because it's simply impossible for me to bring my famous workshop to every city. Grab this unique opportunity to discover hidden wealth opportunities in real estate.

Bring someone you care about

If you have a friend or family member who wants to increase their wealth, bring them to this FREE empowering event. I believe there's never been a better time to invest in real estate. Forecasts call for soaring demand for homes and rising prices. At this free event, you'll see how it's possible to ride this historic trend to personal riches.

True Stories. True Success.

"Right now, I have a positive cash flow of $2,800 on one property."
— Richard Douglas, New Jersey

"We didn't take anything out of our pocket, and we bought a $250,000 property that gives us a $900 monthly cash flow."
— Guy Burns, Nevada

"I bought two pieces of property and made $25,000 in 90 days. It's so easy to do this stuff, it's amazing."
— Gary Harris, Missouri

"These are proven methods — they work. You can make $25,000 to $35,000 in a matter of 60 days or less."
— Preston Fleming, Illinois

"I just sold my first project; my net profit after all costs was $65,000. I received the check on my 40th birthday."
— Henning Van Deusen-Jensen, California

"Today has been the best day of our real estate careers. We sold our fourth house. This will put our net worth to around $1 million."
— John (Chuck) Neuschafer, Georgia

You will discover it's possible to:

- Buy prime real estate without a penny of your own money
- Acquire properties at below market value and put the difference in your pocket
- Profit in unexpected ways from some of the lowest mortgage rates in decades
- Generate immediate cash flow
- Turn your retirement account back into the comfy nest egg it's supposed to be
- Locate hugely lucrative properties nobody else knows about
- Find fantastic foreclosure properties before they ever hit the courthouse steps
- Build substantial monthly income

Showing some 'Respect'

Quincy performer featured in new musical dedicated to women

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

In "Respect: A Musical Journey of Women," now at Boston's Stuart Street Playhouse, Tiana Checchia is one of four performers singing the praises of women through popular music.

"The story is about women, but the show is for everybody," explained Checchia by telephone before a matinee last week. "We're four women of different ages and from different places, a narrator and three singers, and we get to do some amazing songs."

Vanderbilt University faculty member Dr. Dorothy Marcic created the show based on her 2002 book, "Respect: Women and Popular Music," in which she examines the role of women in 20th-century America through the lyrics of Top 40 songs sung by women between 1900 and 2000. Marcic's staging of "Respect" chronicles four women and the music they listened to at important milestones in their lives, including "Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home," "Where the Boys Are," "Someone to Watch Over Me," "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend," "Whatever Lola Wants," "Dedicated to the One I Love," and the Aretha Franklin anthem, "R-E-S-P-E-C-T."

For Checchia, a 27-year-old Notre Dame graduate who played Sandy on the national tour of "Grease," the show is an introduction to a whole range of music that is new to her. "I do musical theater. In addition to 'Grease,' I've done 'A Chorus Line,' 'Fiddler on the Roof,' and 'The Sound of Music' at the regional level. That's my speed, but with this show I'm getting to perform in all kinds of musical styles, from classics from the American songbook to country and reggae. The story is told chronologically so the songs are used to both tell the story and also set the period."

"The story is about women, but the show is for everybody."
Performer, Tiana Checchia

The current Quincy resident, who was born and brought up on Long Island, is quick to point out that the show has strengthened her appreciation of some of the music. "I had heard Helen Reddy's recording of 'I Am Woman' before I did this show, of course, but I'm not sure I ever fully got it. It had always seemed cliched to me, until I learned what a powerful feminist anthem it was when it was first released in 1972. Only when I heard it in our show did I understand how empowering it was for women. The whole Betty Friedan conciousness-raising movement, combined with everything Gloria Steinem has done, are very important parts of 'Respect,' and have become very important to me."

Before the story reaches the women's movement, however, there are some earlier stops Checchia is also enjoying. "I play Betty Boop when I sing 'I Wanna Be Loved By You,' and we get to show that Betty Boop was more than just a cartoon character. She was also an important form of escapist entertainment during the Depression." The animated vixen isn't the only well-known 20th-century woman being remembered with "Respect." "There are quite a few women whom we portray who have really influenced me, like Mother Theresa and so many others," says Checchia, who credits two special women with being her inspiration. "Professionally, I have always loved and looked up to Julie Andrews as a role model. In addition to being supremely talented, she always does things with dignity and class. In my personal life, my mother has always been a huge influence, because of her love and encouragement. I'm not sure I could have accomplished half of what I have in my life without my mother's constant support."

"Respect, A Musical Journey" is at the Stuart Street Playhouse, 200 Stuart St., Boston. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.stuartstreetplayhouse.com.

Movie review

Real monsters haunt 'Evil'

Film Review
By: James Verniere

"Deliver Us from Evil" (A-)

The most horrific film of the fall season is not going to be "Texas Chainsaw Massacre: The Beginning," "The Grudge 2" or "Saw 3." The most horrifying film of the season is easily Amy Berg's stunning documentary "Deliver Us from Evil," a film in which the monsters are all too real. If you're not already mad as hell about the pedophile priest scandal, you are about to be.

A devastating portrait of the victims, the perpetrators and their unindicted enablers, including an up-close-and-personal interview with a madman still on the loose in Ireland, "Deliver Us from Evil" is a skin-crawling experience.

Meet Father Ollie O'Grady, a man who tells us he likes "helping people." Father Ollie is also a pedophile who can't get his head around the idea that what he did for 30 years to children is a terrible crime. Neither, apparently could the church hierarchy, which bounced O'Grady from parish to parish in Northern California in the 1970s without warnings.

Former priest Oliver O'Grady is seen in a public park in Ireland.

The film comprises interviews with O'Grady's male and female victims as well as grief-stricken parents, two of whom allowed O'Grady into their home, where he raped their daughter.

How the police and various district attorneys did not step up is the great unspoken aspect of this awful story.

Father Ollie's heroic counterpart is Father Tom Doyle, a lawyer and historian who has won no friends at the Vatican with his anti-pedophile crusade. Doyle describes the church's action as a web of "deception, denial, perjury and deceit."

To hear Father O'Grady discuss his plans for a reunion at which he hopes to apologize to his assembled victims is to see just how delusional a truly evil person can be. A final shot of Father O'Grady peering at children in a playground will leave you feeling utterly betrayed. "Deliver Us from Evil," indeed.

"Deliver Us from Evil" contains graphic descriptions of sexual activity.

Singer Suzette Dorsey as Tina Turner

A Tina Turner tribute

Raffael's serves up a show that is 'Simply The Best'

Singer Suzette Dorsey was headlining her own rock band in the late 1980s when a job offer came that would change her life.

"I was performing with my group, 'White Bridge,' when I was asked to sing back-up for a video involving Prince and Michael Jackson look-alikes. I had previously sung back-up for an Elvis impersonator so the idea wasn't entirely new. I just didn't know when I first agreed where it would all lead," said Dorsey last week by telephone from her home in Cherry Hill, N.J.

Dorsey's own visual and vocal resemblance to another music legend didn't go unnoticed and before long she was cast as a Tina Turner look-alike in the national tour of the Las Vegas production of "Legends in Concert!" In 1992, while performing with "Legends," Dorsey was signed by a British entertainment agent to perform all over Europe, the Middle East, and Japan as Tina Turner in her own tribute show called "Simply The Best." It is that show which she will bring to Raffael's in Walpole on Friday for one night only.

"I recreate Tina in terms of both her sound and her look. My goal is to make my audiences believers in my ability to recreate Tina Turner for them. I want my show to be eye-opening, entertaining and sincere. I want people to hear Tina when they have their eyes closed and see her when they open them." In the years since she rocked out to "Proud Mary" for the first time, Dorsey has honed her portrayal of the Grammy Award-winner who first found fame in the 1960s as part of the Ike and Tina Turner Revue. Dorsey has also learned that it takes more than a little technique to recreate the Tennessee-born Turner's best-known songs like "Better Be Good To Me," "Private Dancer," "What's Love Got to Do With It," and 'We Don't Need Another Hero."

"Tina's music is not that easy to sing. You really have to know your stuff," explains Dorsey, who earned a degree in music and acting from Pennsylvania's Shippensburg University. "I know every nook and cranny of her sound and her style. Since we are recreating one of her concerts, it is very important that we be as close as possible to the original. We have to do Tina proud."

Dorsey, who performs "Simply The Best" with a seven-piece band and four back-up singers, has seen Turner and many other real-life legends in concert. Each time, she has come away entertained and informed.

"As an entertainer, any time I go to a concert I am enjoying myself, but I am also studying the performer. I study performers because that is what I do for a living. I remember going to one of Tina's concerts in 1988 in Philadelphia. The minute she started, I saw my own face up there. It was before I had even done Tina and yet by the time I left that show I was Tina through and through. When the music started, I became Tina. In the years since then, I have matured a great deal, but I still channel Tina and I still feel her whenever I do her music."

The Palmyra, N.J.-born mother of three — Tatiana, 20, D.J., 7, and 2-year-old Ashiyah — says even her own children sometimes mistake her for the superstar.

"When Tina is on TV, Ashiyah says, 'That's you. Mommy. That's you.'"

Even though Dorsey's other musical tastes run the gamut from Barbra Streisand and Celine Dion to Sheryl Crow and Iron Maiden, she sometimes finds it hard to escape the former Anna Mae Bullock.

"Not a day goes by that I don't hear Tina on the radio or in the supermarket, or sometimes even in an elevator. Whether we realize it or not, she's a fixture in all our lives. I'm very proud and happy for her."

J.M. Productions will present Suzette Dorsey as Tina Turner in "Simply The Best" at Raffael's, 1601 Main Street, Walpole, on Oct. 20. For tickets and information, call 617-786-7469 or visit www.jmproductionspresents.com.

"I think God put me on earth to help people"
— Mary Jeanette Murray

'Great lady' fondly remembered

Murray passes away at 81

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Mary Jeanette Murray often described herself as a "people person."

This week, "her people" – the many who loved and admired her – are remembering the former state representative who always put her constituents first.

Murray, 81, passed away Monday after a battle with cancer. The funeral mass for her Saturday morning at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset will very likely see an overflow crowd of dignitaries and just ordinary folk, nearly all of whom have a "Mary Jeanette" memory to share.

The 12-term state representative — whose district included Hingham, Hull and Cohasset — was also a mother, grandmother, former Girl Scout leader, den mother, basketball coach and U.S. Marine.

David Farrag of Cohasset, now a lawyer in private practice, worked with Murray as an intern when he was a college student in the mid-1990s.

He said Murray treated junior representatives just like interns and former first-time Rep. Paul Cellucci sat right behind her when he was first elected to office.

"Years later when Paul Cellucci was governor he was walking down the hall with a group of people and Mary Jeanette wanted to talk to him about a bill that he had vetoed," Farrag recalled. "So she yelled 'Paul!' and wagged her finger at him to come over.

TOWN MEETING

Village Zoning

Citizens Petitions on Nov. 13 warrant

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The downtown area will be a topic of much discussion at the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting. A total of five citizens' petitions are on the Warrant, which will attempt to change the zoning for Cohasset Village.

Attorney Richard Henderson came before the Board of Selectmen on behalf of his client, Scituate resident John Tedeschi, formerly of Cohasset, who filed the citizens' petitions, to explain the articles and hopefully get a vote of approval for Town Meeting.

Tedeschi owns a parcel of land on Smith Place, formerly owned by Richard Brown. After roughly one year of trying to gain approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals, Brown received permission to raze the small building currently located at 2 Smith Place and replace it with a 7,500-square-foot structure. The project Brown had envisioned building was nothing like what was permitted, and he therefore sold the project. While Tedeschi can build Brown's project as permitted, he would like to instead build a Nantucket shingle style, multi-use building with 10 retail spaces on the bottom and 10 housing units on the top. To make that dream a reality, the town's zoning bylaws would have to change.

- The first article would ask the town to approve creating a separate zoning district, the Cohasset Village Business

School technology requests questioned

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With some more information, the Board of Selectmen has agreed it will consider changing its recommendation on allocating capital budget funding for technology upgrades at the schools. At its Oct. 16 meeting, the board approved $300,000 in capital requests — to be voted on at Town Meeting — none of which was for the schools.

To that end, the school department has been sending information to Selectmen to try to help its case for receiving $100,000 this year and for the next four years for technology upgrades.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh sent a copy of the Planning and Technology Committee's (a sub-committee of the Strategic Planning Committee) report to help the board understand the district's goals for upgrading technology in the future. The report includes a three-year technology plan, a list of revenue generation opportunities, and a benchmarking survey.

GRIDIRON GIRL

Fearless female tackles football

10-year-old is Stingrays' linebacker

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset's Molly Fitzgerald, 10, is just one of the guys when it comes to playing football on the Scituate Cohasset Stingrays Pee Wee team.

There isn't much that sets Molly Fitzgerald apart from her teammates on the field. They all play hard, try their best and they all have a passion for the game — but hers is the only helmet with brunette locks flowing out the back.

At 10 years old, Molly has just begun her football career and is a linebacker on the Scituate Cohasset Stingrays Pee Wee football team. Of the roughly 35 athletes who play, she is the only girl on her team, and as far as she knows, she is also the only girl to have ever played football in the Scituate Cohasset Youth Football league.

"Football is a really big part of my life," said Molly, as her whole family is really into the sport. Her father Joe is a long-time Chicago Bears fan and his enthusiasm has spread to her mother Jill as well as her younger brothers Max, 8, and Mason, 6. She plays so much football in the yard with her brothers it seemed natural to play on a team. "I've always seen myself playing football when I got older. I love it," she said.

Molly is currently a student in Erica Kurkjian's fifth grade class. Over the summer when she told fellow Deer Hill students she was going to be on their football team come fall, some of the boys didn't believe her until they saw her at practice. Feeling slightly uneasy on the first day, "It took me a while to talk to them," she said, but it didn't take long for her teammates to see the power she has on the field and warm up to the idea of having a girl on the team. "I've always been really aggressive. I like tackling, it's really fun," she said, and as a linebacker, she has had plenty of opportunity to bring

Spate of motor vehicle crashes last week

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police said no one was seriously injured in four motor vehicle accidents that occurred in town last week.

Two occurred last Monday (Oct. 16). The first, at 2:19 p.m. on Beechwood Street, involved a motor vehicle crashing into a telephone pole.

Chief James Hussey said the operator, a teenager, reported she had taken her eyes off the road and her car, a 1991 Toyota Camry, hit the pole.

At 7:17 p.m. that Monday, a two-car accident occurred at the lights at Route 3A and Pond Street. Chief Hussey said a 1996 Ford Taurus was traveling east on Pond Street, when a 2004 Jeep Liberty that was traveling west on Pond, started to make a left-turn onto 3A at the lights and hit the Toyota that was going straight through the intersection. Both operators agree the light was green, Hussey said.

The operator of the Jeep was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic, he said. Both cars were towed from the scene.

Last Wednesday (Oct. 18) at 8:10 a.m., a dump truck that was traveling east on Norman Todd Road backed into a 2004 Audi.

Here's what police report happened. The driver of the dump truck realized he had passed the left-hand turn onto Beechwood Street, so he stopped. The Audi that was traveling behind the truck also stopped. The dump truck driver apparently did not see the Audi, and put the truck into reverse and backed up into the car. Hussey said the operator of the truck and the Audi both refused medical treatment at the scene. The dump truck driver was cited for failure to use care when operating a motor vehicle.

On last Friday at about 2:50 p.m., a 1998 Toyota Camry entered Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) from a parking lot and tried to make a left onto the state highway. As it crossed the travel lane, the Camry hit a 1995 Honda Accord. Both drivers had minor injuries but were not transported to the hospital. The operator of the Camry was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic, Hussey said.

Out-of-staters

A couple of men, who allegedly asked where they could purchase drugs last Saturday, approached an off-duty police officer at a local convenience store.

"It raised our concerns about who these people were that were openly asking people where they could buy drugs."
— Police Chief James Hussey

The incident took place about 6:30 p.m. at a convenience store on Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Chief James Hussey said the off-duty officer called police headquarters. As it turned out, one of the men had an outstanding warrant and the other did not have a driver's license in his possession and his motor vehicle was unregistered.

Hussey said the two men were taken into custody. "It raised our concerns about who these people were that were openly asking people where they could buy drugs," Hussey said.

Arrested were Nicholas Reeves, 6224 Dudley Court, Littleton, Conn., on charges of unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and having an unregistered MV; and Douglas Jarrell, 500 Fifth St., Gulfport, Miss., on an outstanding warrant.

Ran red light

Several witnesses confirmed a car driving along Route 3A went through the red light at Beechwood and 3A last Tuesday (Oct. 17) at about 2:50 p.m. The 2004 VW Jetta that ran the light then pulled into the Dunkin Donuts drive-through at Leo's Exxon. One operator said the car almost hit his car, and he followed the Jetta into Leo's and confronted the driver about her poor driving.

Police, who had received several calls about the Jetta, responded to the scene.

"We never want to see a driver confront another driver because they may not realize what they could be getting into," Chief Hussey said. "The police need to handle the situation."

The driver of the Jetta was cited for a red light violation.

Traffic stops

Last week, police made a slew of traffic stops at Sohier Street and Ripley Road. Chief Hussey said police routinely target specific areas to do selective traffic enforcement. The Sohier Street area is of particular concern because there are two schools in the vicinity.

Last Wednesday (Oct. 18), police issued citations and gave verbal warnings to drivers at the Sohier/Ripley lights who may have not come to a full stop at the red light before making a right-hand turn and for other traffic violations.

Warrant arrest

Billerica police asked Cohasset police to locate the owner of an abandoned motor vehicle in their town. The man who owned the car lives in Cohasset. Cohasset police ran the man's information and it turned out he was wanted on a warrant out of a district court in Boston and was taken into custody.

Door-to-door

A door-to-door magazine salesman was informed of the Cohasset bylaw requiring registering with the police last week. Police received a complaint about 1:40 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 21).

Under the new bylaw, solicitors are required to register with the police where they can apply for a $25 license. They are required to wear a badge issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. In addition solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

The individual gave the information to his company and indicated they would probably not be coming to Cohasset to sell magazines, Hussey said.

Rotary talks real estate

The Rotary Club will meet Monday, Oct. 30 at the Lightkeepers' Residence on Government Island. Cohasset Rotarian Lorraine Tarpey and Erica Rice, manager of Coldwell Banker Cohasset, will speak on real estate.

The Rotary Club meets every Monday night at the Lightkeepers' Residence. Meetings are open to the public. Call Jean Roche at (781) 589-0461 if you plan to attend.

Selectmen meet Monday

An additional Board of Selectmen meeting has been scheduled for Monday, Oct. 30. With the fall Special Town Meeting scheduled for Monday, Nov. 13, the board decided another meeting is necessary.

Planning board looks to preserve Village charm

Seeks money for master plan

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When Warner Brothers came knocking on Cohasset's door 20 years ago looking to film "The Witches of Eastwick," it was for a reason. Cohasset Village has a charm that is quintessential New England, and members of the Planning Board would like to see that character preserved.

To that end, Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt came before the Board of Selectmen Oct. 16 to ask it to include an article on the Special Town Meeting Warrant, that would set aside $50,000 to hire a consultant to draft a Village master plan. The Planning Board would apply for applicable grant funding to offset and/or supplement the $50,000. Although the deadline for article submissions had passed, after hearing Pratt's testimony, the board agreed to it. It voted to recommend the article to Town Meeting at its Oct. 23 meeting.

Pratt explained there are a number of zoning articles on the Town Meeting Warrant that have been brought forward by citizens and could change the look and character of the Village permanently (see related story). Due to the fact that the town is currently without a Town Planner, he feels there should be a retained professional available to help guide the town through any proposed zoning changes.

The Planning Board would apply for applicable grant funding to offset and/or supplement the $50,000.

In a memo to Selectmen he wrote, "Simply put, without a Town Planner in place, and/or without a retained specialized planning firm to guide us through an open, public, and professional planning process, our board believes the town should not proceed with rezoning initiatives for what is unquestionably the most important commercial district of the town, as viewed in terms of the core character of Cohasset."

Pratt explained the Village was essentially born when the harbor got too crowded. "People started selling out of their homes," and those residences have evolved into the quirky feel of the Village as it is today. "We never want to lose that," he said.

The article would ask the town to retain a professional retail consulting planning firm to conduct a public planning process, overseen by the Planning Board, which will result in a master planning study for the village portion of the Downtown Business commercial zoning district.

The study will be called the "Cohasset Village Master Plan" and will involve holding no fewer than five public meetings and at least one legally noticed public hearing. The study will hope to identify the optimal mix of affordable housing, historical preservation strategies, open space, pedestrian access, retain and other commercial space, market rate owner occupied and rental housing, and vehicular parking inventory for the Village.

Its primary planning purpose will be the maintenance of the general character of the Village as an essential element of the physical character of the town, and it will also produce a comparative series of build-out analyses for public review and input, which will professionally estimate the net new generation of commercial and residential square footage of built structures in the Village and the requisite requirements for pedestrian access, parking space inventory and sewer capacity.

Pratt said one of the most important elements of the proposed Village Master Plan process is the fact that the hearings will be held for residents of the town who will decide how they want to see the area develop. He said in the past, projects for the downtown area have been guided by outside companies and the result has been a waste of time and money.

Selectmen not sold on downtown zoning changes

FROM ZONING, PAGE 1

District, for the so-called Cohasset Village area. Currently, there are three areas defined as the Downtown Business District: the Cohasset Village area, a portion of the Harbor area and a small area in the Beechwood section. If the article passes, the Village Business District would be a separate zoning district to be governed by its own dimensional provisions which would have more liberal standards with respect to the creation of multiple family housing than would exist in other business districts. "This will define the Village as a separate district," said Henderson.

- The second article would formally put the new district on the town's zoning maps.
- The third would then create new dimensional requirements for dwellings occupied by more than one family in the Village Business District. The current Downtown Business District requires that in order to have a dwelling for more than one family, it must be on a 40,000-square-foot lot. For each additional residential unit (more than two) an additional 4,000 square feet of land area is required. The article would reduce the minimum lot size for multi-family dwellings to 3,000 and would require only 1,500 square feet of land area for each additional residential unit. No lot could be improved with more than 10 residential units.

"This is the heart of the town and one person's project can change the whole thing."
— Selectman Gary Vanderweil

- The fourth article would impose the same use provisions on the Village Business District that already apply to the Downtown Business District. In essence, the use provisions would remain unchanged.
- The fifth article would waive certain parking requirements for businesses within 500 feet of the new Pleasant Street parking lot. The municipal parking lot was recently altered in connection with the installation of the Greenbush rail line and new additional parking was provided for the Downtown Business District in a small lot off Pleasant Street. The amendment would extend to businesses within 500 feet of the new Pleasant Street Parking lot the same exemption benefiting businesses within 500 feet of the municipal parking lot, located off South Main Street.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he would not like to see any of the articles move forward without the help of either a Town Planner of a consultant. The Planning Board has an article on the Warrant, which asks for the funding to hire a planning consultant, as the town is currently without a Town Planer. "This is the heart of the town and one person's project can change the whole thing," he said.

Henderson said the changes would not be made for one person's project. "This is not a special permit issue, this is a variance issue," he said, as no developer would be able to have a multi-use building in the Village due to the lot size restriction currently in place.

Vanderweil said there are many things he would like to understand before giving his approval on any of the articles, including its effects on greenspace and parking.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer added making changes like the proposed articles are asking without the proper research is not prudent for the town. "We're flying blind without the data and we have an article on the Warrant that would give us that data," as the Planning Board has asked for funding to hire a consultant to draft a master plan for the Village, he said.

The board agreed to defer its decision on the articles until it received more statistical information for the Village including lot sizes, sewer information and parking information. The board said it would try to make a decision on whether or not to recommend the articles by Town Meeting.

Schools lock in natural gas price

At the Oct. 18 School Committee meeting, School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro reported the school department has begun negotiating a contract with the South Shore Educational Collaborative that would lock the schools into a fixed rate for natural gas. Amaretta Hess would provide the utility and the one-year contract with the SSEC would begin Nov. 1.

DeGennaro said while no one is sure what the future will bring in terms of gas prices, the schools would lock in at $1.0893 per thermal unit. That would be a decrease from what the school department had been paying at $1.221 per thermal unit. With a difference of $0.1317, he said, "We could actually see some good savings."

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said if he remembers correctly, the schools used roughly 140,000 thermal units last year. With the anticipated cost savings, if the schools used the same amount of thermal units this year, the district could see savings of roughly $18,000. "Last year, we had about $130,000 left over and this year's budget has an increase of almost another $150,000," he said. He said while he understands the additional money was budgeted to ensure the schools have enough money to cover a bad winter, if this winter is mild, as it was last year, there could be roughly $230,000 left over at the end of the season, or potentially $250,000 with the cost savings found by the new price freeze. "Are we comfortable with a $250,000 cushion?" he asked.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh noted the locked-in price does not include the price of gas delivery, as another vendor provides that service. She said while it would be wonderful to have money left over in the spring, the schools cannot count on a mild winter.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund shares some anecdotes with Mary Jeanette Murray about her legendary "printing press" during the Citizen of the Year reception in her honor in Cohasset in 2001.

'Great lady' fondly remembered

"Cellucci came over and said quietly, 'Mary Jeanette, you can't call me over like this – I'm the governor now."

To Murray, it didn't matter who you were or where you were from – she treated everyone the same way. She focused on what she could do to help.

Bill Ramsey of Hingham, who is now an assistant district attorney in Tim Cruz's office, worked as an intern with Murray during his first year of law school.

"One of the stories that always stuck out in my mind was seeing a Korean veteran in Mary Jeanette's office who had an issue with health benefits," Ramsey recalls. "I remember how hard she worked for him. Then I found out he was from Dorchester – he did not even live in her district.

"She was always going that extra mile to help and felt obliged to help all veterans."

For her many years of dedicated service and loyalty to her constituents, Murray was selected as Cohasset's Citizen of the Year in 2001.

"I am a people person," Murray told the Cohasset Mariner in February 2001 when she learned of the recognition. "I was brought up to know that I could do whatever I wanted in life. I think God put me on earth to help people."

Murray, who inherited her father Nathaniel Hurwitz's athletic ability, drew on his example of public service that provided the cornerstone of her career. Hurwitz served as state representative and commissioner of veterans' services. He was a WWI veteran. Murray served in the Marines during WWII.

She regularly threw out the first pitch on Little League opening day each spring in Cohasset. She also attended events – sometimes several in a single day – in her three towns. She usually brought along a citation signed by herself and the speaker honoring a constituent's achievement.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) said he used to joke that Murray had her own printing press for citations. Then when she was cleaning out her office after she retired, there it was – her own printing press, he recalled.

Hedlund said while he and Murray did not always agree on bills, they developed a bond over time.

"She was not one of those lawyerly types with a Blackberry and a laptop," Hedlund said. "The only tool Mary Jeanette needed was a telephone. She always got back to people, she was always on that phone."

Hedlund said he would remember Murray as someone who served her country, who was patriotic with traditional conservative values and who was a pat-on-the-back, one-on-one politician.

"Mary Jeanette was loyal to the people she represented – she did not worry about what the Republican or Democratic leadership felt," he said. "She had her values and stuck to them. I wish we had more people up there (State House) like that now."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley (D-Hingham), who represents Murray's Third Plymouth District, said Murray told him he didn't replace her, he would simply follow her. "And she was right," Bradley said, describing Murray as a "great lady."

"She was a true public servant and until the day she died, she was still doing constituent work," Bradley said. Murray had been serving as Cohasset Veterans Agent for the past year.

He said he learned "follow-through" from Murray's example. "It's easy to make the phone call," Bradley said. "But she kept on it until the issue was resolved."

Bradley said Murray's constituent service was her hallmark and her connection with "her people."

"If someone called her 'representative' – she knew they weren't from her district," Bradley said. "She was 'Mary Jeanette' to everyone else."

He said the House would adjourn in Murray's memory today (Thursday).

Marie Parente, a Democrat who represents the 10th Worcester District, described Murray as a "great lady and a great Marine."

"She took great pride in being a Marine and I made the mistake once of introducing Mary Jeanette as 'my friend and former Marine.' She corrected me right away and said 'once a Marine, always a Marine.'"

Parente described Murray as someone who stuck to her core values and fought for many women's issues. "She was a pioneer in the Legislature and would often cross party lines to enact legislation to advance the cause of women."

Parente said her family would miss her, as will the people of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset. "But the entire state lost a person of core values," she said. "I can still see Mary Jeanette standing at attention during the Pledge of Allegiance with her blue eyes sparkling. She loved her country."

Former long-time legislative aide, Nancy O'Toole of Cohasset, said there was no one more dedicated than Murray. "Her favorite expression was 'her people.' From the minutest thing you could think of, she took care of all of them.

"She was a real constituent legislator and took care of her constituents as if they were her own children," O'Toole said.

Hingham Selectmen Chairman Philip Edmundson said he was always very impressed with how Murray presented herself in public settings.

"She was dignified but not self-important," he said. "She knew how to march in a parade and work a crowd in a fashion that would make any politician proud. My sympathies go out to her family, friends and former constituents in Hingham, Hull and Cohasset."

Cohasset Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said when Murray campaigned for public office it was a personal affair.

"She knew her constituents by name because she would tirelessly visit house after house in her district on foot asking that you consider her candidacy. She never asked for your vote, only that you consider her when you checked the ballot.

"'If all politics is local' as Tip O'Neil is quoted as having said, Mary Jeanette was the exponent of that wisdom," Dormitzer said. "More than politics, however, Mary Jeanette was about serving her constituents. As a state representative she would answer her own phone, return calls and assume your issue as her own. Her interest in you and helping was genuine and personal. She will be missed by all of us who knew and loved her."

Enrolling NOW for November 7th Course

Could you use some reliable tools and techniques to help you handle the everyday challenge of raising kids?

If you feel that fear, force, punishment and threats are not getting the results you want, contact me now to enroll in the 5 night RCB program to find out what other classes and services are available at 781.210.7106 or staceyz@rcbsouthshore.com.

The Redirecting Children's Behavior parenting program is a proven approach that works by enhancing communication and understanding between adults and children.

Parents and teachers who have made the commitment to take this course say they now have more peace and less fighting around their children. And, they feel more in control.

"After the last class I stood in front of my bookcase, the shelves bending under the weight of all my parenting books and said to my husband, 'We have no use for these. We now have the only program we will ever need.' Thanks!"

ENJOY LITTLE MOMENTS

Hello Cohasset. I am writing this column this week with a sad heart as we lost a family member last weekend quite suddenly. My reason for mentioning this is to remind and encourage us all to take each day in a great way, embrace all the pieces of the day and enjoy life's little moments along with all of the huge ones.

Life changes so fast as we all know but sometimes forget in the fast-paced and hectic ways that we need to move through the days. I wish their was some magic solution to help us all have at least one day a week where we could just turn off the outside stuff and enjoy our family and friends from the start of the day to the time we hit the hay but know it is not realistic. I guess we all just have to be happy with those little moments and quick, passing times that we can laugh, enjoy and love.

On another note, don't forget to set the clocks back on Sunday (well, before you go to bed on Saturday would work better I guess.) Winter is just around the corner but continue to enjoy the Fall and Happy Halloween! A note to all the pumpkin-smashers in town, please stop! Just imagine what it is like for the little kiddos who get up in the morning to check on their pumpkin creation made with that special someone only to find that it is now smashed in the road. For what gain, 2-4 minutes of "happiness" or "coolness" that whoever it is had while smashing it? It is so not worth it and is very uncool.

FIELD HOCKEY STARS

Congratulations to the seventh-grade girls field hockey team who played a terrific game yesterday against Westwood Middle School and won 3-0! The girls opened up the first half with a goal by Sage Stebbins assisted by Haley Wheelwright and Caitlin DeAngelis! Anya Gruber, Watson Leffel and Camryn Caron provided the midfield support that kept the ball in the Westwood end!

The second half Cohasset really clicked with 2 more goals scored by Camryn Caron and Caitlin De Angelis. Assists were provided by Sidney Waters, Kayla Orner. The defense played an awesome game not letting anything go through and sending the ball back up field! Big congratulations to Abbey Ayers, Carly Schwantner, Kayla Orner, who had strong games in defense. Whitney Jaffe had her first shutout in goal! Three of our eighth-graders: Sarah Mavilia, Natalie Dignam and Bridget Ayers played key support roles to sub for the seventh-graders who couldn't make the game. The game is on Friday, Oct. 27th at Thayer for the eighth-grade team! Good luck girls!

JUNIOR GARDENERS

The Cohasset Community Garden Club Junior Gardeners will hold their first meeting on Monday, Oct. 30 in the cafeteria at the Deer Hill School from 2:45-3:45 p.m.. This is a free pilot program and is open to all students. At the first meeting, the gardeners will be planting spring bulbs at the school under the direction of Jackie Fitts.

AT BRYANT

All the best for great college careers to Stephen G. Simmons and Katherine A. Bolger, who are both members of the Class of 2010 at Bryant University in Smithfield, R.I.

Stephen is an accounting student and Katherine is studying business administration.

Have a great year!

ON STAGE SOON

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is getting ready for a wonderful show called " The Women." This classic comedy by Clare Boothe Luce is being presented on Nov. 10, 11, 17 and 18 at 8 pm and Nov. 12 at 2 pm at the Cohasset Town Hall. Cohasset residents in this run are Barbara Baumgarten, Laura Coletta, Peggy Corrigan, Jennifer Dean, Barbara Elliot, Jo-Ann Heilman, and Roberta Raffa. They are joined by many other women from all over.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Front Street Books in Scituate or by calling 617-697-2115 and are also available at the door. The cost for this delightful evening out is $12 per ticket with group tickets available for groups of 8 or more.

30S EXHIBIT

Inspired by this production of "The Women," the Cohasset Historical Society is mounting an exhibit of 1930s fashions and memorabilia. Featuring afternoon wear in a livingroom setting, lingerie and dressing gowns in a bedroom setting and evening gowns in a setting reminiscent of the Casio Roof, the exhibit highlights a portion of the society's extensive clothing collection rarely exhibited. With a comprehensive archive of materials relating to the history of theater in Cohasset including many, many items from past CDC productions, the historical society has a long connection to the CDC. Included in the exhibit is a script of "The Women" from the CDC's_first production of the show in 1942. The exhibit opens on Nov. 10 and runs thru December, Monday through Friday 10 a.m.-4 p.m.. The Cohasset Historical Society Museum is at 106 S. Main St.

There will be an after hours event on November 8, 2006 at 5:30 p.m. at Pilgrim Bank, 800 Chief Justice Cushing Way. A representative of Massachusetts Workforce Training Fund will be present to discuss grant money, which is available from the Commonwealth for various employee training initiatives. Non-members are also invited. R.S.V.P. to Judy Lyden at 781-383-9089 or Nutrilink@AOL.com

HOT WHEELS

SPECIAL RAFFLE

The Cohasset Consignment Shop is conducting a raffle fundraiser to benefit a family in need this Christmas. They are raffling off a Waterford Christmas cookie jar valued at $400. Everyone is encouraged to visit the store and take part in this raffle. Tickets are 3 for $5 and our drawing will be held on the first of December.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

More than 180 State Street employees, including Graham Sida of Cohasset, volunteered at nine community organizations in Greater Boston in support of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay's recent 2006 Fall Community Care Day. Volunteers contributed 1,250 hours in support of activities ranging from repairing and cleaning the grounds of a day care center in Weymouth to working on creative arts projects with children in Chinatown.

ANIMAL SHELTER

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza is hosting a fundraiser for The Scituate Animal Shelter on Sat. Nov. 18 beginning at 10:30 a.m.. Buttonwood has arranged for Emily Carreiro of the Blue Hills Trailside Museum, and managed by Mass Audubon, to be at Buttonwood from 10:30 a.m. to noon. She will bring a Screech Owl, a Box Turtle and a Black Rat Snake to be viewed and admired! She will also bring "touch items," objects that can be handled.

Ms. Carreiro is a Teacher/Naturalist and will be available during her visit to answer questions. Buttonwood will be donating 20 percent percent of the day's receipts to the "3A Farm Fund", the name of the fund raising campaign established to raise money to purchase "The 3A Farm" in Scituate. The Scituate Animal Shelter is a no-kill shelter. It serves the town of Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell on an as-needed basis. Please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 for more information.

opposing teammates down to the ground.

But there is a softer side to Molly as well. She takes dance classes at Raquelle's Institute of Dance including ballet, tap, jazz and hip-hop. Jill said at the end of the day, it always strikes her as being funny that there will be shin guards, cleats and padding strewn about on the floor next to pink tights and leotards. But the dance training has proven beneficial as Jill said she thinks the reason Molly did so well during agility exercises on the football field is due to her grace in the dance studio.

Molly's brother Max is also on a football team and Jill said all the Fitzgeralds cheer each other on at their games. "Of course, they never brag about Molly doing ballet, but they do about football," she said. Molly added her brothers are always very supportive and are always openly proud of her during her games. "They'll scream, 'That's my sister,'" from the sidelines, she said.

While the Stingrays and her family and friends are behind her 100 percent, there have been awkward moments from opposing teams. "Everyone stares," said Molly, from the players to their friends to the cheerleaders. "It's hard." In fact, Molly said at her first pre-season game, she got really nervous and didn't want to play. She told her mom how she was feeling, but decided after coming so far, she wasn't ready to give up just yet. "I told her, 'I'm not going to quit. I'm going to do this for girls everywhere.'"

Even at the junior level, football is a very rough sport and Molly said she does get hurt, "But I get right back up." She said she hopes by playing with the boys, she can inspire other girls to go for their dreams, even if it's not considered something traditionally "girly."

"I think it's sad that a lot of girls don't play. More girls should. It's not a boys sport, it's rough, but if they stick with it, I think they could play," she said. Jill echoed Molly's sentiments. "I would love to see another girl playing," she said, adding they heard there was a female player who had signed up in Marshfield, but dropped out.

Jill said she is "beyond proud" of her daughter for pursuing the sport she loves no matter what. "When I took her home from the hospital she wore a Chicago Bears outfit," she said, adding, "I think she was playing football in utero."

Molly Fitzgerald goes in for the tackle during a game against Hingham. The Stingrays will play Hingham again this Sunday, and if her team wins, they will advance to the playoffs.

While currently, football is one of Molly's passions, she said she knows there will come a day when she has made her last tackle. "I'm going to play as long as I can without getting creamed," she said, as right now she is the same size as the boys, but as they all get older, the boys will one day outgrow her and the playing field will no longer be even. But even without football, Molly will have plenty to keep her busy as she plans to continue dancing and playing lacrosse, and may even pick up a new sport or two along the way.

Library Corner

Is Fithi looking for a few snacks from the vending machine at the library? Fithi, who escaped from her home at Our World, is still on the loose but does not pose a threat to anyone. Let's hope she is doing well (and don't worry, snakes do not like candy or junk food!)

Is there really a snake in the library?

A Snake in the Library?

Is there really a snake in the library? Well, we don't think so. Fithi, the Ball Python snake in the Our World Children's Museum, escaped from her cage a few weeks ago. Because the Museum is located in a separate wing of the same building as the library, we took the precaution of letting the public know that there may be a small possibility that the snake could find its way in to the library. It is not considered a threat to the public, but may surprise someone if it is found. We are hoping the snake is found soon and in good health.

FOR CHILDREN

Mamasteph Returns

MamaSteph will perform in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 10:30 a.m., Mondays, Oct. 30, Nov. 6, 13, 20 and Nov. 27. All ages and communities welcome. No registration required. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Drop-In Story Time

Drop-in Story Time will take place in the Children's Story Room Tuesdays, Oct. 31, Nov. 7, 14, 21 and 28, at 10:30 a.m. This is a lap-sit program that welcomes all ages and communities.

Letters About Literature

It's that time of year again. Letters About Literature asks students in grades 4 through 12 to write letters to authors whose work has make a significant difference in their lives. It invites personal and reflective writing about reading.

LAL is sponsored in Massachusetts by the Mass Center for the Book, with funding from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum, and is a project that feeds into the national program, which is run by the Library of Congress with funding from Target.

Local winners receive their awards in a moving ceremony at the State House. Last year Madeline Blackburn and Foster Eymer won level I Honorable Mention.

To view their letters and read more award-winning letters, go to www.massbook.org. Entry forms are available at massbook.org, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, and your school libraries. Entry deadline is Friday, Dec. 8. See Mrs. Moody or e-mail, smoody@ocln.org with any questions.

FOR ADULTS

Independent Film Night

The library will show the independent film Who's Camus Anyway? Thursday, Nov. 16, at 6 p.m. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Reference Help

The Reference Desk is staffed Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 10:00am to 5:00pm and most Thursday evenings 5 to 8 pm for your reference needs. Can't come in to the library? Hockey calendar raffle starts Nov. 5

It's almost time for the Cohasset Varsity Hockey team's annual Holiday Calendar Raffle event.

On Sunday, Nov. 5, members of this year's varsity hockey team will be going door-to-door throughout Cohasset selling $5 raffle tickets for the famous Holiday Raffle Calendar.

Local merchants throughout Cohasset have generously donated fabulous prizes, which will be awarded every day throughout the month of December.

Every $5 ticket has 31 chances to win, so it is hoped you all open your doors, your hearts, and your wallets to support Cohasset Varsity Hockey.

All proceeds support the team, including ice time, the assistant coach, and team jackets.

Thanks to all of the merchants and contributors who've helped support this event.

At CVS/pharmacy, we put a lot more into the communities we serve than a store. Like confidence, in the form of Teaberry Knoll's therapeutic riding for children with disabilities. Achievement, through our continuing work with Special Olympics. And support, with things like our CVS/pharmacy Charity Classic golf tournament, which has raised millions of dollars for hundreds of family and children's charities. We do all this because every community that we serve is also a community where we live. This is our home. And home is always where your heart is.

CVS/community. Working in it. Working for it.

CHS students give the gift of service

State Rep. Garrett Bradley answers questions raised by students concerning the upcoming election. During the assembly, topics such as Question 1 and the candidates' positions on MCAS were discussed.

Cohasset High School students are getting out of the classroom and giving back to the community in which they live. Through a community service class run by teacher Jack Buckley, students are volunteering their time to make the world a better place.

Buckley has been teaching in Cohasset since 1987 and the class, which was started with the arrival of block scheduling in the late 1990s, has evolved under his watch. "Once we switched to 90-minute periods, it allowed enough time for the students to go out into the community and go to work off campus," he said. Today, the class is offered once per semester, and students are doing great work.

Roxanne Tehranian is participating in an internship program at state Rep. Garrett Bradley's office, thanks to Buckley's class. In fact, Friday, Oct. 20 she coordinated an assembly for students, which Bradley and Sen. Robert Hedlund attended. The officials came to the school to speak to the students about the upcoming gubernatorial election.

"Once we switched to 90-minute periods, it allowed enough time for the students to go out into the community and go to work off campus."
— Jack Buckley, teacher

Being able to gain experience working at the State House is invaluable experience for Roxanne. She said once per week, she travels to Boston and helps in Bradley's office writing letters or any other tasks, which need to be done. She said this experience has further solidified her dream to one day go into politics herself. "I've learned so much about how the system works. About the issues and bills and acts. There's a lot that goes on behind the scenes," that she has been able to get firsthand experience with, she said.

Cohasset High School senior Haley Haracz is in her second semester of the community service class. In the spring she was able to collect like-new, secondhand soccer equipment, which was donated to young boys in Zimbabwe, Africa through the Passback Program. This year, she has plans once again to head up a similar equipment drive.

"I found out about the program through Mr. Buckley," said Haley, adding she worked on the project last year with her two friends Taylor Bukowski and Sarah Butman. This year, she is working alone, but the premise is still the same.

According to the program's Web site, the Passback Program is a joint effort between the U.S. Soccer Foundation, Eurosport and Major League Soccer to help meet the soccer uniform and equipment needs of all communities, regardless of income, gender or location. Since its inception, the program has grown enormously and thousands of pieces of equipment have been collected and distributed to schools, clubs and youth organizations across the nation.

Haley plays soccer for the high school team and also runs the concession stand for the youth soccer games on the weekends. During the games, she said she and her friends would put fliers on cars asking for donations. "On Saturdays, we would collect up there at the field," she said. She also spread the word among her teammates.

To really boost donations, Haley said they enlisted the help of middle school students as well. "The homeroom that brought in the most gear won a pizza party," she said.

"We collected anything and everything," she said, from cleats to socks to shin guards and jerseys. They even collected shorts, goalie gear and soccer balls. "We had everything," from equipment that children had outgrown to donations made at the end of the season by players who would not be using the equipment again. When everything was collected, it was sorted by size and boxed. "The soccer boosters sponsored it and we sent the gear over," she said.

The most rewarding part of the experience was receiving an e-mail from a soccer coach in Zimbabwe thanking the girls for their contribution. The coach explained by being involved in soccer, the roughly 92 boys ages 9 through 16 will occupy their time with a positive hobby. The boys have helped complete fund-raising in Zimbabwe to ensure their program keeps going strong. Haley said when it came time to name the team in Zimbabwe, they used the name "Cohasset."

"I really got a lot out of this project, especially being really into soccer," as it helped her bring the love of the game to children who might not otherwise have had the opportunity.

Seniors Callie Barrett, Mary Previte and Lacey Richardson are also in Buckley's class.

They will be hosting a hunger banquet Nov. 17, which will both raise students' awareness of how fortunate they are to be living in Cohasset, as well as collect donations for the Cohasset Food Pantry.

The girls explained during lunch, they will be handing out tickets to students who choose to participate in the event, and 80 percent of the tickets they hand out will be for the "poor" students. They will be given only rice and water for lunch. The other 20 percent, who will be randomly selected, will be treated to pizza and ice cream. "We want to make people aware of how lucky we are to be in Cohasset," said Mary, adding every student who participates is being asked to bring a canned food item to the banquet to be donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry. "It is hard to believe there are so many people who are less fortunate than us," said Callie.

In addition to the banquet, the girls have spent time soliciting donations for the Cohasset Food Pantry at Stop and Shop. They are also in the process of trying to find funding for the hunger banquet, as the students who will be eating pizza will be treated to lunch that day. The girls are responsible for paying for the lost revenue to the school's food services department that day.

Senior Blain Morin is working with the Alternative Energy Committee for his community service project. He is investigating the path Cohasset could take to make its schools more "green" or environmentally friendly. "I am going to go to Whitman/Hanson High School to do some research," as it is one of the most environmentally friendly schools around. "They have solar panels and have plans for a wind turbine. They also have vents that shut off when people leave the room to help save on heating bills," and he hopes to be able to get some ideas for Cohasset.

Blain said he will be trying to collect data on how much the schools spend on heat during the winter, as well as electricity for lights and water. "When the school was designed, it was not with the environment in mind," he said.

One of the most exciting prospects Blain has come across is the possibility of installing small wind turbines on school property. "They are affordable and quiet," he said, adding they are cost-effective and easy to install. "It's certainly feasible."

To make a donation of used soccer equipment to the Passback Program, or to donate canned items to the Cohasset Food Pantry project, please contact teacher Jack Buckley at the high school at (781) 383-6100 or via e-mail at jbuckley@cohassetk12.org. Equipment and canned goods can also be dropped off at the high school main office.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Farewell, Mary Jeanette

Cohasset's Wigmore Pierson hosted a Cable-TV show for 10 years from the mid-80s to mid-90s. It ran in dozens of towns and was not limited to the Third Plymouth District of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

We recall one show when he was announcing who the guests would be for the following week. Pierson simply said "Mary Jeanette" would be one of them. He did not say her last name or provide her title.

The moment gave us pause. We realized then that Mary Jeanette Murray needed no introduction. She was quite literally a household name in the district and beyond. She cared about people and followed through. She never forgot your kids' names, their sports or activities, or where they were going to school.

She was a "natural" politician in the most positive sense. She was genuine. You knew she cared and could be counted on.

Mary Jeanette was also fun. Known as the "Queen Bee," she kept a stash of candy in her desk in the House chamber where food was not allowed. But after hours of debate – where would all the reps be? They would be surrounding Mary Jeanette looking for a butterscotch or jellybean. At the same time, Mary Jeanette could use the moment to help lobby for her district or advance a cause she believed in.

Her athletic ability was legendary, and even well into her 70s, she could throw out the first pitch on the first day of Little League in Cohasset with the best of them. The ball would go right across the plate.

While we have had the pleasure of meeting Mary Jeanette's children and grandchildren, we never met her father, the late Nathaniel Hurwitz but know of his congenial personality and public service, both of which were legendary.

The apple – to coin a cliché – did not fall far from the tree.

The people of her hometown of Cohasset honored Mary Jeanette by selecting her as Citizen of the Year in 2001. She had retired from office that January after 24 years.

She said at the time, "I am a people person. I was brought up to know that I could do whatever I wanted in life.

"I think God put me on earth to help people."

Rich, poor, or in between – whether it was someone important or just an ordinary person — Mary Jeanette treated everyone the same way.

Her constituents – who are perhaps better described as friends – remember her as someone who was always accessible and as someone who never faulted on her strong commitment to maintain the best quality of life from the unborn to the elderly.

She was also incredibly proud of being a Marine and she was a great American.

"I can still see Mary Jeanette standing at attention during the Pledge of Allegiance with her blue eyes sparkling," recalls state Rep. Marie Parente, who served with Mary Jeanette for many years. "She loved her country."

Cohasset Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer put it best:

"'If all politics is local' as Tip O'Neil is quoted as having said, Mary Jeanette was the exponent of that wisdom," he said.

"More than politics, however, Mary Jeanette was about serving her constituents. As a state representative she would answer her own phone, return calls and assume your issue as her own. Her interest in you and helping was genuine and personal. She will be missed by all of us who knew and loved her."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Vote to bring our troops home

TO THE EDITOR:

On November 7th, all of Rep. Garrett Bradley's constituents will have an opportunity to express their opinion about the war in Iraq and whether or not to end it soon and bring our troops home. In Cohasset, this will be question/resolution #4. Voters in 139 cities and towns will have the same opportunity to send a message to their legislator to instruct them about a resolution that will be offered in the House, that calls on the President and the Congress to end the war "immediately", and bring all U.S. military forces home from Iraq.

The war in Iraq has been front-page news for three and a half years. The cost in lives and dollars is huge and grows daily. More than $9 billion has come from Massachusetts alone. In Iraq, the chaos is growing and the level of corruption is shocking — I saw the television program "60 Minutes" last Sunday about the profiteering of officials in the current Iraqi government.

I have been a member of the South Shore Peace Forum for 15 years. War has been the reality for most of that time. I will be voting yes on this question, because war is not and never will be the answer, unless it is the final answer. We must work for peace, which is more difficult and elusive than war.

I write this letter to urge all voters in Cohasset to give careful thought to how they will vote on Question 4. Do not go into the voting booth unprepared. There is no easy answer or solution, but flawed as a simple question may be, it is a chance to send a message to our public officials. I know they will take our vote seriously.

WWI veteran was a Marine

TO THE EDITOR:

Regarding the editorial on page 8 of the Oct. 6 edition of the Cohasset Mariner, Joseph Gonsalves, World War I veteran, wasn't in the U.S. Army. He joined the U.S. Marines at age 18. His two elder brothers, Alfred and Michael, were in the Navy and were on many ships including the USS Arizona. Their graves are at the Beechwood Cemetery at Doane Street.

October is a bad month for the Marines in Iran. As I write this, three more Marines are killed there. Our prayers are with the servicemen.

Reassess how town is spending money

TO THE EDITOR:

I have recently noticed that Cohasset has put ample amounts of time money into improving our roads and sidewalks. The town understandably did this with such roads as Pond Street and South Main Street close to St. Anthony's being, in unfavorable conditions. But when we think of other roads such as Norfolk Road and Border Street, we start to see the extent of this project.

Within the past five years, Norfolk was already paved and was in good enough condition that it did not need to be repaved at the present time. This is the typical Cohasset motto: spend whatever money we can to make life more comfortable as opposed to where we need it more: the school system.

If just last year most of the Cohasset Middle and High School teachers were on strike, standing on 3A at Stop and Shop, then we need to reevaluate how we are spending the town's money. The town had to cut back the amount of teachers we had because we did not have enough money and to be wasting it on paving roads that do not need is ridiculous. Cohasset needs to make sure the school systems are functioning properly before we use the money we have for second-hand needs. The town people deserve an explanation as to why they did this. The Cohasset school systems are slowly slipping and in order to revive them, town officials need to reassess how we are spending our money and not use it on useless works.

Exploiting vanity

TO THE EDITOR:

Those afflicted by vanity can have their bio published in a Who's-Who, by paying an exorbitant price for the volume that collects the bios of other similarly afflicted individuals.

At least one similar low-level scam is available to the parents of students about to graduate. An outfit calling itself "The National Honor Roll" with a mailing address on Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington contacts parents announcing that their student has been nominated and that a form will follow for providing biographical information for publication. Those who rise to the bait will have a costly book collecting the bios of children of other dupes, but maybe it will be admired by unsuspecting relatives.

Of course, the promoters are banking on being confused with the legitimate National Honor Society, for which membership requires high academic standing and school recommendation. Membership in it is not for sale, and truly is an honor.

Admittedly parting with one's money via a vanity scam is gentler than getting mugged, and may provide slightly more satisfaction than playing the lottery.

One way the student/parent information is obtained by the unwitting participation of the high schools is through questionnaires provided by the Educational Research Center of America (sounds legit, doesn't it), which is associated with a company called The Student Marketing Group, which targets the youth market. So a letter from the National Honor Roll is also a tip-off that the marketing organization has acquired a mine of info on your child.

'Tamper' is an interesting machine

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

First things first – Kelly Dickson, school bus coordinator, has asked us to pass on a Giant "Thank You" to Carl Sestito and his DPW crew for keeping the school bus system up to date with all of the last minute paving schedule changes during the past several weeks' Water Department paving projects. Thanks, Carl!

Other administrative matters – From time to time we hear rumors that this office may be anti-train. Let me assure all residents that we are as neutral as can be. It is not our job to advocate either for or against the train. However, we do advocate strongly on behalf of all residents when the Town is being short changed on any design or construction issue. When this does happen, we will work vigorously to get things right. Although this may appear negative, we are only working to get things right. We want this train system to be the best it can be for all of Cohasset.

On to more interesting things — This week was a very exciting week for this office. We had a chance to view the rail alignment process "up close and personal." In fact, we had a chance to actually ride the giant yellow behemoth as it was working. If technical details cause your eyes to glaze over, the following may be a bit much for you. But, for those who are interested here's more detail.

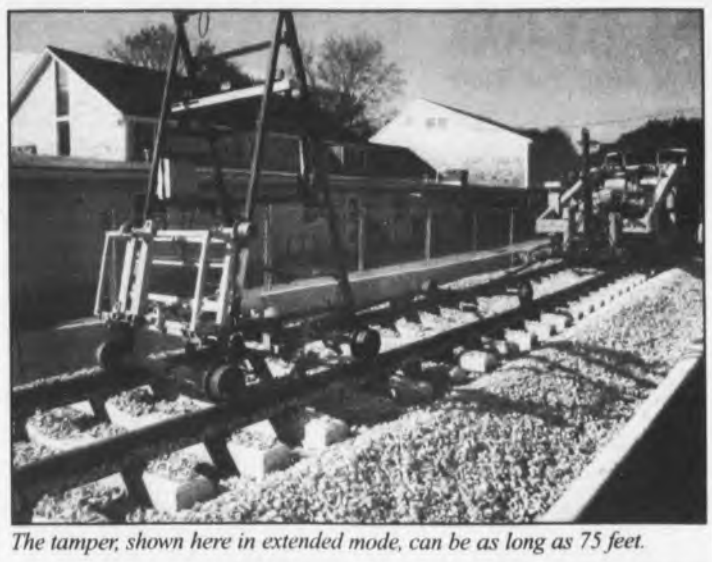
The large yellow machine you may have seen working or sitting on the tracks is called a "tamper." It is very interesting because it can grow in length by 25 or 30 feet due to a scissors arrangement between the front wheels and the balance of the machine. When fully extended, the tamper can be as long as 75 feet. We met the operator, Richie, who in addition to operating the tamper is the owner. It is his machine and he travels all over the country setting rail. The cockpit of the tamper looks more like a 747 than a piece of construction equipment with a computer screen and joysticks.

So how dos it work? Very interesting… The tamper has an onboard computer which is has stored the whole profile of the tracks. This becomes the "gold standard" to which the rails will be adjusted. Now let's backtrack a bit. When CBB laid the rails many people noticed that they were very wavy, both vertically and from side to side. CBB then added covered about one foot of additional ballast nearly covering the rails. All of that work was in preparation for the tamping operation.

So, how does this relate to tamping? As the tamper travels over sections of the rails, it compares where the track should be with where it is at each railroad tie, or every 2 feet. The tamper actually grips the rails and lifts them to the correct height. While lifting the rails it sends large vibrating fingers down into the ballast that vibrate the ballast firmly under the rail to support the rail in its new vertical position. Before the tamper moves to the next 2-foot increment it then takes the rails and ties together and shifts them from side to side as required to achieve the proper position. It is absolutely amazing to watch the tamper lift the rails and then slide them from side to side. It usually takes 3 or 4 passes over the same track section, readjusting each time, until the rails are absolutely in the proper position.

The tamper even automatically raised the rails on the outside of the curve at Pleasant Street by 2 inches so that the tracks would be banked for the train as is goes around the curve.

A last bit of useless information — The rail that was used when the railroad last ran through Cohasset in the 1950's weighed a mere 33.3 pounds per foot. Now, the new rail weighs 45 pounds per foot. And, it is much higher strength steel. So, for the entire approximately 4 miles of railroad in Cohasset, not counting the passing track, there will be 1,911,558 pounds of rail. How's that for useless data? Remember, you heard it hear first!



The tamper, shown here in extended mode, can be as long as 75 feet.

While lifting the rail, the tamper sends fingers down into the ballast.

Battling the 'Uh-Oh Blues'

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

It's now 11 a.m. and I'm back from the dentist with a brand new $500 mouth guard as my jaw pain was the result of teeth-grinding in my sleep.

"Have you seen Mommy's favorite sunglasses?"

"You mean these?" My 6-year old son steps into the hall wearing my regular glasses, his shirt and no pants.

"No, Honey, the pink ones. And why don't you have your pants on? We're late and I need to get to a dentist appointment." Deciding to give up the hunt for my beloved sunglasses, I scramble around for my keys and cell phone.

"Are you dressed?" I call out to him through my painfully-clenched jaw - the reason for this morning's dentist appointment.

"Uh-oh."

"Uh-oh, what?" I can feel my Mommy disaster mode click into high gear. "We don't have time for 'uh-ohs' this morning."

"You're gonna be ma-a-a-a-ad."

I go into his room only to see the latest science experiment spilling out of the container, all over his bureau and onto the floor. Watching the ugly, bluish-brownish liquid seep into the rug, I prepare for a major Mommy meltdown, but a sharp pain in my jaw stops me cold.

"I told you to keep that in the bathroom," I seeth through clenched teeth.

"I told'ya you were gonna be mad," he replies, along with a series of "I'm so sorry's;" all the while batting those big, blue eyes of his in that "I'm too cute to punish" sort of way.

"Please, just put your pants on," I beg as I grab some dirty clothes out of his overloaded hamper to sop up the mess.

Five minutes later, after declaring the rug a lost cause, I finally get him (now wearing pants) into the car. I do a quick scan of the front seat for my sunglasses. Darn it. Not here either. Squinting at the sunlight, I start the car, but with a feeling that I forgot to do something. Stove still on? Nope, didn't use it this morning. Door locked? Yep, it locks automat. . .

"Mooooom, you forgot to buckle me in." Uh-oh. Not a good thing, but at least now I know what I forgot. I jump out, buckle him in, and return to the front seat. Glancing at the clock, I realize that we're going to be late. Darn it. I quickly squint at the glare in the rearview mirror (wish I had those sunglasses) and put the car into reverse. SCREEECH.

"Uh-oh," says a small voice from the back seat. Double darn it. I had scraped up against some construction equipment left in our parking area. I stop the car and get out. Darn it. Darn it. Darn it. As we drive away I calculate the damage — $200 sunglasses lost, $350 rug ruined, plus a $500 deductible. Pretty expensive day for only 8:00 in the morning.

Epilogue

It's now 11 a.m. and I'm back from the dentist with a brand new $500 mouth guard as my jaw pain was the result of teeth-grinding in my sleep. (What, me stressed?) I had been assured that the guard would be completely covered by insurance. But, by the time the receptionist totaled up my bill, I was not at all surprised to hear, "Uh-oh. Looks like they just stopped insurance coverage on these last month."

As I look around my disaster of a kitchen, I decide to forgo making a fresh pot of coffee and instead hit the fridge for the hard stuff: a pint of Ben & Jerry's Chocolate Chip Cookie Dough ice cream. Opening the freezer, I'm elated to find, Yes! My pink sunglasses! Of course, they were frozen into what appears to be another one of my son's misguided science experiments. I grab both the ice cream and the sunglasses (the latter I defrost under hot water).

Sitting at my kitchen table eating ice cream and wearing my beloved pink sunglasses, I manage to crack a smile despite the sink full of dirty dishes, the huge pile of bills on the counter, and the crumbs strewn all over the floor. Why? Because nothing ever seems quite so bad (even a case of the "uh-oh" blues), when you're looking at your world through rose-colored lenses.

HEALTH NOTES

Tips for happy, healthy Halloween

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Once again Halloween is here. The Pumpkin Patch is in full swing on North Main Street at Wheelwright Park, for the benefit of the Appalachia Service Project which, each summer, sends over a hundred volunteers to make repairs to houses in rural Appalachia. House decorations are up and kids are preparing their Halloween costumes.

Here are a few tips from the Board of Health, which you can follow for a safe and happy Halloween:

- Always keep the lights on, both inside and outside your house, to welcome and protect trick-or-treaters.
- Keep candles and jack-o-lanterns away from landings and doorsteps where costumes can brush up against the flame and catch fire. Also, keep candles and jack-o-lanterns away from curtains, decorations, and other items that can catch fire.
- Make sure that each part of your child's costume is flame resistant. Look for the label "flame resistant" or "flame retardant".
- If your child wears a mask, make sure that it fits properly and that the holes are large enough for their mouth and eyes, so that they can breath and see properly.
- Costumes and trick-or-treat bags should be light-colored and/or decorated with reflective tape that will glow in light which will make your child visible to drivers. Reflective tape can be found in hardware, bicycle, and sporting goods stores.
- Costumes should fit well and not drag on the floor to avoid trips and falls.
- Children should wear temperature appropriate clothing underneath their costume.
- Swords, knives and other pointed objects should be made of soft material.
- Always have an adult accompany children while trick-or-treating.
- Remind your children not to go into strangers' cars or houses.
- Teach your children how to use crosswalks and walk signals. Teach your child to look left, right and left again before crossing the street.
- Children should carry flashlights to make sure that they can see and that people can see them.
- Do not let your child eat any treats until you have checked each one of them.
- Give and accept only wrapped or packaged treats. Throw away all unwrapped or suspicious looking candy.

Flu Vaccine: You may have read about the slow distribution of Flu Vaccine this year. Given the CDC's limited ability to direct distribution, the agency is warning that many orders will not be fully filled until late November and that "significant effort" should be made to continue immunizations into January. It's affecting our supply in Cohasset. Nevertheless, we've been assured that there will be plenty of vaccine, but that deliveries will probably begin in the middle of November. In a few weeks, you can look for our notice about local Flu clinics later in November, and probably on into January. Vaccination that late will still give the protection necessary to avoid the flu.

Federal policy now recommends regular flu immunization for children 6 months to almost 5 years — a change from 2005 — as well as for parents and older siblings, children and adults with chronic illnesses, health-care workers, pregnant women and everyone older than 50.

Dangerous sport of tag

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I like to think I had a normal childhood as a kid growing up and reaching puberty in the Thirties.

We played cowboys and Indians, shooting each other with arrows and popguns. We swam in the river in summer and jumped ice cakes in the winter. We played baseball, football, and hockey sans helmets on the ice behind the Methodist church. We loved to sting each other on the backside in a game of dodgeball.

Honestly, I don't remember playing much tag.

That's why I was surprised last week to learn that tag had been banned from the menu of games that could be played at the Willett Elementary School in Attleboro, where the new ground rules covering recess activities preclude touch football and dodgeball, along with tag. as too dangerous to life and limb.

We played cowboys and Indians, shooting each other with arrows and popguns.

"What should be a touch game ends up being a physical touch game," Willett Principal Robin Welch was quoted as saying.

At the same time, I learn that the McCarthy Elementary School in Framingham has a rule requiring that the kids at play not touch each other at all, and if they do, there's a touchy-feely cop ready to issue them a stern warning.

"If the hands come out to touch, then the supervisors ask them to stop," McCarthy Principal Joan Vodoklys said. "What we require is that children not touch each other."

Right in our own backyard, the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Quincy has a ban on tag because, says Principal Diane O'Keefe, "when you have a group of 30 to 35 children running after each other and playing on blacktop, someone could get hurt."

Are we being overly protective of our kids by taking fun and the valuable experience of failure out of their lives?

"It's a shame that we've come to the point where you have to put all those rules down when kids play," John Cummings, president of the Hanlon Elementary School PTO in Westwood, told the Globe. "I think they should let kids fall down . . . get up, dust themselves off, and get right back on."

I can remember innumerable skinned knees and elbows, bumps and bruises, and even a broken arm from recess mishaps at the Thomas A. Watson Elementary School, and all but the fractured wing were tended to by the school nurse, who, if I recall right, covered three schools: the Watson, the Lincoln, and the Jonas Perkins.

We've managed to organize most of the fun out of kids' baseball, too, by substituting the highly structured Little Leagues with their uniforms and manicured diamonds for the game that used to be played in dungarees and undershirts on vacant lots where each ground ball was an adventure.

Some leagues don't keep score, lest the sting of defeat do permanent damage to the losers' little egos, and I notice that, even in the Little League World Series, once a team is 10 runs ahead, the game is halted and that team is declared the winner. It spares the losers' feelings, we are told.

When we played baseball in the vacant lot on Bickford Road and their team rolled on to a 20-run lead, we just kept on playing. Who knows, we thought, we might score 21 in the next inning.

Besides, we were having fun.

Standing up for our school system

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

Actions taken by town boards last week will exacerbate the fiscal problems facing our schools unless we reject their recommendations at the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting.

The time has come for everyone who cares about our schools to take a stand.

The Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting is the opportunity we have to put an end to our schools — and by extension, our children — from serving as the proverbial punching bags for town officials whose actions are depriving the schools of the necessary funds to meet the needs of our children's education.

The news articles in last week's Mariner detailing the favorable recommendations and positive comments by town boards toward some town departments, in contrast to the unfavorable recommendations and negative comments toward the School Department, are symptomatic of an overall trend that is plunging the Cohasset school system into second-rate status.

Let's consider the big picture. According to the Department of Education website, the money spent per regular education student by the Cohasset schools declined in the two-year period from 2003 to 2005 (the latest year for which the DOE has figures). No doubt that statement will come as a surprise to those who complain that the school budget is out of control, but the facts (as opposed to misinformed opinions) are these: in 2003, our schools spent $7409 per regular education student; in 2005 we spent just $7373.

By contrast, here are the numbers for school districts of similar size to ours: Weston: $10,104 in 2003, $11,290 in 2005; Norwell: $7125 in 2003, $7422 in 2005; Rockport: $6723 in 2003, $7144 in 2005; Hull: $7617 in 2003, $8980 in 2005; Harwich: $8179 in 2003, $8931 in 2005; and Manchester, 8973 in 2003, 9263 in 2005.

And lest the skeptics think that I cherry-picked just a few communities to make my point, the figures for all school districts are as follows: $6779 in 2003, $7421 in 2005. In other words, the rest of the state has increased its spending for education, while we have fallen behind. Moreover, as of the 2005 figures, we in Cohasset, one of the wealthiest communities in the state, are now spending less per regular education student than the state average, the first time that has occurred in the 12 years I have been a resident here.

The actions taken by town boards last week will exacerbate the fiscal problems facing our schools unless we reject their recommendations at the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting. Let's start with the Advisory Committee and the request by the schools for $65,000 for the installation of a security system at the Osgood School. According to the news article, the Advisory Committee recommended against reimbursing the schools the $65,000 because the schools did not obtain the "blessing" of the Advisory Committee beforehand. (As an aside, and speaking as the parent of a first grader at the Osgood, I applaud the schools for taking a proactive and immediate measure to improve the security of our children. Conversely, in light of the recent horrific events that occurred in schools across the country, not to mention the recent bomb threats in our own schools, I am appalled that our Advisory Committee is playing politics on this matter. Any member of the Advisory Committee who voted not to recommend the article because he or she is in a snit over protocol should be ashamed of themselves.)

But to return to the financial implication of the Advisory Committee's recommendation, if the schools are not reimbursed for this $65,000 capital expenditure, the money will have to come out of this year's current School Dept. operating budget.

Now let's consider the actions of the Capital Budget Committee (CBC). Every request by the School Department was turned down for a variety of purported reasons. Other departments are getting technology upgrades, but the schools will be stuck with computers that are seven years old and can't run new education programs. The police department's leaking roof gets money for repairs, but the leaks at the high school will remain unaddressed. The Harbormaster will get a new boat at a cost of $70,000 (plus upgrading the office for another $10,000) without any mention of raising the mooring charges for boat owners. But the request for playground facilities at the Osgood School for the new pre-school classes is met with the suggestion that funds be raised privately.

The skewed priority mindset of the CBC is most apparent with their recommendation that $10,000 be appropriated for more docks so that yacht owners can have additional space to tie up their dinghies. Can any member of the CBC say with a straight face that this recommendation meets its own criteria of "need vs. want?" (It must be that the CBC defines a "need" as that which is a necessity for a luxury.)

As for the selectmen, Selectman Dormitzer stood up at Town Meeting last spring, during a discussion on the school budget, to complain that high property taxes are driving the middle class out of Cohasset. But where is his concern for the middle class parents of schoolchildren of this town who not only are paying those same high taxes, but who also are paying hundreds of dollars in new fees for bus transportation and athletics? I mention this in the context of the $90,000 recommended for the harbor (which is almost one third of all the money recommended by the CBC for the entire town), because unless the selectmen raise the charges for the mooring permits (of which 25 percent belong to non-residents who don't pay a dime of property taxes) to cover the actual costs of operating the harbor, other town departments will be deprived of scarce funds for their needs. In this era of pay-as-you-throw at our town dump and fees for student parking permits at the high school, it certainly is reasonable and fair to expect that boat owners should pay for the services that benefit their interests.

Therefore, it is imperative that those who care about our schools attend the Nov. 13 Town Meeting and do three things: First, vote against the $90,000 worth of items for the harbor unless the selectmen have agreed beforehand to raise mooring charges to cover those costs, if not wholly, at least in major part; second, vote for the article that will reimburse the schools the $65,000 for the new security system at the Osgood; and third, vote to amend the article dealing with capital expenditures to include funds to purchase new computers in our schools, to address the leaks at the high school, and to install a needed exhaust system for the high school labs.

We as individual voters are not rubber stamps for any of our elected or appointed boards. Town Meeting is the forum where we the taxpayers decide how to spend our tax money. The time has come for those who care about our children to make clear that we are tired of the negativity and haranguing of our school officials that is symptomatic of the sort of micro-management of the School Department to which no other department is subjected.

In practical terms, we must vote to inform our town officials that security systems for the safety of our schoolchildren are more important than additional dinghy docks for yacht owners and a nicer office for the Harbormaster.

Slanetz did not speak for board

COMMENTARY

ADRIENNE MACCARTHY

I am writing in response to the recent commentary written by Alfred Slanetz in last week's paper. As the School Committee Chairman, I can respect the right of Mr. Slanetz to voice his own opinion on whatever topic he wishes to expound upon, including our schools. However, as sitting member of the School Committee, he should have identified up front in his commentary that he was voicing his own opinions. Whether it was intentional or not, Mr. Slanetz frequent use of the word "we", portrayed his own opinion as being reflective of the entire School Committee.

As an elected School Committee member, one cannot speak for all the members unless given that authority by the other members. Needless to say, Mr. Slanetz did not have the authority, nor did he inform the other members of his intention to publish his commentary. Had he informed the committee regarding his intentions to publish his commentary, I would have pointed this fact to him in a more private manner. But since his commentary was published, I feel compelled to follow-up with this letter to clarify my views and opinions.

I support four (4) district goals for our Schools:

- Challenge ALL students to proficiency and beyond
- Close achievement gaps where they exist
- Function as a professional learning community
- Partnership with families and community

I would like to remind everyone, including Mr. Slanetz that our schools are a public institution that needs to address the needs of all of our children. I want to emphasize that in the district goals adopted by the School Committee, we cannot segment our students by levels of performance. Once we start to move to a goal based system focused on the top 85 percent of the students (the 85 percent is arbitrary), then where do we draw the line? Do we start to carve out the "best of the best" and devote more resources to this group? It is a slippery slope when we start to lose focus on the well being of the entire student body only to accommodate a certain segment. This is not to say I want to ignore the high achievers or the low performers or the mid-level kids for that matter. What I don't want is for our district wide goals to be mutually exclusive. Our schools must continue to address the needs of all students.

I also disagree with Mr. Slanetz claim that the current administration is obsessed with the MCAS. As a matter of fact, I believe our current administration has taken steps to provide greater access to many different levels of academics and learning that have little to do with the MCAS. These steps include the implementation of the following: an integrated pre-school, differentiated instruction, co-teaching, full day kindergarten, Reading Street, Renzulli Learning, and EMC. These are newly added programs that are geared to provide the support and resources necessary to enable ALL students to meet or surpass our high expectations.

However, one cannot ignore the fact that passing MCAS is a state-mandated requirement. For better or worse, these tests will be a part of our children's school experience for the foreseeable future. I cannot understand why Mr. Slanetz would state, "passing MCAS is a standard of a student's minimal competency". I find this to be a troubling message delivered from a school committee member. There are a number of our students who should rightfully take pride at moving from a "Failing" to a "Needs Improvement" or a "Needs Improvement" to a "Proficient" or a "Proficient" to an "Advanced" rating in a given subject covered by the MCAS. This is what Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) for an individual child is about. I would like to remind Mr. Slanetz that the state provides free tuition at any of the state's public universities for the top 25 percent performers on this test. The fact that this may be the only way that some of our students can continue their education makes the MCAS worthy of our attention, not our scorn.

In closing, it is my belief that 100 percent of our students are "gifted". Some may excel in the more traditional fashion as measured by test scores, essays, and standardized tests. Others may have talents that need to be uncovered and nurtured. The role of our public schools is to provide the support and resources for each student to realize their gifts and maximize their abilities. As our district carries out our mission of "Continuing the Commitment to Excellence", I ask you to embrace your schools' vision to "hold high expectations for all students and staff and provide the support and resources that enable all to meet or surpass those expectations".

TogetherCohasset on the move

TO THE EDITOR:

After nearly 120 Cohasset residents expressed their views on the critical issues facing the Town after the defeat of the override at two landmark meetings in May and June called "TogetherCohasset", a steering committee of TogetherCohasset volunteers worked vigorously during the summer months to fine-tune the various ideas discussed into a cogent proposal for going forward and working with Town boards to address these issues.

The work and input of many townspeople will be shared at a third open forum of TogetherCohasset on Nov. 8 at the Middle-High School Cafeteria at 7:30 p.m.. All past forum attendees, other interested residents and elected officials are invited to weigh in on the results of TogetherCohasset's work thus far.

Summertime accomplishments include developing a list of focus areas and a proposed mission statement that residents will be invited to discuss, amend and accept. The focus areas and mission statement were reviewed with individual members of the Board of Selectmen and School Committee for their input, and to gauge their interest in working with citizens on the various issues facing the Town.

Topping the list of focus areas is improving communication and transparency from town departments, most prominently the School Department, to the public. This subject was a recurring theme in the previous TogetherCohasset forums and was underscored by a majority of the elected officials who were interviewed by our steering committee.

The other focus areas included on the proposed agenda of TogetherCohasset are regionalization, academic performance and measurement and funds required to support these initiatives. Each focus area includes sub-issues and is envisioned to lead to the study of a range and degree of options and proposals.

It is envisioned that interested citizens under the TogetherCohasset banner will work with the respective elected boards to research, develop and recommend policy initiatives within these focus areas, and then work to build support necessary for the success of the initiatives.

TogetherCohasset looks forward to working with the School Committee and the Board of Selectmen to achieve mutual goals of a stronger and financially sound town government and school system. Please be come and be part of this important next step in shaping this effort.

Rocky Lane Bridge road needs sidewalk

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter was in Selectmen's correspondence.

I am writing to you in response to a conversation with Tom Gruber at Greenbush. The residents of Rocky Lane have watched the construction of the new bridge with mixed emotions. Personally, I believe the train will be an asset to our town and the bridge improves our neighborhood. Others may differ with my opinion, but we all agree that we need a sidewalk on the North Main Street side of the new bridge road.

Many of us have had conversations with the Greenbush team of Mr. Gruber and Mr. Brennan, as well as Tom Carroll and John Greeley at CBB to voice our concerns. There are 17 children, most under the age of 12, on Rocky Lane and this is a matter of safety. The MBTA states that the original Rocky Lane did not have a sidewalk so they do not have an obligation to put one in. However, the original Rocky Lane did not have a 10-inch curbstone and concrete barriers. A child on foot or a bike could not get out of the way quickly should it become necessary. It has come to our attention that there are other potential safety issues that will be addressed with the MBTA in the upcoming meeting. Please let us not become tangled in the politics of who should be responsible for building a sidewalk and addressing other safety issues. Our children are the future. Please take the steps necessary to make Rocky Lane safe.

Rejuvenated education foundation is ready to help Cohasset schools

COMMENTARY

CATHERINE O'CALLAGHAN

Cohasset is joining communities such as Norwell, Hingham, Wellesley, Weston, and Winchester by establishing an education foundation to provide private funding to its public schools. The Cohasset Educational Foundation (CEF) has recently been reestablished and rejuvenated after a period of inactivity to meet the financial needs of the Cohasset public schools. The original Cohasset Educational Foundation was founded in 1992 by a group of concerned and dedicated parents. Their purpose was to develop resources beyond those traditionally used to support local public education and apply them to projects and programs that might otherwise not exist.

This past April a similar group of parents and community members formed out of the Together Cohasset meeting forum with the goal of creating an educational fund as well as an endowment fund for the Cohasset public schools. The CEF was inspired by the renewed interest and dedication of this group and recently the two organizations merged. The newly redesigned foundation will use the name Cohasset Educational Foundation and will operate within its tax-exempt status. Michael Hurley, President and co-founder of the original CEF states, "This is a smart, aggressive, well-focused group. They are motivated. They want to raise money for a permanent endowment and for an engineering / technology lab. They want to start now."

The mission of the CEF is to act as a community-based, non-profit organization committed to Cohasset's long tradition of valuing the role its schools take in providing high quality education to its children. Its goal is to promote educational excellence by supporting programs that enhance and enrich the Cohasset schools in ways not supported by public funding or the school and town budgets. The newly elected CEF President, Christopher Oddleifson states, "We believe the school committee, the advisory committee, the school administration, and the voters ought to continue to focus on expanding the funding to our schools. We also believe that a foundation can make a very positive difference in the lives of Cohasset students today." The CEF notes that its funding is not designed to alleviate the need for future overrides. Like other public school foundations, it will operate outside of the school budget and fund projects that go beyond what is provided by public funding.

"We found that all high performing public schools have a community school foundation that makes meaningful contributions to public education," Oddleifson says. "We concluded that no matter how well or poorly the public schools are funded, a foundation is necessary to address the challenges of maintaining and enhancing academic excellence in today's competitive climate." School foundations that are publicly funded at high levels like Weston and Wellesley, as well as those communities that have overturned overrides like Winchester, have improved the students' experience through funding of additional programs, equipment and initiatives.

"All Cohasset residents would agree that a strong school system is good for our town and our property values," Oddleifson says. "Everyone wants the Cohasset schools to be as good in the future as they have been in the past, and we want them to thrive despite fiscal uncertainties and budgetary constraints."

There is a rising need for public schools to offer more Advanced Placement classes, offer a greater range of programs in math and sciences and update their technology and computers. College admissions is becoming more selective and there is a significant rise in the amount of students applying to colleges and a rise in the number of colleges students are applying to. Dr. Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Cohasset Schools says, "We are limited due to staffing limitations and the need for staff to teach the required courses with what electives or expanded programs we can offer especially to Juniors and Seniors. Some 170 students have at least one unscheduled period in their January program. Colleges do look at what students elect for course work at the high school level when making decisions around acceptance."

"We found that all high performing public schools have a community school foundation that makes meaningful contributions to public education."

— Chris Oddleifson, Cohasset Education Foundation

In order for public schools to provide the programs and resources necessary to meet today's demands, private funding is becoming a necessity for communities like Cohasset. Adrienne MacCarthy, chairman of the Cohasset School Committee says, "By most standards and contrary to popular belief, we are still considered to be a top school district. What I worry about most is maintaining our standing. This will take an adequate and predictable budget — one, which we have not had for years now. Each year we have lost ground; loss of AP's, loss of Middle School Sports, loss of JV sports, loss of a full Middle School music program, these are all since my oldest son entered the middle school four years ago. Now in 11th grade, he faces lack of elective offerings, large class sizes and openings in his second semester schedule."

The CEF has established two funds within its foundation, a Project Fund and an Endowment Fund. Contributors to the CEF will be able to choose between three options for their donations: they can have their money go into the Project Fund, which will provide immediate funding for school projects; the Endowment Fund, which will provide long term support for the schools through a stable, principal preserved investment account; or a choice to split the contributions between these two funds in whatever ratio the donor chooses.

"Donors can give Project Fund gifts that will be applied to the greatest documented needs for projects or programs as determined by our School District's administrators, teachers and Superintendent in coordination with the CEF," Oddliefson explains. "Annual Gifts are an effective way to support the Foundation and are utilized right away. Donors can give Endowment Fund gifts to help build an endowment for the long-term health of the schools and the town."

The CEF felt that an Endowment Fund was necessary to ensure the longevity of the support for the Cohasset schools and to provide long-term funding that the community can rely on to continue to improve the schools.

John Englander, Vice President of the CEF, says, "Developing an endowment is a time-tested way to ensure that an institution is and will be well-funded. The endowment's principle is preserved and grown over time, while the earnings can be used immediately to fund necessary and important projects. A well-funded endowment can serve the Cohasset schools well through the years and in times like these, where insufficient funds are otherwise available for critical educational needs. Endowments are being established among educational institutions across the country, including many of the most admired public school districts in Massachusetts."

Educational Foundations are becoming a common necessity in communities like Cohasset. Hingham created the Hingham Education Foundation in 1992. In 2006 the Foundation funded more than 30 grants for all of its schools. Norwell also has a well supported educational foundation. Its purpose is "not to provide 'bricks and mortar'-type funding, such as when certain expenses or projects aren't approved under the school budget but rather, to inspire teachers to try new and innovative educational programs which do not fall under traditional school budget funding in the first place. These grants help teachers bring their lessons alive for their students." The educational foundation that operates in Newburyport has raised nearly $1 million, which has been used to fund its middle school science labs and a distance-learning lab in the high school.

Dr. Walsh says, "Parents/ PSO, community donations, Booster Clubs have all been very generous in their commitment to maintaining quality programs in the Cohasset schools. The CEF would be a tremendous support in areas that we know are unbudgeted or under-budgeted moving forward. They would be a source of support for our students and staff as well as our administrative team. It does take a village."

The Massachussets Association of School Committees has reported an increase in the number of inquiries relating to establishing educational foundations. The MASC hosted a seminar on how to set up an educational foundation to meet the demand of communities like Cohasset who are establishing or reenergizing their educational foundations.

Emily Brown and Sarah Murphy, members of the CEF attended a similar conference, "The Power of Education Foundations: A Strong Foundation for Vibrant Schools and Communities" sponsored by the Connecticut Consortium of Education on Oct. 17. The seminar, held in Cornwell, Conn. had over 100 attendees; made up of education foundation board members, community members, school committee members, superintendents, and other educators.

"I left the conference reinforcing my belief that education foundations meaningfully improve community/school relationships, enhance curriculum, and stimulate teacher creativity in the classroom," Murphy says. "Every school system could benefit from the involvement and support of an education foundation."

At the seminar, it was confirmed that many foundations support technology initiatives and teacher and curriculum development, which are often cut due to budgetary constraints.

"It was exciting to see how foundation funds could strengthen the learning process by providing teachers with the tools to enhance an existing curriculum or to try out new concepts," Murphy says. "Of course the conference repeatedly reminded us that these funds do not replace tax dollars or affect the school budgeting and tax-funding process in any way."

Catherine O'Callaghan lives at 16 Linden Circle.

CEF to kickoff fundraising campaign

The CEF will be initiating a fund raising campaign this month. A community-wide mailing piece will be sent to all Cohasset residents and businesses. The CEF is also planning several fund raising events this year. The CEF will be reintroducing its annual spelling bee, which will be held at the Cohasset High School in January.

A teacher-appreciation program has been instituted at all the Cohasset Schools. Students, teachers and members of the community can make a contribution to the CEF in appreciation of any Cohasset teacher, staff member or administrator. This is a way to thank a special person at the school or use as a holiday gift or token of appreciation. Sarah Murphy is coordinating this project at all the Cohasset schools. The CEF will be hosting a Gala event in the spring.

For more information on any of these upcoming events, please contact Emily Brown at 781-383-6468. The Board members of the CEF are hosting a cocktail party at John and Mary-Ann Englander's home at 87 Lamberts Lane in Cohasset on Sunday, Nov. 19th from 5-7 pm.

People interested in learning more about the CEF or those interested in becoming involved with the CEF are welcome to attend. Please call Emily Brown at 781-383-6468 for more information.

Small lots seek zoning relief

Town Meeting to weigh in on issue

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Joe Campbell said his garage puts him at 24.7 percent structural coverage.

Joe and Janet Campbell of Pleasant Street are on a quest to change the zoning bylaws in their neighborhood. So far they have the support of the Planning Board, a majority of the Advisory Committee and the Board of Selectmen, and are hoping Town Meeting will vote in their favor as well.

The Campbells' home is in the Residential A zoning district and is therefore subject to certain zoning bylaws. When the couple decided to construct a new garage on their property, they received all the necessary permits and went ahead with the construction. After the garage was built, another resident contacted the building inspector and argued the building did not adhere with the town's zoning bylaws.

Upon further review, the couple was told by having built the garage, they had exceeded the total structural lot coverage of 20 percent in the Residential A district. The matter was brought before the Zoning Board of Appeals, which denied the couple's plea for a special permit. To remedy the situation, the Campbells would either have to tear down their garage or take the matter to court.

Instead, they have chosen to try to change the town's bylaws. The article which voters will be asked to weigh in on at the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting would provide zoning relief only for homes in the Residential A district whose lots are smaller than 18,000 square feet and are nonconforming. At the 2003 fall Special Town Meeting, the town amended the zoning bylaw to limit structural coverage to 20 percent of the lot area.

However, the Residential A district in Cohasset contains mostly older homes built on smaller lots. The existing buildings on many of these lots already exceed the 20 percent structural limit and the owners do not have the flexibility to build additions, porches, garages, or tool sheds which otherwise comply with zoning. The Campbells' article would increase the allowable percentage of structural coverage in a preexisting nonconforming lot from 20 percent to 25 percent, or 3,600 square feet, whichever is less.

"Our abutters are all over the 20 percent," said Joe Campbell, adding they are all shut out from even building a small tool shed. He added his garage puts him at 24.7 percent structural coverage.

Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt said his board has given its unanimous support for the bylaw amendment. He said it would only change the bylaw for the Residential A district, and not B or C. He said the change to the bylaw to reduce coverage to 20 percent was made at the same time the Large Home Site Plan Review bylaw was filed, and to date, not one large home has been built under the large home bylaw in Residential A because there isn't the space. He said the intent of the bylaw, when changed, was not to prevent residents from being able to enclose a porch or build a deck, and he doesn't see why the article should not pass.

"It is prudent and adequate relief and we think the town is well served by this change," Pratt said.

Scituate resident shares financial forecasting tool

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Long Term Planning Committee is up and running. Charged with developing a spreadsheet-based model of the town's financial operations, members of the newly formed committee met Oct. 11 to discuss how to proceed to bring the town's idea to fruition.

Chairman Jack Keniley and members Tom McCain and Terry Green invited Scituate resident Frank DiCesare to attend the meeting, as he created a financial forecasting application for his town, which could give Cohasset some ideas when it begins creating its own. DiCesare explained it took him roughly 18 months of working on the project part-time before it was ready to be tested, and it has become a very useful tool for Scituate's Town Administrator.

The idea to create a program to help keep track of the town's finances and help project the budget for a few years out came to DiCesare roughly 4-1/2 years ago. He said with a background in engineering, he had worked for many corporations and began to wonder why towns couldn't be run in a similar fashion from a financial standpoint. "Not understanding municipal finance, I didn't understand why they couldn't," he said.

While it took some time to get the approval from voters to begin using his application as part of the budgeting process, he said it has proved to be an invaluable tool. The application is a set of spreadsheets in Microsoft Excel, which only requires plugging in the numbers and formulas he created take care of the rest. Numbers can be changed to replicate different budget scenarios, and with one change, all the numbers that would be affected change as well to accurately reflect the town's budgetary situation.

DiCesare said when creating the application, he began with the Town Report and tried to understand the calculations used by the Town and replicate them in the spreadsheet. "I tried to stay as close to the town's financial report as possible," he said, and it took many trials before the application was ready to be unveiled.

Members of the Cohasset Planning Committee noticed the spreadsheets produced by DiCesare have more "top line only" figures, rather than detailed, line-by-line itemization. They said their charge as outlined by the Board of Selectmen required more information.

The committee's charge states: "The committee will develop a spreadsheet-based model of the town's financial operations. The model shall include income statement, balance sheet and cash flow modules. The income statement shall include the town's payroll list and the different components of fringe benefits, all suitably classified by department, job level, etc., so the Town Manager can test potential wage, salary and benefit scenarios. It shall also include line items of revenue and expense corresponding to the Town Manager's annual budget breakdown, at the level of detail needed to test different scenarios such as the effect of a rise in fuel prices. Level of detail shall be as recommended by the Town Manager. The goal is to have the model tested and ready for use by Sept. 1, 2007, so it may be applied for the 2009 budget and upcoming union negotiations."

Green said while the committee's charge might require something more in-depth than DiCesare's application, "I like this model. It leaves management with the department heads." He said using Scituate's spreadsheets, Cohasset could begin to create a model that would first provide the level of detail Scituate has, but can then be brought a step farther to what Cohasset is looking for.

"In Scituate, the individual departments kind of give the top line only," said DiCesare, but said Cohasset could ask for line-by-line figures. He reminded the committee it might only get a one-line budget from the school department, as state law only requires approving a bottom-line figure.

In order for the town to be able to create a document that will adequately forecast the budget, the committee agreed every town department will have to "buy into" the idea and be willing to provide every figure it needs. "We want to tell a story and the more detail you have, the easier it is," said McCain. He added by having more detail one year, it makes it much easier to forecast the following years' budgets.

DiCesare cautioned with every budget there is some wiggle room. "There are variables such as new growth and free cash," which are not easy to predict, he said. However, he said having an application such as the one Scituate is using will help provide a good overall budget estimate.

Selectmen agree to give school technology request another look said while the report helps, they need more information to make a decision and would like to see an inventory of how many computers the schools have, how old they are and what they are being used for. It would also like a list of the district's hardware and software.

"This is not a simple discussion," said Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer, adding the town needs to come up with a plan for buying and replacing as well as managing its computer system town-wide going forward.

Selectmen said they understand the school department is bound by the Department of Education's standards, which state districts should have an average ratio of fewer than five students per high-capacity, Internet-connected computer. With the total school population at almost 1500 students, the district would be required to have roughly 300 computers; it currently has 700.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said with 1500 students, he doesn't see the need for 700 computers. He said he thought two computer labs with 30 computers each and two language labs with 30 computers each would suffice. "I don't think you can justify more than 120," he said.

"We need to find out what the computers are used for and if it's just for e-mail, there are enough at the public library."
— Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer

Dormitzer said in his opinion, every teacher should have his or her own computer. Selectman Rob Spofford added just as computers are used in business, teachers use them to keep track of grades and attendance and their administrative work.

But Dormitzer said the Internet on the computers is so restricted, students are not always able to use them for reports. Instead they either go to the library or use their home computers. "We need to find out what the computers are used for and if it's just for e-mail, there are enough at the public library," he said. Selectman Fred Koed added he does not think the lower grades need massive amounts of computers.

"I think there are a lot of open-ended questions," said Spofford. "I use computers and I'm not a whiz, but just throwing money at things is not the answer. Especially not in the computer world."

Tom Callahan, 35 Hillside Drive, said Selectmen need to remember, at the high school level it is extremely important to keep computers "up to snuff," because they are the wave of the future. He said colleges are requiring students bring computers and in the work world, Cohasset's students are going to be expected to have a broad-based understanding of technology. He said with the lack of electives currently being offered at the high school, having computers which can support online learning are invaluable.

The board said it would invite members of the School Committee to come in and answer its questions. However, the Warrant, or Town Meeting agenda, has already been sent to the printer and therefore any amendments to the article, which doles out capital funding, would need to be made on the floor of Town Meeting Nov. 13.

No change for Town Election

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town will not be asked to vote on whether the schedule for the Annual Town Election should be changed. While a placeholder article (#17) will be on the Warrant, or Town Meeting agenda, the Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to indefinitely postpone the article at its Oct. 23 meeting. Selectman Ted Carr did not attend the meeting.

The article was drafted as a result of the spring override election. At a meeting shortly after the override votes were tallied May 6, Selectman Rob Spofford said some residents — namely those in support of the overrides, neither of which passed — told him they felt having two elections hurt voter turnout. As a result, the board agreed to bring up changing the bylaw at the Special Town Meeting. After some discussion, Selectmen agreed things are fine the way they are.

Last spring, the candidate election was held the week after Town Meeting on April 8 and the override election was held roughly one month later on May 6. Some 48 percent or 2,432 of the town's 5,099 registered voters went to the polls to make their voices heard during the candidate election. The following month, at 66.2 percent, the turnout was record-breaking for an override election.

Selectman Fred Koed said based on this year's voter turnout, he doesn't believe having the elections together would affect participation, as there was a record turnout this spring with separate elections. Koed said he would like to come down on the side of tradition. "I like the cycle. I like that we have one week in between. To me, it flows," he said. He added postponing the candidate election would also prolong campaigning.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil echoed Koed's sentiments. "I agree with Fred. I'd just assume keep it as it is."

According to Town Manager Bill Griffin, the town's current bylaw says the Town Election must be within 35 days of the Annual Town Meeting. The new bylaw would have allowed the town to hold its Town Election on any date to be determined by the Board of Selectmen consistent with avoiding multiple elections whenever possible, within the months of March, April or May.

It takes the town roughly five weeks to prepare for an election. Ballots must be printed, and the town must register voters and issue absentee ballots. For those years when an override question is on the table in addition to the candidates, the town must prepare for an election twice. To hold the second election, it costs the town roughly $3,000.

In the past, under Town Manager Mark Haddad, the town has voted on many overrides at the Town Election. However, Griffin said that is a risky approach to take as the ballots must be printed before Town Meeting votes on the question, and printing the question before the vote essentially assumes the town in favor of the question. In addition, if the amount of the override is changed on the floor of Town Meeting, voters may go to the ballot box to find the wrong override amount printed on their ballot.

Sorting through Slanetz's new directions

COMMENTARY

TERRY MCCARTHY

Now we're talking! The new "Community Standards of Excellence for Cohasset Public Schools" is outstanding. But in the few days after Vice Chair Slanetz published his summary in the Mariner [Oct. 20] I find that some of the people whose opinions I value described their reaction this way: "my eyes glazed over." Not an unexpected reaction. Rarely have I seen a policy statement carving out new directions, and with enough detail to make it credible, succeed at first viewing. This subject is hard work and voters are urged to read the document in order to note the progress of the school department's leadership.

I have a quote over my desk that says: "All agreements with myself shall be in writing. Everything else is just a good idea." Mr. Slanetz has written down the good idea and the School Committee "unanimously" voted it in. I agree that it is a good idea.

In fact I watched much of the school committee discussion relative to this good idea on channel 22. One piece of the dialog I recall [and it may not be totally accurate], was between Mr. Slanetz and Mr. Flynn. The issue was stretch versus do-ability. Mr. Slanetz rightly claimed that a successful goal was one that stretched the participants to excel. Mr. Flynn rightly claimed that a workable goal must be do-able and not impossible.

This seeming paradox is my frame of reference. And the prism through which I am looking is the perspective of people who voted against the override. Mr. Flynn also suggested in the debate another very practical consideration, which is that the new Standards should encompass some of the objections, voiced by the override opponents "otherwise new override attempts are likely to fail." His concern is wise since the new Standards do not address the basic concerns of override opponents (including myself) who feel that school leaders must regain the trust they lost during the override debate and subsequent surprise financial disclosures.

So in this spirit I'd like to comment on some specific issues.

• Nomenclature (what things are named)

Mr. Slanetz stated "We believe that the goal of being in the top 10 school districts in the state and top 100 in the nation (with multiple measures) with every student achieving at their aptitude is the right goal for Cohasset." Everyone I know is an editor so I hope Mr. Slanetz will forgive me for making a couple of comments and suggestions here. In the televised debate on this new Standard it seemed to me that everybody used the word "goal." The discussion occasionally broke down because the debates were not about the same idea. To illustrate, goals will have specific durations and priorities according to some more general "goal." As I understand it the planning structure for the schools is 1-, 3- and 5-year goals. But 1-year goals should be specific enough to include what it will cost, when it is to be completed , and what deliverable can be expected. Here metrics [e.g.; money] mean a lot. However, the "Community Standards of Excellence" is so general that it would defy any metric. And, if a metric were inserted, it would probably blunt the ability of those Standards to motivate people. It might make sense to rename the Community Standards as a Mission Statement. The Biggest Metric: money

A major distinction between a mission statement and a current school year's goal is a cost estimate. A mission statement can say with impunity: Whatever it takes. This year's budget must say: This is what it will cost. While this distinction is not made in Mr. Slanetz's new Standards commentary it must be recognized that affordability is not necessarily based on the mission statement. I suspect one major criticism of the new Standards will be forthcoming along the lines of "Can we afford what has been proposed?" This is valid and may require further debate along the lines of creating a formula to cap a percentage of property tax revenue for school use. Keep in mind that one goal must be to build the willingness of the community to fund a high level of excellence within a public school setting.

• Who's the competition?

In an earlier Mariner [9/15] there was a table from Boston Magazine that listed the top 25 public and private schools in the state ranked by top MCAS results. At the time I thought there might be some inclination to use these as a peer group for the Cohasset schools. I hope this isn't what is meant in the new Standards. If it is I think the stretch is not do-able. Using our "top 10" criterion against Boston's list, eight of the top 10 are private schools, two are public. In my view there is no possible way Cohasset Schools (7-12) can compare with nine of these schools. The eight private schools are self-selecting meaning they can set rigid criteria for acceptance and reject applicants who don't fit. Public schools by design are intended to be inclusive serving all students in the community. Of the two public schools on the list, Boston Latin is an exam school so it is also self-selecting. The second public school is Weston.

Thus, if the word "public" were inserted in the new standards I would agree that this is a valid basis for comparison. Note that on the Boston list of 25 only six public schools make the grade. Since Boston Latin is not itself a district it seems to me five school districts are the competition. The new wording of the mission statement might read: "We believe the goal of being in the top 10 public school districts in the state...etc."

I believe the "top 100 in the nation" criterion splits the focus of the mission. As Mr. Slanetz delineates there are many differing criteria currently employed to identify the top 100 school districts nationally. My sense is this is creating confusion in focus rather than the clarity of a "top 10 public school in the state" list. As Cohasset moves toward and achieves top 10 status you can amend the mission statement and define it more specifically to target what criteria we want to achieve beyond that goal. Overreaching can be a real negative and may be what Mr. Flynn was concerned about. I know in sales organizations unreachable goals breed frustration and negativity.

• One Size doesn't fit all.

Mr. Slanetz presents an outstanding summary and evaluation of the No Child Left Behind Law. If you read just one thing in his Mariner Commentary, make sure you understand this part because it shows the impact of a federal law on Cohasset as well as why the law doesn't really apply to most Cohasset's students. For instance, Mr. Slanetz says "Passing MCAS is a standard of a student's minimal competency in English and Math at a 10th grade level in 12th grade but in no way is a standard sufficient for college bound students [emphasis mine]. In other words, the MCAS shoe is not designed for students in a school system geared toward college. It simply does not fit the needs of 90 percent of Cohasset students.

We have a good start. We have a sign of leadership I haven't seen for a while on anything other than Building Programs.

• New Standards are Customized

As I see it in the All Children Move Ahead section of his commentary, Mr. Slanetz claims that the new goal structure adopted by the School Committee actually customizes the general rules under which Massachusetts school districts operate to fit Cohasset students' needs. If this were so, I would say it reflects a tremendous accomplishment. Of course, post override there is still some skepticism in some people's minds that this plan will actually work as advertised. On the other hand, what the School Committee has produced deserves support of the community. I encourage everyone to read the new Standards and to continue to monitor the progress our school leaders are making.

• The Wrong Result

What would be the worst result to my mind would be the repeat of an experience I had 35 years ago. At the time my boss gave me the job of "Departmental Coordinator for Long Range Planning." You are probably thinking what I thought at the time: he doesn't like me. I took my assignment very seriously. My job was to work with a new Strategic Planning Group, which was tasked with developing strategic plans for all departments. The idea was to get buy in from the people on the "ground" for the larger strategic plan that the new group would present to the Board. Long story short. I worked for six months researching all facets of our department planning according to the template I was given; drafted a strategic plan for my department; my boss signed off on it and submitted it upstairs. A couple of months later, we met in his office. He said to me "I just received an OK on the strategic plan. You did a great job on this and I appreciate it." Then, he opened the bottom drawer of his desk and tossed the Strategic Plan in and shut it, saying to me " Well I'm glad that's done. We won't have to worry about it till next year." And I never heard about the plan again.

Let's not do this with the work that has been done on the Cohasset School District Plan. We have a good start. We have a sign of leadership I haven't seen for a while on anything other than Building Programs. Buildings are important but far more important is what's inside the buildings. Let's make sure we get it right.

Lady Skippers earn landmark tie with Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In what has been a breakthrough season for the Cohasset High girls soccer team, last Saturday was the clearest indication yet of how far the program has come in recent years.

A second half goal by sophomore Maggie McGoldrick and some big saves by sophomore keeper Johanna Brophy earned the Skippers a 1-1 tie with archrival Norwell.

The point did earn the Clippers their fourth straight South Shore League title. But, considering how these meetings have gone in recent seasons, Saturday's tie was a significant achievement, one that was not lost on the girls in the white uniforms.

"I know they were excited about it," said Cohasset head coach Deb Beal. "Norwell has been on the pedestal for so long; we got one foot up there and almost knocked them off."

A big key for Cohasset was not letting Norwell's early goal get them down. Clippers junior Jenn Cronin scored just six minutes into the game, but the Skippers were not fazed.

"It didn't seem to break their stride," Beal said. "We went out there with a mission to play well, and they did."

A little more than halfway through the second half, sophomore forward Torey Hart took a typically excellent corner kick. On the other end was McGoldrick, who controlled it well and shot with confidence into the back of the net.

Norwell called timeout after that score, and after the break, both teams had chances to win it. Brophy and Clippers junior Sallie Hardy both came up huge in the closing minutes, as they did throughout the entire match.

Beal said the result "came down to defense, the keepers and communication." Improved communication on the field is something Beal has stressed throughout the season, and it started to pay dividends on Saturday.

Meanwhile, Norwell head coach Bruce Emerson and his team came away very impressed with the Skippers' performance.

"The girls and I all thought after the game that this was the best team we'd faced all year," said Emerson, high praise considering Norwell has played Div. 2 tournament teams Pembroke and Hanover.

Hard-fought battle shows no results

Gridders battle to 0-0 tie in Homecoming against EB

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset's Homecoming game against East Bridgewater had an early 3:30 p.m. kickoff, but that didn't mean the lights weren't necessary.

The weather was horrible with high winds, downpouring rain, and frigid temperatures. This Homecoming game had everything in it except a winner; or for that matter, even a score, as the teams battled to a 0-0 tie.

East Bridgewater received the ball first and quickly moved the ball and chewed up the clock with its strong running game. Then, on a screen play, the Vikings appeared to score a touchdown on a 50-yard catch and run by the halfback, but the play was called back on a block in the back penalty by East Bridgewater.

This would be the closest either team would come to scoring a touchdown, and seemed to really fire up the Skippers' defense.

One of the biggest stories of the night was the fact that junior Dave Snowdale was making his first start of the season at quarterback. Snowdale picked a rough night for his first start, but showed confidence and leadership during the game, especially on his quarterback bootleg run for a gain of 15 yards. He also made few mistakes throughout the game and, overall, kept Cohasset in it.

Snowdale showed great resiliency when senior offensive lineman Paul St. Pierre was forced out of the game due to an apparent knee injury. After the game, Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw noted the significance of losing St. Pierre.

"Paul is one of our best offensive lineman, is very consistent, and shows flawlessness on the field," Afanasiw said. "He is very difficult to replace."

Probably the highlight of the game for the Skippers was the outstanding play of the defense. Throughout the game, Cohasset's defense made huge stops on East Bridgewater and gave the offense great field position and opportunities.

In the fourth quarter alone, the defense had multiple defensive stops, taking the ball away from East Bridgewater. The fourth quarter was filled with big tackles, especially on fourth down plays. On one fourth-and-8 with just about a minute left in the game, junior Cliff Musto made a huge sack, giving the ball back to his offense.

Then again, the defense stopped the ball on four straight plays when East Bridgewater was driving and looking to score. This series of stops was led by seniors Nick Cambi and Nick Zappolo, who recorded huge tackles for their team.

On maybe the biggest play of the game, to seal the tie, Cambi recorded another tackle, this time a sack for a huge loss, and Cohasset possession.

"They played very physical, and were much more disciplined than in past games," said Afanasiw of his defense. "There were very few let downs, even with the weather conditions."

After finishing the regular season in second place, the Cohasset High golf team won the South Shore League stroke play tournament last Thursday at Souther's Marsh Country Club in Plymouth. The Skippers' team score of 214 best second-place Norwell by eight strokes. Zach Murray won the individual competition, as his round of 67 was tops among the 28 golfers competing. Charlie Czerkawski shot a 71, while John Wade's 76 rounded out the scorers for Cohasset's win. Cohasset also joined Norwell as the only teams in the league to have multiple SSL All-Stars (both had three golfers selected). Representing Cohasset on the team are Murray, Czerkawski, and Kevin Barber.

CHS boys look to end season right

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

This season has been one of adversity for the Cohasset High boys soccer team.

After losing nine starters to graduation from last year's squad, this year's outfit has seen key player after key player go down with myriad injuries.

Through it all, head coach Rob Leary says he has seen his boys play hard and not feel sorry for themselves.

"The kids have not given up. They definitely could've packed up a couple weeks ago, and they haven't," Leary said Wednesday. "Most of them are young, and they know they're playing for next year. The seniors are still going hard, too, which says a lot about them."

Cohasset's six seniors – tri-captain Chris Donze, Hunter Sease, Luke Genello, Adam Smith, Tristram Norman and Mike Corry – will close out their high school soccer careers on Wednesday when the Skippers host non-league foe Scituate at 3:30. Prior to that, Cohasset played undefeated Hanover yesterday (Oct. 26) after the Mariner went to press.

In their most recent match, the Skippers traveled to Mashpee and took a 5-3 loss. The Falcons jumped out to a 4-1 lead, but Cohasset hung with it and made a game of it. Sophomore forward Chris Wilcox, who started the season on the JV team, had two goals, with junior tri-captain Sam Roth scoring the other.

Wilcox has been a revelation in the second half of the season, highlighted by a corker of a goal in the Skippers' 5-4 win over Carver on Oct. 12. Taking a diagonal ball from junior midfielder Emma Oronte, Wilcox fired a 30-yard rocket from a tough angle, and the Crusaders keeper was helpless as it found the net, top corner.

"Chris has a bright future," said Leary. "He's still adjusting to the speed of the varsity game, but he's come a long way since the beginning of the year."

The coach he has been impressed with the play of freshman keeper Will Wise and sophomore keeper Owen Landon. Also playing well recently have been junior Ryan Crough and sophomores Lenny Brown and Ryan Daley.

Most of these players weren't expected to see as much playing time as they have, and at times the going has been tough. But, Leary sees it as a blessing in disguise, as they will all be back next year and will be starting the '07 season much further along in their development than expected.

Field hockey peaking at the right time

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Two significant developments have cropped up on the field hockey front in the last weeks of the season.

First, the Skippers have qualified to enter postseason play as a result of their shutting out Hull on the 17th of October; more on this later.

The other good piece of news lies in the tactical shifts made on the field. These shifts have played a big part in the team's movement towards a winning formula. So what are these changes?

Let's start with wing movement.

"We've really developed in our wing movement to the point that it is one of our strongest facets," explained head coach Deb Bostwick. "The wings really use their speed to their advantage.

"Another strength we've developed is the ability to control the middle of the field," added Bostwick. "This, coupled with our diagonal back defense, will make for a very solid tournament setup."

The "diagonal back" defense, which utilizes two sweepers, has drastically cut down on fast breaks against Cohasset. If the Skippers can apply this defense, continue to control the middle, and maintain speed on the wings, there's no telling what might develop.

No question about it, Bostwick and company need to shake things up a bit if they want to emerge from the middle of the league. At this point in the season Harwich and East Bridgewater are fighting toe-to-toe for the number-1 spot in the South Shore League. No wonder the Harwich coach was so twisted over the league officials ruling the Harwich–Cohasset game a tie.

Cohasset has landed in third place with a very respectable overall 9-4 season record; not too shabby since many of the wins have shown up late in the season.

Take the victory at Hull for example. The weather can get nasty next to Hull Gut. Sure enough, the winds picked up and the rain clouds began to move in.

Hull has not exactly burned up the league this year. So, when the Skippers finished the first half with a 0-0 score, Bostwick huddled with her crew to put it mildly: if the Skippers failed to pick up the pace within the first five minutes of the second half, she would not be a happy camper.

The Skippers did not disappoint. Sophomore Georgia Murley assisted senior captain Caitlin Hurley just two minutes into the half.

A minute later, Murley found senior captain Laura Campedelli, opening the floodgates for Campedelli. Only seven minutes later Campedelli scored again, this time unassisted.

With only five minutes left in the game junior Olivia Kimla fed Campedelli, who notched a hat trick. This midfield and offensive production, along with unbeatable Skipper defense all contributed to the shutout for Cohasset.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Skippers captains Sheelah Scott (left) and Laura Campedelli celebrate a goal during Cohasset's 2-1 win over Norwell on Oct. 14. Campedelli scored a hat trick in last week's win in Hull.

The Skippers regained their stride with a key 2-0 Homecoming victory against Norwell last Saturday.

The successful tactics and motivating words that worked in Hull fell by the wayside two days later when Carver showed up at Alumni Field. The Skippers clearly wanted revenge for the loss at Carver earlier in the season.

Cohasset drew first blood on a goal from Hurley with the assist going to junior Corinna Durham. Unfortunately, the Crusaders answered with two goals of their own.

In the second half, Campedelli assisted junior Sally Meehan, who fired a rocket on a corner to tie the game. Carver responded quickly with a game-winning goal by taking advantage of a scuffle in the Skipper's defensive end.

"We played very well," said senior Virginia Spofford. "We really could not have done many things better."

Bostwick agreed, saying, "We were ready for this and gave them a great game, but we have this thing about Carver and winning…still trying to figure it out."

Bostwick gave praise to her defense for this game, particularly to senior Michelle Madge, and to juniors Meehan and Paige Strecker.

The Skippers regained their stride with a key 2-0 Homecoming victory against Norwell last Saturday. The Skippers dominated the field with the score barely reflecting Cohasset's control. Midway through the first half senior captain Sheelah Scott made a textbook pass to Spofford, who knocked it home for the first goal. Five minutes later, Scott tallied another assist, this time to Meehan.

Kimla, Campedelli, and defenders Sondra Hart and Molly Gallagher owned the field and set up many of these opportunities.

For now, the Skippers have a chance to boost their seeding with this week's games against Westwood and Silver Lake. Bostwick emphasized how the Cohasset corners, both on defense and offense, need improvement if the Skippers expect to go deep into postseason play.

She will continue to focus on wing speed, midfield control and the diagonal back defense as the Skippers prepare for the tournament.

Georgia Murley (left) mixes it up with Norwell's Cassie Maynard during the team's Oct. 14 game.

Fletcher Smalzel (9) gets a hand from Nick Zappolo after the Skippers' defense forced a turnover on downs in Friday's game against East Bridgewater.

Hard-fought battle shows no results

Afanasiw added how frustrating the final result was for the kids because they played well enough to win, and that in the future he would like to see games go to overtime to determine a winner.

About the teams overall performance seven games into the year, Afanasiw said, "They have had outstanding moments, show glimpse of greatness, but they still make rudimentary mistakes. They have learned a lot, though, and taken well with the new offensive system."

This Homecoming game had everything in it except a winner; or for that matter, even a score, as the teams battled to a 0-0 tie.

Cohasset (3-2-2 overall, 1-1-1 in the South Shore League) still has hopes of making the playoffs. To do so, however, they will most likely have to win their remaining three games, and also receive help from other teams in the league.

Afanasiw said he and his team are focused on their big game against the reigning Div. 3 Super Bowl champions, Abington, and believes his team is up for the task. The Green Wave are playing at Norwell on Saturday.

JV gridders fall to EB

In sports, sometimes the outcome of a contest can come down to inches.

In football, an inch can be the difference in achieving a first down or a two-point conversion. In the JV football contest in East Bridgewater, it was inches that made the difference between a tie and a loss for the Skipppers.

The JV Skippers arrived in EB on a blustery fall day. EB received the opening kickoff and the mighty D of Cohasset held them to three-and-out.

Cohasset marched the length of the field, gaining three consecutive first downs behind the power running of Mike Froio and Dana Valentine. They failed to reach the end zone, however, and turned the ball over to EB on downs. That was the end of the first quarter.

The second quarter saw EB go down and out on three plays again. On the Skippers' next possession, Valentine picked up five yards, there was an incomplete pass, and then a Johnny Maher scramble out of the pocket picked up the first down.

Maher rolled left in the ensuing series and was hit hard and left the game. Brendan Doonan took over play calling for the Skippers, handing off to Valentine for a 12-yard gain. The next play, Cohasset turned over the ball.

In a game of inches, he was brought down hard, just inches from securing a tie.

EB had their first pass completion of the game but gave back all the yards gained when Nick Savage sacked the quarterback in the backfield for a huge loss. It was third and short (inches), and EB decided to throw the ball and linebacker Andy McKenna decided to intercept it. McKenna delivered a solid return and gave his offense good field position. It was three-and-out for the Skippers, though.

On the ensuing punt, Matt Wasel gave a big league hit to the punt returner, keeping EB deep in its own territory. EB was down and out in three. McKenna came up with a solid return on the EB punt. Valentine brought the ball to the EB 10-yard line, culminating the strongest drive of the game, but penalties pushed the Skippers back and they failed to convert.

It was 0-0 going into the fourth quarter. EB took over on its own 25 and marched the length of the field, successfully moving the ball on the ground. They finally scored after a punishing drive against the Cohasset defense, and converted the two points to lead, 8-0.

It was now or never for the Skippers. Cohasset had a good return on the kickoff, getting to midfield with just over two minutes to go. Doonan rolled right, Derek Schwantner sped down the field, and Doonan released a rocket that hit Schwantner perfectly (in the middle of two defenders) and Schwantner went in for the score.

Needing the two-point conversion to tie, Doonan rolled right again, but seeing his receivers covered, he scrambled for the end zone. But, in a game of inches, he was brought down hard, just inches from securing a tie. After receiving the kickoff, EB took a knee to run out the clock.

The JV gridders next face Abington, Thursday Nov. 2, 3:30 p.m. at Alumni Field.

slate Tuesday with an impressive win over the Falcons. The score was a true indicator of the game's tenor, particularly in the first half.

It was Cohasset's turn to score early in this one, as a goal from senior captain Caren Garber in the first five minutes gave the Skippers a 1-0 lead. Hart picked up the assist, as she did on the other two goals.

It was clear from the get-go that the Skippers wanted to get the ball up front to Hart and let her create scoring opportunities, and Cohasset did it with smooth precision. Garber, McGoldrick and sophomore Sarah Coggins all provided great service for Hart in the first 10 minutes, setting the tone for the entire first half.

The work paid off in the 33rd minute, when junior striker Meg Anderson found the back of the net to make it 2-0. Coggins played another ball up to Hart in the final third, and Hart cleverly back-heeled it into Mashpee's penalty area. There, Anderson simply out-hustled her mark and the keeper to the ball and pushed it in.

Cohasset came out in the second half resting a few starters and playing a few girls in different positions. Junior stopper Anna Haggerty fell back into the sweeper role, and made a few key plays to stop attacks by the Falcons. Coggins and senior fullbacks Colleen Richardson and Haley Haracz all played well in the second half.

McGoldrick almost scored in the 52nd minute off a well-executed Cohasset attack. Garber, who played a strong game on the right flank for the Skippers, crossed to freshman forward Christine Coner just inside the Mashpee box. Coner laid it off beautifully to McGoldrick, whose shot from 22 yards out sailed just inches over the bar.

Sophomore Kristin Monaco scored Cohasset's third and final goal with nine minutes left in the match, finishing off a cross by Hart.

Senior keeper Shalea Daly came on in the second half and made four good saves to preserve the clean sheet for Cohasset, who improved to 11-3-2 going into yesterday's (Oct. 26) match against Nantucket. The Skippers close their season Monday at home against Holbrook (5:30 p.m. kickoff).

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

School Wellness Policy should be off the menu

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Last week was Spirit Week at CHS. Yet again, this year's graduating class won by showing the most school spirit. Is this outcome a precursor to this year's Powder Puff game? There's only about a month left until kickoff, so we'll have to wait and see. On a different note, isn't the Wellness Policy a little overbearing? The elimination of less healthy foods and beverages in our schools does absolutely nothing.

The problem of obesity and poor nutrition isn't going to be solved by placing a ban on unhealthy options in schools. Is asking the school to teach kids to make the right choices, instead of pretending those choices don't exist, too much? Who knows. Moving on, here is this week's news.

• Attention Seniors! Senior pictures, baby pictures and Senior write-ups are due in the main office by Nov. 1st. Any questions can be e-mailed to Derry Schwantner at dschwantner@cohassetk12.org Parents please send in your ads ASAP.

• Last Friday state Rep. Garrett Bradley and Senator Bob Hedlund spoke to students about the gubernatorial race, smear campaigns, and the effects of the train on the South Shore.

The TV lineup right now is one more on the endless mountain of reasons kids can become lazy and procrastinate.

• Last Friday a pep rally was held in the gymnasium marking the end of Spirit Week. The heated class rivalry prompted some students' to cool off via water balloons, much to the consternation and chagrin of the administration.

• Congratulations to Homecoming King and Queen Ben Masotta and Flossie Clougherty! The Homecoming Court included Bobby Meikleham, Hunter Sease, Kyle Dattola-Harris, Alyssa Campbell, Casey Cavanaro, and Lara Novak.

• Monday was the Middle School Spirit Sale.

• Middle School team leaders met Thursday.

• A CTA meeting was held Thursday in the library at 3:30.

• Tonight is the Middle School Halloween Dance.

• The Spinnaker '06-'07 debut is next week on Halloween! Buy a Spinnaker and stay up to date on all the gossip in the Scuttlebutt. Don't expect a lollipop with your Spinnaker, however, because we all know that one piece of candy on Halloween can't be tolerated by the Administration under the Wellness Act — the same administration that hands out Smarties for 10th graders taking MCAS.

• Powder Puff is in the near future. Get those shirts made, and show some class pride!

Charles Miller made an awesome Jedi knight during Spirit Week.

• Congratulations to Mrs. Charwat, who recently gave birth to twin girls!

• Congratulations to Ms. Sternala, now Mrs. McCoy, who recently tied the knot!

• Coach Afanasiw was also married recently, congrats!

The TV lineup right now is one more on the endless mountain of reasons kids can become lazy and procrastinate. Monday Heroes is on; Tuesday has Friday Night Lights, Wednesday has LOST finishing up with Thursday's comedy, The Office. Parents, next time you begin tell your child to turn off the tube and start his or her homework, wait.

We aren't simply sitting there to veg out; we're developing an important life skill. Besides, "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." If you don't have Comcast's DVR or TiVo set up to record programs for later viewing, you almost have to watch these shows when they air. Honestly, who still gets out a VHS and hits the record button? Television shows can consume a huge chunk of time as a sedentary exercise. The challenge is balancing work with recreation.

Fortunately, the school's Wellness policy will keep kids from making the same nutritionally poor choices in school that they make at home. Or you know, you could just bring in your own coke and potato chips from home. Ah, the beauty of compromise.

Book group for middle-schoolers

Buttonwood Book Group for middle school children in grades six through eight, will meet Thursday, Nov. 9, at 7 p.m., at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset. Facilitator is Barb Mullin. The selected book is "The Sledding Hill" by Chris Crutcher. Reservations are not necessary, and all are welcome.

For more information, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Informal screening

The Osgood Preschool staff in conjunction with the school nurse will hold informal screenings for children on the third Friday of every month from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. The remaining dates are Nov. 17, Dec. 15, 2006; Jan. 19, Feb. 16, March 16, April 27, May 18, 2007.

These screenings will consist of a play group activity as well as opportunities for vision, hearing and posture screening. These screenings are to assist in identifying those students who should be referred for an evaluation to determine eligibility for special education.

If you are interested in having your child participate, contact one of the preschool staff at 781-383-6117 no later than the Wednesday prior to one of the scheduled screenings.

Parents Advisory Council to meet Nov. 7

The Cohasset Parents Advisory Council will host a "Meet and Greet" on Tuesday, Nov. 7. The PAC is looking forward to meeting some new faces in our school district and some familiar ones too!

The meeting which starts promptly at 7:30 p.m. will meet at the Osgood School Library, (located behind Deer Hill School), 210 Sohier St.

Welcomed are all parents and guardians of students who receive special education services, including families whose children have an Individualized Education Plan (IEP), 504 Accommodation, or Out-of-District placement, etc. Additionally the PAC welcomes the involvement of educators and all other interested parties. The PAC is a resource for parents who think their child may have some learning, behavioral, social or attention issues.

Under the Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 71B each school district is currently required to have a Parent Advisory Council. In Cohasset, the PAC is a system-wide organization of parents working in partnership with teachers, special education service providers and administrators to promote a successful educational environment for our children. The PAC is dedicated to ensuring that children with disabilities have equal access to educational opportunities and schools that are safe, nurturing, challenging learning environments. Cohasset PAC provides access to current resources, regulations, laws and activities that impact special education.

All workshops and presentations are Free - Sponsored by the PSO/PAC

The Cohasset PAC has joined with other local PAC members in the South Shore area to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. The South Shore PAC Network hopes to meets informally throughout the year. If you would like to be added the e-mail network for updates please forward your contact information to: southshorepac@comcast.net.

IT'S HAPPENING

'The Women' on stage

The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents "The Women., the classic comedy by Clare Boothe Luce on Nov. 10, 11, 17, and 18 at 8 p.m. Nov. 12, at 2 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, Cohasset.

Tickets are $12, group discounts are available for groups of eight or more. Tickets may be purchased in advance at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Front Street Books in Scituate or by calling 617-697-2115. Ticket also available at the door.

Choral Art Society hosts fundraising concert

Choral Art Society is hosting a fundraising concert Saturday, Nov. 18, at 7 p.m., at St. Mary of the Nativity Parish Center, Scituate, to raise money for the Choral Art Society Anniversary Scholarship. Five developing musicians – current students and recent graduates of conservatories and university voice programs such as The Boston Conservatory, NYU and Berklee College of Music – will showcase their talents in what is expected to be a varied and lively concert. Tickets are $20 for adults, $15 for students.

Choral Art Society will be launching this scholarship as part of its 50th anniversary celebration during the 2008-2009 concert season. One or two scholarships will be awarded annually to a South Shore high school student who plans to further his or her education in music.

By featuring current and recent voice students in this fundraising concert, Choral Art Society will demonstrate the benefits of helping encourage the musical education of talented individuals. Participants will be supporting these developing musicians as they also support the developing Choral Art Society scholarship fund.

Directed by Danica A. Buckley, Choral Art Society is a non-auditioned, mixed chorus composed of members from many South Shore communities. Two concerts are scheduled annually. The Christmas concert is scheduled for Dec. 3, at 4:30 p.m., at St. Luke Church, Scituate; rehearsals for the spring concert, which will take place May 12, will begin Monday, Jan. 15.

New members are always welcome; the ability to read music is helpful, but not necessary; rehearsal CDs/tapes are made available. Weekly rehearsals are Mondays, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., at First Trinitarian Congregational Church, Country Way, Scituate. Rehearsal and performance space are handicapped accessible.

For more information, visit choralartsociety.org, or call 781-545-8295 or 617-285-6339.

Teen Center

There will be a Midnight Blue Dance at the Teen Center Friday, Nov. 17, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone in grade six through eight is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold.

This is not a school function.

Book donations at St. Stephen's

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church at16 Highland Ave., Cohasset will accept donations of slightly worn hardcover and paperback books, DVDs, and CDs for its annual book sale, part of the ecumenical Village Fair that is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 2, on Cohasset's scenic common.

If your shelves are spilling onto the floor, they have the solution for you. Donations can be brought to the church in bags or boxes and placed inside the parish hall door marked "Church Offices." Use the "Reserved Parking" spot to unload your books during church office hours, which are Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Alternatively, they would be happy to make arrangements to pick up of donations. For donation pick-up or information, call D'Anne Avotins at 781-923-1104.

Books are sorted at St. Stephen's Church in Walton Rodgers Hall every Tuesday from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Donations will be accepted through Saturday, Nov. 25. They regret that they cannot accept old textbooks, romance novels, damaged or moldy books or books with notes and/or highlighting.

The monies raised from the book sale will be used to send underprivileged children and their families to the Barbara C. Harris Camp in Greenfield, N.H. Your donation of books, DVDs and CDs will help change lives and strengthen the community.

For information about this wonderful facility, visit www.bchcenter.org.

Bellevue Cadillac to hold benefit concert

The Jump Jive 'n Wail for Trails concert, starring the Grammy Award winning band, Bellevue Cadillac, will take place Sunday, Nov. 5, from 5 to 9:30 p.m., at the Mt. Blue Restaurant in Norwell to benefit the Maxwell Conservation Trust, the local land trust based in Scituate, which has worked hard during the past five years to save 125 acres of open space in the Bates Lane area in the west end of Scituate. This land is watershed to Cohasset and Scituate.

This rockin' party will also feature a super silent auction and raffle full of 80 terrific items. These include original oil paintings by Sergio Roffo, Dean Morrissey, Jill Cappadano and Paige Railsback, weekends in New Hampshire, Martha's Vineyard and the Berkshires, a kayak, a cord of seasoned firewood delivered to the winner's door, a catered Thanksgiving meal for eight from Whole Foods, stays at the Red Lion Inn, Cohasset, and the Colonnade Hotel in Boston, antiques, Irish knits, Bruins tickets, sports memorabilia, and gift certificates from all over the South Shore.

Tickets for the event are $50 per person and include complimentary finger food, beer and wine. Contact Cynde Robbins at 781-545-4167 for tickets, or purchase them at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset or at Front Street Bookshop in Scituate Harbor.

Reservations may also be made at Mt. Blue at 781-659-0050.

Circle Ministry Sunday - A Dailogue Sermon: "Only Connect"

Our minister will be joined in the pulpit by Peter Bowden, who consults widely on what is often called Small Group Ministry. Directly after this service all are invited to participate in a one-hour sample session of Circle Ministry, from 11:30 to 12:30 in the Parish House. Child care will be provided!

A year in the planning, Circle Ministry is a venture in which small groups of eight to ten meet with trained facilitators in member homes with agreed upon frequency to discover deeper connections with one another, to explore life stirring questions, to grow spiritually, and to develop an intention where service to the congregation and the larger community is an outcome.

Coffee hour will lead directly into the Circle Ministry sample session.

Toddlers, children, and youth will meet for religious education classes at 10 AM in the Parish House. Childcare is provided for the youngest.

All are welcome as we worship and learn and live our faith together! Obituaries

Esther Studley

Devoted mother and grandmother

Esther (Raccuia) Studley, 78, of Cohasset died Oct. 19, 2006, at South Shore Hospital.

Mrs. Studley was born in New Haven, Conn., and was raised and educated in Hingham. A graduate of Hingham High School, she moved to Cohasset in 1949, where she met and married her husband, the late Austin E. Studley.

Mrs. Studley was a devoted mother and grandmother.

Wife of the late Austin E. Studley, who died Feb. 11, 1995, she leaves her children, Katherine T. Ellstrom and her husband, Steven, of Yarmouth Port, and Ernest A. Studley and his wife, Sharyn, of Cohasset; her sister, Josephine Shaw of Illinois; her brother, Bernard Raccuia of Connecticut; and her grandchildren, Teresa and Clifford Ellstrom and Eric and Kyle Studley.

A graveside service was held at Woodside Cemetery. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to Trustees of Reservations at World's End, 250 Martin St., Hingham, MA 02043.

Abbey lecture on serving spiritual needs of inmates

Glastonbury Abbey presents, "Listening to Other Voices: The Fears That Binds Us," Thursday, Nov. 16, at 7:15 p.m., in the Glastonbury Conference Center at16 Hull St., in Hingham.

Sisters Kathleen Deneven and Ruth Raiche have been serving the spiritual needs of the inmates of MCI-Norfolk for a combined total of 34 years and will describe their daily work. Eighty percent of the 1,400 inmates are serving life sentences for murder. In addition, they will talk about their extensive volunteer support programs within Norfolk and aftercare transitional programs for former inmates.

...they will talk about their extensive volunteer support programs within Norfolk and aftercare transitional programs for former inmates.

Sister Kathleen is a Franciscan nun and psychotherapist who retired in Feb. 2006, but remains active at the penitentiary and Sister Ruth is a Third Order Dominican who has worked at Framingham and Norfolk prisons for more than 18 years.

The free lecture is a part of Glastonbury Abbey's Inter-Religious Lecture Series. Donations are gratefully accepted. Reservations are recommended and can be made by calling 781-749-2155.

Volunteer workday at World's End is Oct. 28

Looking for a way to give back to the Hingham community while enjoying the day with family, friends and neighbors? The Trustees of Reservations invites residents to pack a picnic and pitch in at World's End in Hingham Saturday, Oct. 28, from 9 a.m. to noon. Volunteers are needed to help clear trails, prune the red cedars and remove weeds from the grove area. Volunteers are asked to meet at the property's parking lot on Martin's Lane. Volunteer pre-registration is requested.

. This property is comprised of four major drumlins, grassy fields and miles of walking paths overlooking Boston Harbor. Even with a staff of caretakers and field personnel, there is always more work to be done.

The Trustees are hosting Conservation Works! programs in 23 communities around the state. In years past, up to 600 volunteers have contributed more than 2,700 hours of service, what full-time employee could accomplish in a single day.

For more information on The Trustees or how to become a member and receive regular mailings and benefits, call 781-784-0567, visit the Web site at thetrustees.org or email membership@ttor.org.

OBITUARIES

Mary Jeanette Murray

Former state Representative

Mary Jeanette Murray

Mary Jeanette (Hurwitz) Murray, 81, of Cohasset, died at her home Oct. 23, 2006.

Mrs. Murray was the longest serving Republican woman state Representative in the history of the commonwealth of Massachusetts. Among her accomplishments, the most significant to her was the ability to assist "her people," citizens of her district and her friends, who needed her guidance, influence and insight. She was a woman who lived to serve others, and was committed to her work for the Woman Marine Corps League, and was a founding member of the committee, which designed and erected the Woman's Veteran's War Memorial at the entrance of Arlington National Cemetery in Washington.

Mrs. Murray fought against casinos in the town of Hull; sponsored legislation that put in place a wheelchair lemon law; sponsored legislation to enforce drunk driving laws when operating a boat; and was instrumental in allowing hospice nurses the right to pronounce, thereby saving families from hours of waiting for the medical examiner.

She served as state Representative for the Third Plymouth District for 24 years and through six governor's administrations. She was a Selectman for the town of Cohasset for 13 years, and was appointed to the Cohasset Housing Authority by the governor of the commonwealth. Mrs. Murray and her husband, Phil, helped found the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association. They also worked for the youth of Cohasset through the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Catholic Youth Organization of St. Anthony's and as coach of varsity basketball at Cohasset High School in the 1960s.

Mrs. Murray was an organizer and sponsor of the Cohasset Drug Education Committee. She was also a member of the Governor's Advisory Committee of Woman Veteran's and the Marine Caddy Post of Quincy. She was the Veterans Agent for the town of Cohasset and was a member of the Sons of Italy, Lodge 1851, the Saltwater Club of Hull, American Legion Auxiliary and Hingham's Citizens Police Academy. Mrs. Murray was a parishioner of St. Anthony Church for 81 years.

Wife of the late Philip G. Murray Sr., she leaves her children, Phil Murray and his wife, Kathleen, of Hanover, Nate Murray and his wife, Victoria, of Kingston; and Lillian Curley and her husband, James, of Cohasset; and five grandchildren, Chris, Kevin and Max Murray, and Jennie and Ben Curley.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated Saturday, Oct. 28, at 10 a.m., at St. Anthony Church. Visiting hours will be in St. Anthony's Parish Center, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, Friday, from noon to 4 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. Interment in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset. Arrangements are by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the Cohasset Veteran's Memorial Committee, c/o Town Treasurer, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Mary Elizabeth Campbell

Former director of Social Service League

Mary Elizabeth (Hillis) Campbell, 95, a long-time resident of Cohasset, died in Hingham on Oct. 13, 2006.

She was born in Cohasset in 1911, graduated from Cohasset High School in 1929 and from Perry Normal School in Boston in 1933 and did graduate work at Boston University and City College of New York. A specialist in remedial reading, she taught in the Cohasset and Brookline Schools, at Children's Hospital in Boston, in private schools in Greenwich, Conn., and Mount Kisco, N.Y. and at the Kingsbury Remedial Center of Washington, D.C.

Throughout her life Mrs. Campbell worked as a volunteer for many public service agencies in Westchester County, New York where she resided for 26 years and in Cohasset where she was a director of the Cohasset Social Service League, an active board member of the Cohasset Historical Society and worked with the Coastal Counseling Service in Weymouth.

Wife of 63 years to the late John C. Campbell, she leaves two sons, Allan R. Campbell of Newton and Judge A. Bruce Campbell of Denver, Colo., and their wives, Martha and Brenda Campbell; three grandchildren, Michael C. Campbell of Newton, Erin C. Breit of Denver, and two great-grandchildren, John A. and Peter J. Campbell, both of Newton.

She was the grandmother of the late John F. Campbell.

A memorial service will be held in the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset Common on Saturday, Oct. 28, at 11a.m.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Mary's memory may be made to the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, MA 02025 or the Cohasset Social Service League, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset MA 02025.

The Rev. Roger P.N. Nolette

Monk at Glastonbury Abbey

The Rev. Roger P.N. Nolette, OSB, 70, a monk at Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham, died at the Abbey Oct, 8, 2006, after a brief illness.

He was the son of the late Adelard and Antoinette Nolette, and was educated in public schools in Fitchburg and Winchendon, and later joined the U.S. Air Force. After leaving the Air Force, Rev. Nolette attended college at Mount Angel Seminary in Oregon and, after entering Glastonbury Abbey, Conception Abbey Seminary in Missouri. He completed his theological studies at St. Basil's Seminary in Toronto, Canada, and later received a master's degree in religious education from Andover Newton School of Theology. The Rev. Nolette made is profession of monastic vows in 1964, and was ordained a Roman Catholic priest in 1969.

In the early years of his ministry, the Rev. Nolette worked in religious education and directed retreats at the Abbey. He was also the director of lay oblates for many years. In more recent years, he assisted at Our Lady of the Assumption Parish in Osterville, and was a part time chaplain at Cape Cod Hospital.

He leaves his brother, Robert Nolette of Turner Falls; his sisters, Lorraine Richard. Lucille Moriarty and Rita Amenta, all of Winchendon, and Doris LaFond of Sweet Home, Ore.; many nieces, nephews, great-nieces and great-nephews; and his brother monks at Glastonbury Abbey. He was the brother of the late Roland Nolette and Romeo Nolette.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Wednesday, Oct. 11 at Glastonbury Abbey. Interment in the Abbey Cemetery. Arrangements are by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Our Lady of the Assumption Parish, 76 Wianno Ave., Osterville, MA 02655; Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, MA 02043; or a charity of the donor's choice.

Brother John Mark Carlin, Obl. O.S.B.

a residential oblate of Glastonbury Abbey

Brother John Mark Carlin, Obl. O.S.B., 81, a residential oblate of Glastonbury Abbey died Oct. 14, 2006 at the Norwell Knoll Nursing Facility, Norwell, after a long illness. He would have been 82 on Oct. 16.

Brother John Mark was born and grew up in Medford. He was educated in Medford parochial schools and graduated from St. Clement's High School in 1942. He served in the United States Army during World War II, landing at Utah Beach in Normandy and remaining on active duty in Europe until the end of the war. Taking advantage of the GI bill, he attended college and graduated from Spring Hill College, Alabama in 1950.

After college, Brother John Mark married Mary Heapes of Hingham. They lived in Weymouth until moving to Hingham in 1962 and were divorced in 1994. In Hingham, John Mark was active in community affairs, serving on the school committee and the advisory board. He was also active in St. Paul's Parish where he taught religious education classes for a number of years. Fro 30 years he owned and operated the Submarine Galley in Abington.

In 1999, Brother John Mark became a residential Oblate of Glastonbury Abbey. He had joined the monks for prayer on a daily basis for years prior to this and said that he simply felt that this is where he belonged.

Brother John Mark leaves his daughters, Ginny Carlin and Jennifer Smith both of Hingham; a grandson, Neil Smith also of Hingham and many nieces and nephews and the monks of Glastonbury Abbey.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Oct. 19 in the Abbey church at 11 a.m.

Interment was in the Abbey cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home handled the arrangements.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to St. Paul's Church, 147 North St., Hingham 02043, Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham 02043 or the charity of your choice.

STATUS REPORTS

Medical emergencies totaled 89

In Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia's summary of Fire Department responses during the month of September, he reported the following totals: building fires, three; motor vehicle fires, one; motor vehicle crashes, 10; medical emergencies, 89; inspections, 27; investigations, 38; assistance calls, six; automatic fire alarm activations, 18; and miscellaneous responses, eight. Fifty emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone, 41 medical emergencies; five fire calls; and four motor vehicle crashes, Silvia said.

The Fire Department ambulance transported 49 patients to South Shore Hospital and one patient to Quincy Medical Center. Mutual aid ambulances transported 11 patients to South Shore Hospital. There were 42 advanced life support transports and 19 basic life support transports. There were two motor vehicle crashes that required patients to be transported to South Shore Hospital, he said.

Automatic fire alarm activation responses totaled 18 during the month. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for seven responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of 11 responses. There were three responses classed as building fires for the month, one was for a mutual aid building fire, one was an oven fire and one was an electrical malfunction in a ceiling fan.

Police arrested 21 last month

September was a busy month for the Cohasset Police Department, Chief James Hussey said. There were 21 arrests, three for outstanding warrants; two for assault and battery; two for possession of Class D; one for intent to distribute Class D; one for minor transporting liquor; one for violation of a restraining order; one for shoplifting; one for failure to stop for police; one for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle; one for disorderly person; six for protective custody; and one courtesy booking, Chief Hussey said.

During the month of September the police department investigated 11 motor vehicle accidents, two of which resulted in personal injury. There were 167 motor vehicle citations issued, totaling $1,930 in fines. Additionally, there were 34 parking tickets issued, totaling $750 in fines.

Also in the month of September, the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 993 calls for police services, of those 130 were Emergency 911 calls.

In the month of September, there were three reports of breaking and entering, two involving a private residence and one involving a business, he said.

Music still shines like a diamond

Early rock 'n' roll featured at Doo Wop show

By: R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

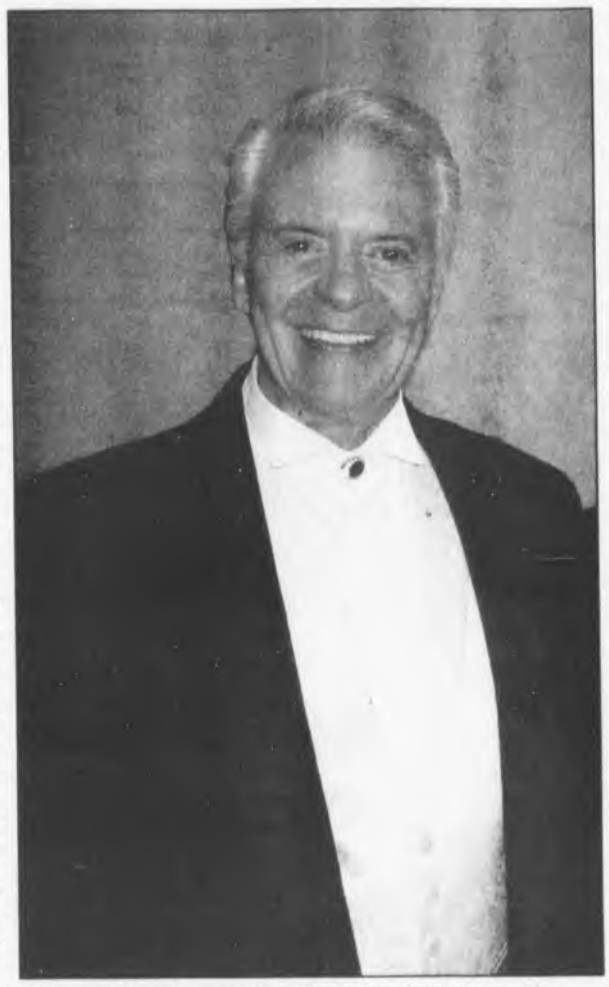
It is hard to say what is more familiar — Dave Somerville's sonorous speaking voice or the names of the many music legends who populate his memories of the early rock and roll era he helped define as lead singer of The Diamonds. Somerville was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1933, but came of age during the 1950s when The Diamonds — Somerville, bass Bill Reed, tenor Ted Kowalski and baritone Phil Levitt — topped the charts with songs like "Why Do Fools Fall in Love," "Little Darlin'," and "Sillhouettes."

The quartet had come together in Toronto in 1953 when Somerville, then a technician at the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, stepped in to replace Stan Fisher for The Diamonds' first paid gig at a local church Christmas party. Two years later, after intensive rehearsals, the group headed to New York City where they landed a high-profile television booking on "The Arthur Godfrey Show." Next, they took work in Cleveland, covering standards and spirituals, in the hopes of coming to the attention of Dr. Bill Randle, a legendary radio disc jockey who discovered Dizzy Gillespie. Randle liked them well enough to get them a meeting with a Mercury Records executive. The Diamonds signed with the label, which had developed a market for "covers." It was Randle who recommended The Diamonds record a cover of Frankie Lymon's "Why Do Fools Fall in Love" in early 1956.

The Diamonds' willingness to cover songs first recorded by black rhythm and blues artists was the result of economic reality. Covers sold well in regions of the country where the original versions wouldn't have been commercially viable. Among their hits in 1956 were "Why Do Fools Fall In Love," "Church Bells May Ring," "Love, Love, Love" and "Ka-King-Dong," originally recorded by The Teenagers, The Willows, The Clovers, and The G-Clefs, respectively. Their biggest hit was a cover of The Gladiolas' "Little Darlin'." The Gladiolas' version dropped the first week of February 1957. Less then two weeks later, The Diamonds' version was released.

That same year, The Diamonds embarked on an adventure that would become the stuff of rock and roll legend.

"The early highlight of our career came in 1957 with 'The Tour of Stars' on which we traveled by Greyhound bus to play 60 consecutive one-nighters. Legendary showman Irvin Feld was the producer, and with us on that tour were Little Richard, Buddy Holly and The Crickets, Buddy Knox, Frankie Lymon and The Teenagers, Eddie Cochran, The Everly Brothers, LaVerne Baker, Fats Domino and a very young Paul Anka," recalls Somerville, who is on the bill for the Doo Wop Hall of Fame and Friends Concert coming to Plymouth Memorial Hall on Nov. 3. "On that tour, it wasn't unusual for us to play to 15 or 20,000 people a night. It was grueling, but it was also unforgettable. I can still vividly recall Chuck Berry borrowing my acoustic guitar and using the bus driver's microphone to lay down the chords of 'Maybelline' long before it became a hit. I can also still remember very clearly listening to the Everly Brothers work on their harmonies. Paul Anka was only 15 and small enough to sleep in the coat rack on the bus."



Diamond Dave Somerville will join The Del Vikings, The Flamingos, The Tune Weavers and Bobby Lewis in a Doo Wop Hall of Fame of America and Friends Concert at Plymouth Memorial Hall, 83 Court St., Plymouth, on Friday, Nov. 3 at 7:30 p.m.

By the end of 1957, the music industry began to accept that original rock and roll was best when performed by the originals artists. The future before them, the Diamonds sought an original song to record. In the late spring of 1957, Chuck Willis' "C.C. Ryder" became the first of a string of rhythm and blues songs based on a dance named the Stroll. Clyde Otis, a songwriter who had with Nancy Lee written a song based on the new dance, approached the Diamonds. "The Stroll" became a huge hit partly thanks to the Dick Clark television series "American Bandstand," which frequently featured The Diamonds. Their popularity with teenagers waned after "The Stroll." Over the next two years, The Diamonds became a popular nightclub attraction in Las Vegas, New York and Chicago. They hit the charts again in 1961 with a version of The Danleers' 1958 hit, "One Summer Night," but soon disbanded.

"I got married in 1961 and left the group. There have been no original members in The Diamonds since then," says Somerville. "I went on to become a folk singer and changed my professional name to David Troy. I worked almost constantly on the early folk scene, but I never had another hit record. In 1967, I joined The Four Preps as their bass singer. The Preps' lead singer, Bruce Belland, and I later formed the duo act of Belland and Somerville. Our act was similar to The Smothers Brothers and we made many television appearances during the years we were together."

In the years since then, Somerville has enjoyed a lucrative career as a songwriter whose credits include music for ABC-TVs "Wide World of Sports" and the theme for the 1980s Lee Majors series "The Fall Guy," the pilot for which was shot at Somerville's home in the Hollywood Hills. His career has gone in many directions over the years, but it has always led him back to the spotlight.

"I've been working for more than 50 years, without ever having a day job," says Somerville with a laugh. "These days, I still sing the hit songs and also tell the stories of the giants with whom I had the great good fortune to work. Performing feels the same to me today as it did in the beginning. I just love to entertain people and connect with them."

Movie review

Eastwood raises 'Flags'

"Flags of Our Fathers" (A)

By: JAMES VERNIERE
FILM CRITIC

On the most amazing streak in modern movie history, Clint Eastwood now brings us "Flags of Our Fathers," and if there is a better or timelier film this year, I haven't seen it.

An adaptation of the 2000 book by James Bradley, honoring his father, John Bradley, and the five other flag-raisers on Iwo Jima in 1944, "Flags of Our Fathers" is a bravely unflinching and sobering portrait of heroism and the mercilessness of war.

It's "Saving Private Ryan" without the sentimentality, ironic since Steven Spielberg is its executive producer.

The film, which has a Japanese-language counterpart directed by Eastwood coming this February, has two story lines. The first is the battle for Iwo Jima, a battle that cost more American lives and caused more casualties than the landing at Normandy.

The second story line involves the publication of the iconic and national morale-boosting photograph of five Marines and one Navy corpsman raising the American flag atop Mount Suribachi.

Eastwood's protagonists are the men of the storied Easy Company. John Bradley (Ryan Phillippe in the performance of his career) is a young Navy corpsman from Wisconsin who finds himself embarking with the Marines for the worst battle in the history of World War II. Ira Hayes (instant Oscar contender Adam Beach) is a proud, withdrawn Pima Indian from Arizona; Franklin Sousley (Joseph Cross), a bantamweight kid barely old enough to shave. Movie-star handsome Rene Gagnon (Jesse Bradford) is the son of a mill-worker mother from Manchester; Ralph "Iggy" Ignatowski (Jamie Bell) is a bundle of adolescent nerves. Their beloved sergeant is 20-something "old man" Mike Strank (Barry Pepper playing a character reminiscent of the John Wayne role in the 1949 film "Sands of Iwo Jima").

Marines and sailors raise the American flag at Iwo Jima, but the story behind the famous photo remains an enigma.

War is hell, and on that level "Flags" is as powerful and deeply shocking as "Saving Private Ryan." Mount Suribachi, a cone at the end of the stretch of blasted ground, lights up like a Christmas tree with guns blazing at Americans landing on black beaches (the battle was shot in Iceland). The rock is a virtual fortress with the Japanese dug deep into its solid interior.

In Eastwood's vision, death takes heroes and ordinary fighting men alike, and survivors are haunted to the ends of their lives by friends lost and the horrors they have witnessed.

In scenes set just before John's death in 1994, he falls down weeping in his home, repeating the words, "Where is he?" The person he refers to is Iggy, who disappeared 50 years earlier in the middle of the worst fighting on Iwo Jima.

Of the six flag-raisers, three are recruited by President Roosevelt to lead a bond drive. The country is bankrupt and might be forced to negotiate a peace with Japan. John, Ira and Rene agree to participate, but the spectacle of re-creating the event that took the lives of so many fellow soldiers — at rallies that are a populist response to Leni Riefenstahl's "Triumph of the Will" — takes a toll, especially on Ira. These scenes also recall John Ford's dictum about fiction being more commercial than the truth, a subject Eastwood explored in "Unforgiven."

Ira, this film's tragic figure, becomes a casualty of the war belatedly, and Beach gives the veteran, also well played by Tony Curtis in a 1961 biopic, tremendous dignity and pathos.

"Flags of Our Fathers" is also completely unflinching in its depiction of the atrocities committed by the Japanese. Its foreign-language counterpart should be fascinating.

Dedicated to Eastwood's longtime production designer Henry Bumstead and casting director Phyllis Huffman, both recently deceased, "Flags of Our Fathers" celebrates our soldiers' heroism and sacrifice, and like all great war movies, it is fiercely antiwar. Eastwood has made it now for a reason.

Rated R. "Flags of Our Fathers" contains graphic war violence and profanity.
